Deadline near on coal contract

Sikeston feeling pressure of slow court ruling

By Ron Porter

The failure of the Missouri Supreme Court to rule on the legality of Sikeston's plans for a 235 megawatt power plant is beginning to worry city officials who must soon decide whether or not to sign a coal contract with Western Fuels, Inc.

Western Fuels is a nonprofit organization that is planning to open a mine in Southern Illinois to supply coal for power plants in Sikeston and Kansas City, Kan.

But the deadline for deciding whether or not Sikeston will participate in the project is drawing close.

"It's getting down to the point where we're going to have to fish or cut bait, and we don't want to do that until we hear from the Supreme court, "E. R. "Dick" Inman said Friday. Inman is director of the director of the Board of Municipal Utilities.

."We don't want to get any more money involved in this thing than we have to," he added.

Signing the contract will obligate the city-owned utility for thousands of dollars, money which would be lost if the court rules against the city.

That poses a dilemma for the city. Should it spend the money and take the chance the court will rule in its favor, or wait and hope Western Fuels does not go ahead without Sikeston.

"We could be (in trouble) if it got too close (to the deadline) ... we could have to wait so long it would have to go by the wayside," Inman said.

Inman said the group has an option on the mine site, but a number of studies have yet to be done to determine the amount of coal there and its quality. Those are some of the resons for the approaching deadline.

The mine is slated to begin producing coal in late 1979 or early 1980, just before the new power plant goes into operation.

The massive power plant will dominate the city's skyline. The boiler plant will be 210 feet high, about 10 feet higher than the smoke stack at the present plant.

The smoke stack at the new plant will be 450 feet high.

The plant will cost $150 million to build. That money includes the cost of land, construction, start up money, legal and financing fees and the effect of inflation over the next several years.

The facility will be located on 455 acres of land north of Compress Road and west of the present steam plant.

Although most of the property was annexed to the city limits Jan. 13, the board has not exercised its option to buy the site. Again, the holdup is with the court.

The coal will be brought to Sikeston by rail and stored in a stock pile that will cover 18 acres, Inman said. The stockpile will hold 600,000 tons of coal.

He added that the site is designed to handle trains up to 100 cars in length and have all 100 cars on the site so they will not be blocking roads, while waiting to unload.

Inman said the city had looked into the feasibility of having the plant built on the Mississippi river, barging the coal to the site, and then transmitting the power back to Sikeston.

One of the big problems with that is using river water for cooling.

"Its just as cheap to use ground water and cooling towers if you have a lot of ground water," he said. "According to the Environmental Protection Agency, you have to go to such elaborate means to build your intake facilities for water supply in the river that it's so expensive you're better off going to cooling towers."

Bringing the coal in by barge would be cheaper, he said, but then he added the coal is coming such a short distance, that it does not make much difference.

Sikeston plans to have the power plant in operation in the early 1980s with the excess power being sold to 11 other communities in Missouri. Those communities will drop off the power grid over the years until aobut the year 2000 when Sikeston will be using all the power the plant generates.

The sale of the power to the other towns is what the court suit is all about.

The suit was brought by Charles Mitchell of Sikeston and Don C. Diven of Trenton and later joined by Arkansas-Missouri Power Co., Sikeston was later joined by REA Electric Cooperatives and the public counsel for the Public Service Commission.

The court must rule on two challenges: Whether or not Sikeston is building the power plant for the benefit of Sikeston or just so it can sell power to other communities and whether or not the cities involved have the authority to obligate themselves to buy power over long periods of time.

City officials have expressed confidence in the outcome of the suit, but apparently were unprepared for the lengthy delay in the court ruling.

The judge, who city officials believe will make the ruling, went on vacation in July and did not return until August., The court went into recess in August and no ruling was issued.

Inman said he hopes the ruling will come early in September.

"If the court would hurry up and act, we could make the decisions and get the thing going," he said.

Carter wants public support on Panama

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter predicts the Senate will ratify his Panama Canal treaty and says he will "go to the nation with a fireside chat" to win approval because "the consequences would be very severe" if the treaty is rejected.

The President said he is concerned about public sentiment against the pact. He called it his personal responsibility to sell the treaty to the American people and to the Senate to lessen the chances of violence in Latin America.

Carter spoke in an interview made public Saturday by the White House. He was questioned Friday by editors and broadcast news directors from across the country who met with him in the Cabinet Room. The interview was one of a continuing series for out-of-town journalists.

The President gave no date or time for his fireside chat. Barry Jagoda, his media and public affairs adviser, said arrangements for the presidential address have not been completed.

"It will not be this week or next," Jagoda said.

The address is expected to be broadcast nationally.

In the interview, the President also said:

—If the United States grants full diplomatic recognition to mainland China "it is undoubtedly going to be well into the future." But Carter said Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance's visit to Peking last week was "very encouraging."

As a result of Vance's meetings with Chinese leaders, Carter said, "I think they understand our position better and we understand theirs."

—There is "a growing impatience" with lack of progress toward peace in the Middle East. "I think that any nation in the Middle East that proved to be intransigent would suffer at least to some degree the condemnation of the rest of the world," Carter warned.

"I have to say there is going to be a great deal of disillusionment on our part in the Middle East and around the world if some progress is not demonstrated within this year."

—He is in no hurry with his other foreign policy initiatives. In addition to relations with China, Carter mentioned strategic arms limitation talks, a comprehensive nuclear test ban, U.S. relations with Cuba and efforts for black majority rule in southern Africa.

"I feel like I have got time," he said. "I don't feel under any constraint ... to act precipitously."

Taylor in serious condition

ST. LOUIS -- Elmer Taylor, 46, of Bell City was reported in serious condition Saturday night in the intensive care unit of Firmin Desloge Hospital at St. Louis University with wounds suffered when he was stabbed.

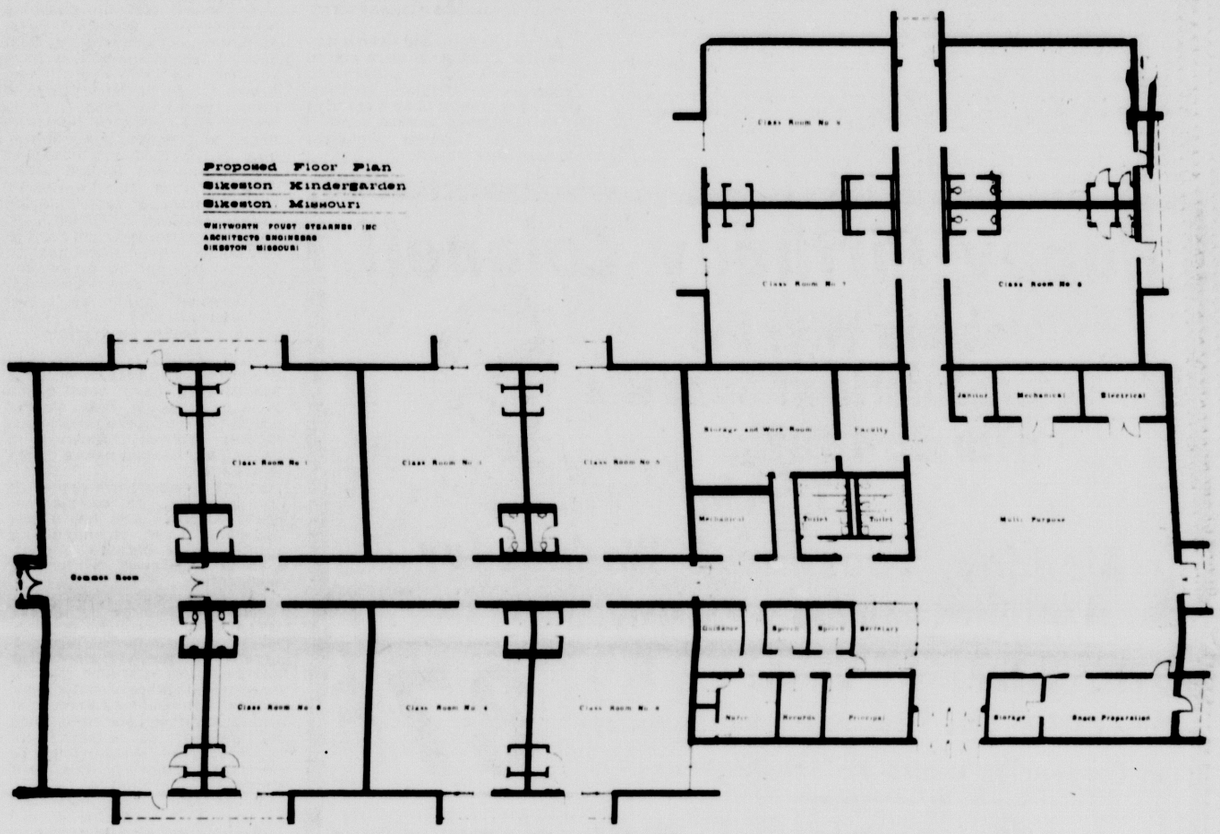
A spokesman for the hospital said no further information could be released Saturday night.

The stabbing incident occurred about 9:30 p.m. Friday in front of the home of Taylor's former wife, Jean Taylor, of 208 Edwards St. in Sikeston, allegedly by his 13-year-old son.

Taylor was found lying face down in the street outside the home, with a hunting knife stuck in his back.

He suffered two stab woulds, noe that reportedly partially severed his spinal cord.

The knife had a blade about six and one-half to seven inches long.



Floor plan drawing of the proposed kindergarten complex.

Board approves architect's drawings of new kindergarten

The architect for the new Kindergarten facility unveiled drawings of the proposed structure during a special Sikeston R-6 School Board meeting at noon Friday.

The board gave its approval of the elevation and floor plan drawings made by Bob Stearnes of Whitworth, Foust and Stearnes, Inc.

Stearnes said the design has been kept simple, avoiding expensive materials that would push up the cost of the structure.

The cost of construction is estimated between $730,000 and $740,000. The board is seeking an $800,000 bond issue on Sept. 20 with the remaining $60,000 to $70,000 going for the cost of building a road and utilities to the site.

Stearnes said the building will be well insulated, especially in the roof, which is the main heat loss area.

He said the heating system to be used has not been decided, but he is leaning toward individual electric heating units for each room.

He said that would mean low maintance costs and high reliability. If one heating unit goes out, the whole school does not have to close down, he said.

He said heat pumps used at other schools in the district sometimes break down and are expensive to repair. They are so complicated that a specially trained repairman must come from St. Louis, to fix them.

The building will sit on the west side of the 12-acre lot. The property is located about 1,200 feet east of North Main Street, along the yet to be extended Salcedo Road.

Stearnes told the borad that wage rates have been set for the building. They range from 4.75 per hour to 8.45 per hour. Stearnes said the rates are high, but reasonably near what the board wanted.

The 22,000-square-foot, concrete block building will house about 400 five-year-olds and will replace an aging wooden structure located on airport property.

The board approved a resolution calling for the bond issue election on Sept. 20, a legalism required by the bonding attorneys. The board had previously agreed on the Sept. 20 election date.

Polling places for the kindergarten bond issue will be: Ward one including Park, Airport and McMullin precincts, at the middle school gym on Tanner Street; ward two, including Allen Precinct at Lee Hunter Elementary School on Baker Lane and Sunset Precinct at Lincoln School, 229 Westate Street; ward three, including Delmar and Clayton precincts at Southwest Elementary School on West Murray Lane; ward four, including Armory Precinct at the Senior High School, 200 Pine st. and Broadway Precinct at Southeast Elementary School on Ables Road.

In Miner, votes will be cast at Miner Town Hall. In Morehouse, balloting will be at the high school building for ward one, ward two and Salcedo precincts.

In other action, the board raised the insurance on school buildings by $2 million. The buildings have been insured for $10 million.

Keith Ziegenhorn of Ziegenhorn Insurance, which handles the insurance, said replacement costs have gone up by about $5 per square foot over the past year.

District buildings were underinsured by 20 to 25 per cent, he said.

The board agreed to allow the sale of excess property accumulated over the past few years by the school system.

The property, 10 pieces of equipment, most of which have been in storage, include a milling machine and electronic testing equipment.

The money realized from the sale will go to upgrading of existing equipment.

4 injured in SeMo accidents

Four persons received minor injuries in two area traffic accidents Friday and Saturday, the highway patrol said Saturday night.

Three persons received minor injuries in a two-vehicle accident at 1:40 p.m. Friday on Route AA, a half mile north of Brosley.

The accident occurred when an eastbound pickup truck driven by Bonnie Norden, 37, of Brosley failed to yield the right-of-way and collided with a northbound car driven by Joanne Wyrick Dabbs, 42, or Brosley.

The driver of the Norden truck and her son, Michael, 13, were taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff with minor injuries. The driver of the Dabbs car was

CB, tape player and rings stolen

A Citizens Ban Radio, a tape player and some rings were among items reported stolen to Sikeston police Friday.

Wilma Jean Lett of Morley told officers that a CB radio, valued at $169, was taken from her car between 5 and 9 p.m. Friday, while her car was parked at the Grecian Steak House, 531 Greer. Entry to the car was reported to have been gained by forcing the passenger door open.

A tape player, valued at $50, was reported taken from a garage at 810 Gulf St., about 6 p.m. Friday, while the owner was out delivering a car.

Marie Copeland, 842 Cambridge, told police that three rings, valued at $225, were taken from her residence between Aug. 20 and 26. A former house guest is being sought for questioning in the matter, police reports said.

Landers in stable condition

Samuel Landers, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Landers of Taleapoosa, was reported in stable condition Saturday night in the intensive care unit of Delta Memorial Community Hospital at Sikeston.

Landers underwent surgery Friday morning, following an accident at 8:05 a.m. Friday at the Landers farm, two miles south of Taleapoosa.

Landers was apparently unloading corn out of a truck into an auger-type elevator when the grain auger fell on him.

Ag department favors letting meat be mechanically deboned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department intends to propose once more that meat processors be allowed to add bits of bone and odd scraps of meat to hot dogs and other processed food.

Almost a year ago, after consumer groups obtained a court decision, USDA canceled its interim approval for the use of "mechanically deboned meat" in food products and withdrew plans for changes in federal regulations to allow the practice on a permanent basis.

But a 12-member panel of government experts has completed a study of mechanical deboning and, for the most part, has given its approval for the process to be resumed.

Asst. Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman, who oversees USDA food and consumer programs, said in an interview that the new proposed rules are being drafted and probably will be announced next month.

Department officials had argued last year that mechanical deboning allowed the salvage of much beef and pork attached to neck bones, ribs and other parts of cattle and hog carcasses which otherwise would end up on the garbage heap.

Up to one billion pounds of additional meat could be saved annually by the process and thus help ease family food bills, they said.

But critics said the process — basically the practice of grinding up meat and bones and forcing the mixtures through sieves — resulted in so much finely ground bone in the product that it raised questions as to its potential effect on human health.

Ms. Foreman, who prefers the title, said the public will be given ample opportunity to comment on the renewed proposal and that no final decision on the use of mechanically deboned meat will be made until all views are considered.

"We think that we have largely resolved most of the issues that were raised previously," she said. "But I expect a little hell from all sides."

The meat industry wants the process because it means more can be salvaged from carcasses of cattle and hogs slaughtered for the consumer market. Some consumer groups, however, still have reservations.

Dr. Sidney Wolfe of the Public Citizens' Health Research Group, initially set up by consumer advocate Ralph Nader, said Saturday that he had not read the entire report.

CIRCUIT COURT

CHARLESTON -- Two men received prison sentences handed down in Mississippi County Circuit Court Friday by Judge Marshall Craig, and three others were placed on supervised probation.

Kid Jackson of Charleston was given concurrent three-year sentences on amended charges of second degree burglary and stealing, reduced from armed robbery. Probation on the charges, stemming from the theft of $12 March 10 from George Roach with a .25-caliber pistol, was denied. Jackson entered a guilty plea to the amended charges July 27.

Gary Thurmond Tatum of East Prairie was sentenced to concurrent five-year terms in custody of the state Department of Corrections on burglary and stealing charges. Probation for Tatum, who pleaded guilty to entering the Thurman Moriarity home at East Prairie on April 23, was denied. He was given credit for 93 days served in jail.

Three-year probation was given Michael Ray Weems of rural Charleston following a stay on a three-year prison sentence for stealing. Weems, who pleaded guilty to stealing by deceit in connection with taking a check on May 6 from Cook Grain Co. for 33,330 gross pounds of soybeans which did not exist, was ordered to make restitution of $8,433.74 to Cook Grain Co. within 30 days.

Junior Weems of East Prairie pleaded not guilty to a stealing by deceit charge, and trial was set for Sept. 21.

Bobby Lee Ware and Ronnie Kay Bostic of Charleston were placed on three-year supervised probation on burglary charges, stemming from a June 6 break-in at the Alberteen Johnson home in Charleston. Two-year sentences for each were stayed.

Barry Cleaves of Charleston entered a voluntary plea of guilty to second-degree burglary and stealing (amended from armed robbery), and his oral application for probation was taken under advisement. Cleaves is accused of taking $15 from Luther Dunn March 10 and is to report back to Circuit Court Sept. 13.

Tyrone Price was sentenced to one year in Mississippi County jail on a charge of take, steal and carry away (reduced from armed robbery). The charge was filed in connection with a $647 robbery Nov. 12, 1975 from Kenneth Vernon Lawrence at a Quick-Sak store in Sikeston.

Trial for William Graham, charged with arson in a change of venue case from Scott County, was set for Oct. 12. Graham is accused of setting fire March 30 to a mobile home on Route ZZ in Scott County, owned by Elizabeth Northington.

Rocky Lane Allcock pleaded guilty to a charge of malicious destruction (reduced from attempted burglary), and received a six-month jail sentence with credit for 33 days. Allcock pleaded guilty to breaking a window July 1 at Slaten's Standard Station at Charleston.

Changes of venue to Scott County were granted George Johnson, charged with assault with intent to kill and selling a contro a controlled substance. Johnson is accused of assaulting Soloman Hatchett April 23 with a .30-caliber rifle and selling heroin to David Smith at Charleston on Sept. 7, 1976.

Insulation, lumber prices rise sharply

WASHINGTON (AP) — A dramatic rise in the prices of lumber and insulation in recent weeks will increase the cost of the average new house $700 to $1,500, housing secretary Patricia Harris said today.

Mrs. Harris said that since July 1 lumber prices have gone up 12 to 28 per cent, depending on the region, and insulation prices have risen between 5 and 15 per cent.

She told a news conference she has asked the Council on Wage and Price Stability "to determine the causes and implications of the rise in lumber prices."

She said that the higher lumber prices and shortages of insulation may lead to time-consuming delays in housing construction and higher consumer prices.

"It is our goal to make the standard home once again affordable to the average American family," she said.

Mrs. Harris said that in the past 11 years, housing costs have increased 89 per cent, while family income has gone up only 47 per cent.

She said the average cost of a new house in the first quarter of this year was $51,300. She said the rising lumber and insulation prices alone could boost it up to $52,000 or more.

Todays News In Brief

Hormel to lay off 325

AUSTIN, Minn. (AP) — An official of Geo. A. Hormel & Co. announced Saturday that layoff notices, which cannot take effect for 52 weeks, will be sent to 325 employes at the Austin plant.

W. R. Hunter, general manager of the plant, said the termination notices will be issued by Sept. 10, but cannot take effect for one year under terms of the union contract with Local P-9, Amalgamated Meatcutters and Butchers Workmen of North America.

Local P-9 has about 2,200 members while total employment at the Austin meat packing plant is about 2,600.

Hunter said the plant currently has a surplus number of employes based on present production levels. He said the action to reduce the workforce had been deferred pending the outcome of recent contract talks with the union concerning the possibility of building a new plant in the southern Minnesota city of 27,000 persons.

Union members voted unanimously July 27 to reject the proposed eight-year contract, which eliminates incentive pay and contains a no-strike provision.

"With the rejection of the company's offer by Local P-9, it is regretable that we must now adjust the workforce to the level of production which our plant will support," Hunter said.

"Disproportionate energy consumption and excessive unit production costs further add to the necessity of reducing the production level of the Austin plant," he said.

The layoffs are on the seniority basis and include workers hired after June 1968. This includes Richard Arnold, Local P-9 president whose term expires in November. He was hired in February 1969.

Two members of the eightmember union executive board, Lynn Renville and Michael Ruzek, also will be laid off.

The company announcement came one day after union leaders from 14 Hormel plants around the country wound up a two-day meeting in Austin, pledging support for Local P-9 members.

"The Hormel locals are now working out the details of an appropriate response to the company threat," said a statement issued by the union leaders.

Arnold called for a "fresh start" in negotiations and indicated that union leaders would not accept the elimination of incentive pay, as they did in earlier bargaining.

Judgment reversed

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A $3.4 million judgment against Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith has been reversed by a three-judge panel of the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The panel ruled in a 2-1 decision Friday that the stock-brokerage firm, the nation's largest, and three of its officers did not have to pay the damages to heirs of the founder of the firm's St. Louis office.

A federal judge had ordered the judgment after the executor of the estate of Kenneth H. Bitting accused Merrill Lynch of defrauding Bitting's heirs. The appeals court ordered the case dismissed.

Christians vow long fight

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Right-wing Christian leaders said Saturday their war with Palestinian guerrillas in southern Lebanon will go on until the Palestinians are driven out.

The Christian leaders criticized the Syrian-dominated Arab peacekeeping force for failing to invade and control the Palestinian refugee camps where they say the guerrillas have their bases.

"Unless the aliens withdraw, the tragic, bloody events in the south will not end," the Christian leaders said in a statement issued at the end of a two-day meeting in Ehden, 40 miles north of Beirut.

U.S. Embassy burns

MOSCOW (AP) — Officials checked safes and secret files in sensitive areas of the U.S. Embassy on Saturday after a stubborn blaze raged through the top three floors of the 10-story building.

Some embassy employes driven out of their apartments in the north and south wings by the fire Friday night were allowed to return by midday Saturday.

But the central section of the building, with offices and some residences, remained closed, and electricity and gas remained off.

Embassy officials said the fire apparently was ignited by an electrical fault, reportedly in an eighth-floor press and cultural-affairs office. Also heavily damaged were the offices of the economic and commercial section.

Young pushes peace plan

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — Ambassador Andrew Young and British Foreign Secretary David Owen, "still in business" despite tough opposition from both black and white Africans, met with guerrilla leaders and their chief backers Saturday to try to sell a new peace plan for Rhodesia.

At the same time, the heads of the region's two white-minority governments, Prime Ministers Ian Smith of Rhodesia and John Vorster of South Africa, met in Pretoria, South Africa, to study the plan.

Owen and Young, the black American U.N. ambassador, were expected to go to Rhodesia later this week to meet with Smith. Young would be the highest-ranking American to visit Rhodesia in years.

The two face an uphill task on their current mission. Both sides have attacked a key element of their plan for blackmajority rule in Rhodesia — a reported proposal that the Rhodesian armed forces be disbanded and black nationalist guerrillas be disarmed during the transition.

Corruption hits inner circles

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Following the time-tested sleuthing technique of "follow the money," Indian investigators claim to be unravelling an intricate pattern of alleged embezzlement, fraud, extortion and abuse of authority by the inner circle of former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

In the past two weeks, authorities have arrested two of Mrs. Gandhi's former Cabinet ministers — her former private secretary and one of her family's most trusted aides on charges of official corruption.

Mrs. Gandhi's 30-year-old son Sanjay, whose political and financial dealings are under investigation by a special government commission, has already been implicated in at least a half dozen legal cases, but so far he has not been arrested. Investigators acknowledge the cases filed against Sanjay to date are relatively minor.

Government sources say the investigations have also touched Mrs. Gandhi herself, but no charges have been formally lodged against the 59-year-old Mrs. Gandhi who governed India for 11 years.

"The cases against Mrs. Gandhi and Sanjay have got to be ironclad," one highly placed government source said. "There can be no mistakes."

The Indian press, by and large, has been giving sober front-page coverage to the investigations and to the continuing revelations about what happened during Mrs. Gandhi's 21-month authoritarian "national emergency" when the press was under rigid censorship.

Mrs. Gandhi, Sanjay, and her Congress party all allege that the investigations are part of a "political vendetta" by Prime Minister Morarji Desai's new government and call the charges baseless.

Jobless rate climbs again

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Statewide unemployment continued to climb in July, rising another .3 of a percentage point over the jobless rate a month earlier, the state Divison of Employment Security said today.

The number of Missourians without jobs last month hit 121,-7000, representing 5.6 per cent of the state's workforce.

Employment remained above 2 million persons, but only slightly, and division Director Joseph Dietrich attributed the rise of the jobless rate to seasonal losses in nonmanufacturing jobs.

Of the state's five major metropolitan areas, only Springfield and Columbia recorded unemployment rates below the statewide average. St. Louis placed unemployment at 5.7 per cent, Kansas City at 6.3 per cent and St. Joseph at 6.6 per cent.

Teen draws 15-year term

Judge Robert Russell of Johnson County Circuit Court imposed the sentence on Timothy Lee Green, 17.

Green and Michael F. Reedy, 20, of Knob Noster, were charged with robbing the store at knifepoint. Two robbers escaped with more than $400, but Green and Reedy were arrested later by the Johnson County sheriff and the money was recovered.

Reedy was given a 10-year suspended sentence and placed on probation for five years Wednesday.

Postal Service taking 2nd look at Saturday service

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service, which seemed ready to end Saturday mail deliveries a few months ago, is taking another look at whether the public would accept the cutback.

Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar said Thursday that before any decision is made to reduce service, "We intend to do a comprehensive study of what the public wishes."

The Postal Service still is considering the cutback, but will delay its decision until a new public opinion survey is completed, Bailar said.

Last spring, the Commission on Postal Service recommended that Saturday service be eliminated, saving the financially troubled Postal Service an estimated $400 million a year.

Bailar praised the study group at the time and said the service was considering the move.

Then, in late June, the agency put the proposal on its agenda for a July meeting of the Postal Service's governing board. But when the meeting was held, the item was passed over.

Bailar's speech to a convention of the National League of Postmasters in San Juan, Puerto Rico, was the first public explanation of the delay.

A survey conducted by the A.C. Nielsen polling organization for the study commission found 79 per cent of the public would be willing to forego the sixth delivery day if it would help hold down postal rates.

Dear Sir:
The enclosed news clipping appeared in the Jefferson City newspaper yesterday.

I think this matter is of concern to many of our constituents, as well, so I am taking the liberty of sending this information to you. Representative Fred DeField of Charleston and I also signed this letter which should now be in the hands of our Congressional leaders for consideration when they are asked to vote on this treaty.

Sincerely,
Fred EuGene Copeland

Legislators urge treaty opposition

More than 90 members of the Missouri House of Representatives have signed a letter, urging Missouri's two senators to "vote" against any treaty that lessens America's sovereignty" over the Panama Canal.

The letter to Sen. Thomas Eagleton and Sen. John Danforth says the proposed treaty to grant control of the canal to Panama has created a situation of utmost gravity, affecting the security of the United States and of its allies in the free world.

"We hope you will promptly, vigorously and publicly reassure us of your position in opposition to the proposed Panama Treaty," says the letter which was drafted by Rep. Paul Buseik, R-Springfield.

Five Central Missouri representatives signed the letter, including Rep. Joe Holt, D-Fulton; Rep. Flavel Butts, R-Camdenton; Rep. Carrol McCubbin, R-Eldon; Rep. Norbert Plassmeyer, R-Freeburg; Rep. Harold Reisch, R-Columbia; and Rep. James Strong, R-Jefferson City.

Buseik, a Springfield pediatrician, said most of the legislators were more than willing to sign the letter. He collected the signatures in less than three hours while the representatives were attending the special session of the General Assembly on Monday and Tuesday.

Dr. Busiek, who says he has information which indicates that the Soviet Union is pushing for Panamanian control of the canal, describes the proposed treaty as "absurd."

The letter, he adds, hopefully will let the two senators "know how the state legislature and the people of Missouri feel about the treaty."

Dear Sir,

What ever happened to good clean country music? I for one was not sittin' in the middle of the road of life, playin' both ends against the middle. I called a radio station last week for a clean country song by a clean country artist, it was never played. How's that for a country radio station? I can only assume that I'm country and they're whatever it is they want to call it.

I'm just plain country, now before anybody pops his buttons off laughin', let me tell you a bit about being country or better yet visit your local farmer. He doesn't lay up in the sun to get a tan, he's herdin' a tractor all day. While you're under an air-conditioner playin' pool with the boys, He's feedin' the cattle that one day ends up as a steak on your table. He marches thru dusty fields in the hot sun, checking crops that benefit all mankind.

During planting and gathering seasons, he's lucky to get to church on Sunday but he makes sure you get that food. His blue jeans are faded, his face is red but a world of hungry mouths, his rough hands have fed. The clothes that have covered your body so long, I guess you've forgotten, it's cotton he's grown.

So please Mr D.J., don't cut him out of the world of entertainment. Tomorrow after you've had your ham and eggs, go down to the radio station, get under that air-conditioner and give him a true country song. If it wasn't for the poor boy a lot would go undone, the plow would never furrow or the mill would never run. There wouldn't be no taters, there wouldn't be no beans, the rich would all be poor boys in faded old blue jeans.

Evelyn Booker

P.S.
I'm thinking about trading my radio in for a C.B. By the way sir, what's next on country stations, "Disco Duck?"

Dexter doctor recalls battles to control Bootheel epidemics

Dexter – The battle 40 years ago to bring syphilis under control in the Missouri Bootheel was hardly less than the war on the dreaded mosquito a generation earlier. There's a physician in Dexter who remembers.

"We didn't have penicillin, just shot them full of neosrapharmine and bismuth. Some of them maybe didn't want to be treated, so we'd head off down there, hit 'em over the head and fix 'em up."

Maybe his bark is worse than his bite. Or, maybe it's not. But the chances are Dr. Theodore Lamar Waddle won't tell.

'Doc' Waddle, who's been practicing medicine in Dexter for nearly 40 years,is his own man - he sets his own pace, he sets his own style and at 74 years old he still has his small office open five days a week.

The doctor might talk a little rough ("Hell, I even look a little rough!") but there's a sparkle in his eyes and the understanding and knowledge that's brought on by nearly a half-century of helping people.

When the young doctor, fresh from medical studies at Louisiana State University, set up practice here in 1938, he was no stranger to Dexter - or Southeast Missouri.

Waddle, along with a team of other doctors, nurses and engineers, came to Dexter in early 1937 after a winter flood devastated a large part of Southeast Missouri.

"We had small pox epidemics in Bernie, and diarrhea and other diseases and health problems real bad.

"The program was federally-funded but operated under the Missouri Department of health as a demonstration unit."

Before coming to Dexter with the health unit, Waddle had practiced in Holden.

"That was right in the middle of the Dust Bowl days.

"I can remember seeing pitchforks with the handles eaten half away by grasshoppers. There wasn't even a leaf on a tree; poeple were buying what little water they could get.

"I damn-near starved to death up there. I didn't collect from people and finally left town with thousands on my books and 200 bucks in my pocket."

Waddle remembers those days.

He recalls a meeting of area doctors when he opened his Dexter practice.

"They talked about lots of things, including problems in collecting.

"One doctor said he'd really been working on his accounts and was now collecting 80 per cent.

"Another doctor was shocked, saying he was only getting 60 per cent.

"I sat there and kept my mouth shut...I was getting 98.3 per cent," Waddle said.

But Doc Waddle has never earned 6-figure incomes or sought "big money."

He is serious about health care and caring for people and says "We've got the best health care in the world...period."

Dr. Waddle was born near Springfield, Mo., and worked some with his father, who was a printer and at one time edited a rural weekly near the Kansas-Missouri border.

"My father wouldn't let me learn how to set type...said I needed to learn something else."

While waiting to get into medical school Waddle tried his had at teaching. He was high school principal at Drexel for two years.

But medical school was still his goal. After the two-year medical program at the University of Missouri he studied at L. S. U., Johns Hopkins and Michigan University.

Today, at age 74, Waddle has "slowed down a little." His clinic is open 17 hours a week.

What did the doctor seek from life?

"A satisfying way of existence.

"And I think I've done that, as well as I could have.

"I've made a lot of enemies over the years and I've never been afraid to tangle with anybody - and I'm still not.

"But I've made a lot of close friends, helped a lot of people and saved a few lives along the way.

"Don't know what else anybody could want."

Some guys get hooked by urge to build plane

NEW BRIGHTON, Pa. — Chuck Paton is building a helicopter he doesn't know how to fly, but his fellow aviation club members aren't worried about his future as a pilot.

For the past three years, the 47-year-old laboratory supervisor at Westinghouse Electric Corp. has spent most of his evening and weekend hours patiently working on his chopper.

"It's not unusual for one of our men to finish a plane before learning how to fly," said Dick Funkhouser of nearby Coraopolis, a long-time member of the Experimental Aircraft Association's Beaver Valley chapter.

"Some guys just have the urge to build a plane."

Paton, a chapter member for the past several years, said he first saw an ad for a helicopter kit in an aircraft trade magazine.

"When I saw what the finished product looked like at an air show, I was hooked," he recalled.

Paton's Rotor Way Scorpion, which cost about $9,000, is nearly complete outside the garage of his Beaver County home. It is one of about a dozen chapter projects now under way.

Funkhouser is constructing a World War I Sopwith Pup biplane from wood he hand-picked from a local lumberyard. Earl Wilderoder of Beaver Falls is building a Great Lakes biplane. Chapter vice president Dick Hall of Aliquippa is at work on a single-seater Baby Ace he designed himself.

Most of the members, like Paton, were trained in the service, but the rest of their backgrounds are varied.

"We've got everything from bankers to steelworkers to engineers in our club," Funkhouser said. "We've got guys who never finished high school and we've got guys with masters degrees. Our common interest is that we want to build aircraft."

Hall, a licensed aircraft mechanic who supervises U.S. Steel's bulk mail center in Pittsburgh, has built several planes for others. His Sopwith Pup is only the second plane he intended to build for himself.

"I built a regular-sized Baby Ace in 1955, but it was too small for my long legs," Hall said with a laugh. "This time I decided to custom build the whole thing myself to make sure it was the right fit."

"I did my first welding and painting jobs on this helicopter," Paton said with a craftman's pride. "For a while there were little flecks of foul-smelling brown dust all over the house when I was sanding down the first coat of paint."

Convicted slayer of Hanafi children dies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ronald Harvey sported a grey mink cap with a feather and drove fancy cars with television sets inside. He also murdered children.

The FBI once thought Harvey dead until an anonymous tipster in December 1973 spotted him cruising down a Philadelphia street in a baby blue Cadillac, mink cap, leather coat and red check pants.

He was arrested three months later by FBI agents in Chicago and held under $5.5 million bail in connection with the January 1973 slayings of five Hanafi Muslim children and two adults in Washington, D.C.

Harvey was convicted of murder in all seven deaths and later convicted of murdering former Camden, N.J., mayoral candidate Major B. Coxson and the teen-age daughter of Coxson's common-law wife.

Harvey, 37, was serving a total of nine terms of life imprisonment when he died of heart failure Sunday at the U.S. Bureau of Corrections Hospital in Springfield, Mo.

He had been flown by air ambulance in June from the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta to the hospital where his condition deteriorated until death, Charles James, a spokesman for the hospital, said in a telephone interview.

Harvey was from Philadelphia, but no one had claimed Harvey's body as of Tuesday night, said James. Burial arrangements were incomplete.

The Hanafi slayings were the largest mass murder in Washington history. The Coxson slayings were equally gruesome.

Coxson was found bound and shot three times in the head in 1974 in his plush Cherry Hill, N.J., home. Lita Luby Coxson, 16, was shot once in the head and died four days later, police said.

Coxson's common-law wife, Lois, was blinded by a bullet in the attack. Her 15-year-old son, Toro, was shot and blinded in one eye. A 13-year-old son fled the house and called police.

The Washington massacre took place in the Hanafis' headquarters, a house donated to the sect by fellow Hanafi and Los Angeles Lakers basketball star Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

Hanafi leader Hamaas Abdul Khaalis, father of six of the seven victims, demanded that Harvey and others be turned over to his men for retribution last March when a group of Hanafis terrorized Washington with their occupation of several office buildings.

Philadelphia police records indicate Harvey and a handful of his contemporaries had a history of terrorizing black businessmen in a type of protection racket.

Harvey once was described by a Philadelphia prosecutor as "Mr. Enforcer."

Harvey smiled and yawned in the courtroom when convicted of the Hanafi murders, but his demeanor had changed when he came to trial in Camden this summer for the Coxson slaying.

Weakened by heart and stomach problems, he was brought into the Camden courtroom on a stretcher June 7 for sentencing.

"You look pathetic," Camden County Judge Leon A. Wingate told Harvey, "but I don't think you looked pathetic when the crime occurred."

Mrs. Partin to head Vanduser CF drive

VANDUSER -- Radio-TV personality Jack Buck, chairman of the Gateway Chapter, Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, has appointed Mrs. Bill Partin 1977 Breath of Life Chairman of Vanduser.

In accepting the chairmanship, Mrs. Partin expressed hopes for the annual fund raising drive that begins in Vanduser with a door-to-door march in September.

"Through volunteer efforts and increased community support, we may one day realize a future in which children no longer suffer from lung-damaging diseases, the most serious of which is cystic fibrosis," she said.

Mrs. Partin underscored her remarks by explaining that "the life expectancy of CF children has increased year by year and we have every hope that scientists will find a control or cure for cystic fibrosis. A major purpose of the CF Foundation is to conquer this tragic inherited disease which occurs once in every 1,600 live births in the United States and is a leading genetic killer of children."

Through volunteer efforts across the country, the Breath of Life Campaign supports in addition to research a network of over 125 Cystic Fibrosis Centers specializing in diagnostic and treatment services for children with CF and other lung-damaging diseases, including asthma, Bronchiectasis, childhood emphysema and chronic bronchitis and public health education programs to alert parents to the symptoms of lung-damaging diseases in their children, and to seek treatments which can improve their children's lives.

Mrs. Epy heads MH campaign

MATTHEWS – Mrs. Charles Eby is chairman of the Mental Health Association campaign this year in Matthews.

Mrs. Eby will organize Bellringer volunteers to go house-to-house during September, Mental Health Month in Matthews.

All proceeds from the campaign will benefit the Mental Health Association in Missouri, a voluntary citizens' organization not state or federally funded.

The Mental Health Association is a nationwide organization dedicated to improving and expanding care and treatment for the mentally ill and handicapped. Research into the causes of mental illness is only one of the volunteer support activities. Unpaid volunteers provide help to patients in hospitals, and carry out extensive public education programs.

"Mental illness affects one out of ten people." In Missouri, then, over 490,000 people will need services for mental or emotional problems at some point in their lives.

One of the primary goals of the Mental Health Association is to see that people are served in their own community, when they need help.

The Association must rely on public support to accomplish its goals since it receives no government funding.

Almost 88 per cent of all intercity passenger miles were traveled by private motor vehicle in 1974.

Sikeston Head Start to enroll

The Sikeston Head Start Center, Airport Drive, will enroll handicapped and non-handicapped children for the 1977-78 school year next Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. each day.

Parents who wish to enroll their children ages 3-5 should bring with them a copy of child's birth certificate, Medicaid number, shot record and verification of income.

Head Start personnel are encouraging enrollment of handicapped children who will be provided with necessary services as needed.

In the capital

JEFFERSON CITY — A Kansas City consulting firm has given officials in mid-Missouri the green light for further study of two proposed coal gasification plants.

The two gasification plants, which the report says would be able to produce electricity and synthetic gas, are planned for the Green Hills area of north central Missouri and a point midway between Kansas City and St. Louis.

A report by Lutz, Daily and Brain, an Overland Park, Kan., consulting firm, said that although there has been "limited coal gasification experience," the outlook for the proposed Missouri facilities is good.

The plants could be in operation by 1982 if officials went ahead with them on schedule, according to the report.

The document listed five possible sites for the plants, two in the Green Hills area and three in mid-Missouri.

Tinnin presented Mule Skinner plaque

State Sen. Nelson B. Tinnin of Hornersville, 25th District, was awarded the Missouri Mule Skinner's Plaque by Brig. Gen. Hal F. Robertson, Deputy Commander, Missouri Army National Guard, in ceremonies in Cape Girardeau on Aug. 21. The citation presented with the plaque reads as follows: Citation for The Missouri Mule Skinner's Plaque, "in recognition of outstanding support of the Missouri National Guard, the Missouri Mule Skinner's Plaque is hereby presented to Sen. Nelson B. Tinnin, Senator 25th District. During his long and distinguished career, Sen. Tinnin has given unselfishly of his time to assist the Missouri National Guard in critical legislative action, through difficult reorganizations which required action on State and local levels and in many other endeavors to include new armory construction thereby enhancing the defense posture of our nation and of the Missouri Army National Guard." Sen. Tinnin has been instrumental in supporting the Missouri Army National Guard in legislation and funding.

'Mighty Mo's' historic decks now echo to tourist footfalls

BREMERTON, Wash. (AP) — The decks of victory and vanquishment where America accepted Japan's unconditional surrender almost 32 years ago today echo the footfalls of tourists.

Her giant guns are plugged. Dehumidifiers suck moisture from her insides 24 hours a day. Her hatches are sealed against the air.

On a warm weekend, as many as 4,000 tourists climb the gangplank and step aboard the ship. They walk the sloping teak deck to the bow and gaze at jellyfish peacefully undulating in the water far below. Youngsters are propped by parents on the mute cannons for snapshots.

As new generations come to the ship, many recall The War only from books.

"Which war?" a teen-ager recently asked his mother, who had just explained that Gen. Douglas MacArthur "signed the papers, right here, to end the war."

Seaman Jose Austria, a 27-year-old from Bayamaeng, The Philippines, stands by the gangway as guide in his white summer shirt, dark pants and billed Navy cap.

"People say to me, 'How deep is the water here?' They say, 'What war was this in?' 'What are these turrets on the front of the boat?'

"Not so many people ask anything about her history. The Big Mo has a great history."

At 0900 on Sept. 2, 1945, in Tokyo Bay, the Japanse and Americans stopped the war with a surrender ceremony on her deck. A plaque marks the spot.

The ship was commissioned June 11, 1944, late in the war, but fired her guns at Iwo Jima, Okinawa and the Japanese mainland on the way to her rendevous with history in Tokyo.

"The older people know what it stands for," said Austria. "The kids, they are only curious. Mostly they care about the humidity inside the ship and that kind of stuff.

Many of them come on board and they say, 'Oh, yes, this is the ship where they made the movie.'"

The case of the topless waitress

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Myron operated a restaurant where his customers could eat dirt cheap -- but they weren't interested in eating dirt. What they were interested in was watching his topless waitresses parade back and forth. And while his waitresses attracted a great number of diners, they also attracted the authorities, with the result that Myron was given a summons for violating an ordinance that prohibited restaurants from providing entertainment without a license.

"Somebody's made a boo-boo," protested Myron in court. "I've never provided any entertainment in my restaurant. I have no performer and none of my waitresses sing, dance or even do card tricks. All they do is dish out the food and work very hard. Consequently, I didn't need any entertainment license."

"While he may not employ performers as such," responded a local official, "when Myron's shapely waitresses bounced by, they were as entertaining as any act in town. That's why he needed a license."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict Myron of providing entertainment without a license?

This is how the judge ruled: YES. The judge held that entertainment is defined as a pleasant occupation of the senses. And, concluded the judge, Myron's bare-chested damsels occupied the senses of his customers with sufficient apparent pleasure so as to constitute the prohibited entertainment without a license.

Handyman may have run sex school for children

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Wayne Thomas Heacock is a neighborhood Pied Piper, adored by all the children, approved of by their parents.

Today, the 34-year-old handyman is charged with criminal sexual conduct. Investigators believe that for 20 years he ran a "sex school" for children that "graduated" almost 200 youngsters and awarded prizes for performance.

Heacock is in the Oakland County jail under $125,000 bond. He pleaded innocent at his district court arraignment Wednesday on a five-count charge of first-degree criminal sexual conduct with a 9-year-old boy. Heacock requested a court-appointed attorney.

Describing the case as "probably the largest child molesting incident in the history of this office," Oakland County Prosecutor L. Brooks Patterson said handwritten diaries found in Heacock's home detailed sexual encounters with youngsters, mainly boys. The diaries dated back to 1957.

The prosecutor said no evidence has linked Heacock to the recent sex murders of several children in Oakland County, but the special task force investigating the murders would examine material seized at Heacock's home.

Patterson said investigators confiscated tape recordings, movies and photographs. Heacock also surrendered at least two boxes of documents in addition to the diaries, Patterson said.

He said the diaries and other documents mentioned the operation of a secret group called "The IC Club," in which youngsters were invited to participate in sexual acts.

It was run like a school, Patterson said, with prospective students answering a 40-question entrance exam and promising to be Heacock's best friend and never to tell anyone about the club's activities.

Patterson said there were apparent progressions up the ladder similar to grades in school, with pupils advancing from one sexual act to another.

When a younvster accumulated a certain number of points, he was given a prize, which in one case was a 10-speed bicycle, the prosecutor said.

The investigation was launched after a girlfriend of a boarder in Heacock's home stumbled onto one of the diaries.

People in Heacock's working-class neighborhood said they don't believe the charges.

"I've known him for almost four years," said Floyd Young, a neighbor. "I just don't believe it. I know Tom. I know what he stands for. This is bound to be false."

Commission considers bill of rights for phone users

By RENEE HOLDER
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — A consumer Bill of Rights for telephone customers is being considered by the Missouri Public Service Commission.

The revised billing practices for telephone companies would provide more information to customers about service and billing and would standardize the billing practices of all Missouri telephone companies.

The commission has held four hearings on the revisions over the past three months in different areas of the state.

The proposed date that the companies would have to comply with the standards is Dec. 31. A similar revision of billing practices for electric, gas and water utilities was adopted by the commission in 1975 but legal appeals by the utilities have prevented them from going into effect.

The commission plans to revise the billing practices of all utilities as part of its "Blueprint for Action" designed in the fall of 1975.

Some of the major requirements in the proposed billing standards for telephone companies are:

—A customer applying for service would have to be informed by the company of the cheapest rate available.

—Bills would have to itemize charges for basic service, toll charges, taxes and franchise fees and show the due date. Bills also would have to carry a telephone number customers could call to make inquiries of the company.

—Deposits could not be required unless a customer had been delinquent in paying telephone bills.

—If a deposit were required, it could not exceed an amount equal to two months' service charges. The deposit would have to be refunded in 12 months if the customer's payment record is satisfactory.

—Within two minutes of accepting a telephone inquiry and three minutes of a visit, the companies would have to have personnel available to handle the matter.

—Companies would have to issue a pamphlet describing the rights and responsibilities of the company and the customer.

—Service could not be discontinued unless the company office was open to handle reconnection of the service.

—If a telephone were needed to obtain emergency medical assistance for a person under a doctor's care, discontinuance of service would be postponed for up to 21 days.

—Customers would be allowed up to 21 days to pay their bills, or to make arrangements with the company that would enable a customer to pay his bill at the most convenient time of the month.

Paul Phillips, an attorney for the commission staff, says the revisions came about as a combination of a response to customer complaints, especially about deposits and late payments, and a preventive measure against possible future abuses.

He says the rules were drafted to comprehensively deal with all billing practices, whether they have been complained about or not.

The revisions will make customers aware of both their responsibilities and those of the company, Phillips says. The new standards will establish uniformity among telephone companies in the state, he says.

"Most telephone customers don't realize there is more than one company in Missouri, but in fact, there are 53," he said.

Most of those companies are fighting the changes.

Ted d'Andriole, of Southwestern Bell, says the rules are not necessary.

For one thing, he says, many of the new rules are already part of the company's policy. He says only five per cent of their customers must pay a deposit, and if they pay their bills regularly, they get that money back in six months.

James Haines, an attorney for the commission staff, agrees that not all the standards have never seen the light of day.

"It's not as though every revision breaks new ground," he says.

Customers also do not seem to think the rules are necessary, d'Andriole says. Only six customers showed up at the four hearings held on the revisions, he says. Besides that, he says the company handles very few complaints on billing practices.

"We don't hear any hue and cry for reform from our customers," he says.

Commission chairman James Mulvaney concedes telephone companies do not have as great a problem with billing practices as other utilities.

"[T]o be the first to admit it — telephone companies are not in the same category as the gas, electric and water utilities, but there are customer complaints in the area, and also a need for uniformity," Mulvaney says.

d'Andriole also finds some other problems with the new standards. One of those is cost.

He says it will cost Southwestern Bell $350,000 to put the rules into effect the first year. Just issuing the pamphlet alone will cost more than $100,000, he says.

The commission's demand that the company accept 90 per cent of customer calls within 10 seconds is unreasonable, d'Andriole says. On certain days, such as Mondays, it would not be physically possible for their personnel to answer those calls, he says.

The rules will also be of little help to customers who pay regularly, he says.

Clampdown planned against sterility-linked pesticide

MIDLAND, Mich. (AP) — The federal government will clamp down next week on use of a potent pesticide linked to sterility among men who helped make the product at Dow Chemical Co. The chemical also caused cancer in laboratory animals.

Dow, headquartered here, on Thursday asked its 250 worldwide distributors to return supplies of DBCP — dibromochloropropane — until it can determine what went wrong.

In Washington, the U.S. Labor Department said Thursday it would issue temporary emergency standards for the chemical to limit the public's exposure. The labor department urged chemical companies to protect workers who use it.

The Environmental Protection Agency also said Thursday it is working with the Food and Drug Administration to see if any DBCP residues remain in food crops that might pose a danger to the public.

It also said its regional offices are testing soil and water near major DBCP manufacturing and formulation plants.

Federal officials stopped short of banning the sale of pesticides containing DBCP, however, as at least one consumer group had asked.

Dow officials said their action was precautionary. There is no evidence the chemical, marketed by Dow under the trade name Fumazone, poses a hazard to farmers who handle it only occasionally.

It is used mainly by fruit farmers in California and Hawaii and soybean farmers in the Midwest to kill microscopic worms that nibble roots and stunt crops.

The federal action will temporarily reduce the amount of DBCP that can be included in pesticides that use it as a base. That standard will be in effect while data on the pesticide is reviewed and a permanent standard is set. That could take six months to a year.

The labor department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) also urged pesticide-processors who use DBCP to reduce airborne concentrations of the chemical as much as possible and to test workers for adverse effects.

Dow and Shell Oil Co., the only other domestic producer of DBCP, both halted production of the pesticide after tests on workers at Dow's Magnolia, Ark., plant showed several men with abnormally low sperm counts or no sperm at all. Further tests on 75 workers showed half with sterility problems.

Shell sold its product as Nemagon Soil Fumigant.

Ten workers who handled Dow-produced DBCP at the Occidental Chemical Corp., in a Lathrop, Calif., also showed no sperm or extremely low levels.

That company also stopped producing DBCP products, which it marketed as CHA-KEM-CO, Garden Fume, Green Light.

Freshmen frightened by college commits suicide

ROLLA, Mo. (AP) — Police said a 17-year-old college freshman from an affluent Chicago suburb, frightened with his first two days of school and afraid of being a failure, committed suicide Wednesday by laying in front of a Frisco freight train.

It was a way of death jokingly suggested by a fraternity brother Monday night when Harry James Bruce Jr., talked with his roommates about suicide.

Police said Bruce youth arrived in Rolla Saturday to attend the University of Missouri-Rolla. By Monday night he was talking with roommates about school being too hard, and asked them about an easy way to commit suicide. One lightly referred to stepping in front of a train, or using a gun. The youths told police they did not take Bruce seriously.

Tuesday night Bruce talked of jumping in front of a train, and once again the roommates thought he was joking.

Wednesday morning Bruce walked to railroad tracks just down the street from his Sigma Pi fraternity house, waited until a train was near, then laid his head on the rails, police said.

Nearby, police found the youth's college textbooks. Inside a chemistry notebook was a poignant handwritten note.

It told of love for his parents, his sisters and brother, remorse over a wreck he had had recently, his concern that school was too hard, that he would not be able to do well, and his parents would be disappointed in him.

"I have been unhappy with my life, so I just want to rest in peace," the note continued. "I hope I'm not upsetting anyone, and if I am, I am sorry. But I can't handle the pressures. God take my soul and make none of those who cared for me sorrow."

Authorities spent several hours trying to reach the youth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry James Bruce Sr., who left their Winnetka, Ill., home Saturday for a vacation after sending their son off to school.

Lance not 1st friend to be defended by President

WASHINGTON (AP) — In another time, another president went to the defense of an embattled aide and friend, saying he admired the man, respected his integrity, needed him in the White House.

But Dwight D. Eisenhower's support did not settle the problems of Sherman Adams. They got worse and three months after that presidential endorsement, Adams resigned.

When congressional investigators reprimanded Harry Truman's old friend and military aide, Harry H. Vaughan, the President snorted an expletive to dismiss suggestions that he quit or be fired. Vaughan stayed.

Now President Carter has rallied dramatically to the side of Budget Director Bert Lance, whom he once described as one of the closest friends he has in the world.

The three cases differ, of course. While Vaughan and Adams denied wrongdoing, investigators found improprieties in their affairs.

That isn't so with Lance. To date, there have been only questions and allegations, and the one official finding in his case so far is that of federal banking investigators, who reported on Thursday that they found no basis for prosecution in his transactions.

Furthermore, Vaughan and Adams were accused of accepting or offering favors as White House officials. The questions raised about Lance involve his private affairs, before he came to the government.

But in another way, the three episodes are similar, for in each case, the target of inquiry and criticism was a personal friend of the president he served. In such circumstances, presidents tend to fight back, even if it is politically risky.

Carter is His defense of Lance amounted to a dare to anyone to challenge the personal loan and banking practices that brought the budget director under government investigation.

The President said that as far as he is concerned, the questions were answered and the matter was settled when federal banking officials reported on Thursday that they found no basis for prosecution in Lance's banking transactions.

But the report was not quite as sweeping as Carter made it sound. Indeed, Comptroller of the Currency John G. Heimann said Lance's affairs raised unresolved questions as to what should constitute acceptable banking practices.

And whatever the merits of the case, it is not likely to lapse into the past tense as quickly as Carter tried to put it there. The investigations are not over. Republicans are hungry for issues, and Lance may yet be a political target.

After all, Carter made the rules. He set tough standards in his campaign statements and in the code of conduct he fixed for administration officeholders. Carter said it was important to avoid not only wrongdoing but also, wherever possible, even an appearance of wrongdoing.

Against this background, Carter's efforts to pronounce the Lance ordeal at an end may have been premature. The political opposition hasn't spoken yet, but it probably will.

Discrimination charged by employment agencies

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Blacks, women and the middle-aged continue to be discriminated against by several employment agencies here, a report says.

According to the report, which was released Thursday, some employment agencies accepted improper telephone orders that discriminated on the basis of sex and age.

The study was prepared by the Missouri Public Interest Research Group Foundation, a privately supported group devoted to consumer and other public interest issues. Researchers in the study identified themselves as prospective employers in telephone calls to the agencies in which they described the ficticious job openings.

One order called for a man to manage a bakery and sandwich stop. A second called for a young woman to serve as a receptionist for a small law firm.

The survey said that of the 16 agencies notified of the bakery job, 10 did not question the request for a man to fill the job. Of the 17 agencies called about the receptionist's job, 13 accepted the woman-only position.

In addition, the report said one Missouri State Employment Service office agreed to send only white applicants for the receptionist job, and all eight St. Louis area offices of the employment service accepted the age stipulation.

Gene Roelofs, author of the study, has called for an investigation by the Missouri Commission on Human Rights.

Meanwhile, state employment officials and managers of branch offices expressed skepticism about the report.

"I think it's extremely unlikely," said a spokesman for State Employment Service Operations. "We have a manual provision that prohibits accepting discriminatory job offers. I would like to have some facts in the matter."

The Prime Minister of Great Britain draws no salary from that office. He supports himself with the salaries of any other office he holds, for example, the First Lordship of the Treasury.

SHS offense lagging behind, Smith says

By CHARLIE FRANCIS
Daily Standard Sports Editor

A controlled offensive scrimmage under the lights Friday night at Public Schools Stadium confirmed Terry Smith's fears about his Bulldog football team -- they have a long way to go before next Friday night's season opener against Farmington.

"Our defense is way ahead of the offense," Smith pointed out Saturday after contemplating the results of Friday night's practice. "I think the defense will be as good as it was last year," he said,

Offensively, it was a long night for inexperienced Bulldogs. "We probably jumped off sides 20 times," Smith moaned about the ragged ness of the scrimmage.

"Our pass offense is lagging way behind," said the Bulldog mentor about his team's biggest problem. The 1976 10-1 club was not know as a passing team, and Smith warned that this year's club would not throw as well as did their predecessors of a season ago.

The problem with the Sikeston passing game won't lie with senior quarterback Jay Cox, who directed last year's junior varsity club to a 4-4-1 record. "He (Cox) won't be the best around, but he'll be a pretty fair passer," testified Smith about his diminutive passer. "But we've got to find some guys who can catch the football."

Paul Gilbow and Craig Littleton, last year's top two receivers, are departed via the graduating route, and no newcomers have stepped in to assume the tight end and flanker positions. In fact, Smith says that this year's team will run without a wide receiver and will go with a fullhouse backfield, partially because of the lack of good receivers.

"We're gonna give some seniors a shot at it the first ballgame," said Smith about his starters at the end spots. But if they don't produce, there may be a few juniors and sophomores seeing action there.

The backfield seems to be set for the most part. Glynn Felton, Mike Shell and Gary Silverthorn will operate behind Cox in the standard T formation, although Smith admitted that there might be some variations in the offensive set as the season wears on.

"Our five interior linemen are doing a pretty fair job," said Smith about the brightest spot on the Bulldog offense. New faces will be at each position along the line, but they are learning fast and developing into a good unit. "They'll be right at home after the third or fourth game," said the SHS coach.

Injuries at a couple of key positions on defense have hurt preparations there, but Smith expects that unit to be ready for the Farmington opener.

Most of the Bulldogs took Saturday off, although the quarterbacks and receivers worked on their thing. The crew will hit it hard for four days this week, with the emphasis on the offense, although much polishing needs to be done on the defense and speical teams as well.

Archery season approved

The Conservation Commission has approved a third straight fall archery season for wild turkeys. The season will be the month of October for Missouri residents. All the 1977 spring turkey hunting counties, plus St. Louis County, will be open for the bowhunters who have taken 47 turkeys with arrows each of the first two seasons.

Home run hitters have a big day Saturday

By The Associated Press

It was a good day for the long-ball hitters Saturday.

The Texas Rangers slammed five home runs, including two by Bump Wills, to support Bert Blyleven's six-hitter and defeat the New York Yankees 8-2 Saturday.

Two of Texas' round-trippers were consecutive inside-the-park shots. Toby Harrah lifted a fly ball to deep right field with two men on in the seventh. Yankees right fielder Lou Piniella crashed into the wall attempting to catch the ball, which bounced halfway back to the infield. Harrah circled the bases before the ball was retrieved.

Wills, who slammed a Mike Torrez delivery into the upper deck in the fourth, then belted a drive to deep center field which bounced off Mickey Rivers' glove and rolled all the way to the fence. Wills scored easily for his ninth homer of the year.

Mike Hargrove led off the game with his 13th homer and ninth in his last 17 games for Texas and Bert Campaneris swatted one leading off the fifth. Graig Nettles hit his 31st homer of the year for New York, tieing him with George Scott and Bobby Bonds for the American League lead.

The loss snapped Torrez' seven-game winning streak and was Blyleven's 12th win in 23 decisions.

Boston crept within two games of first-place New York in the AL East with a 7-5 triumph over Minnesota. Home runs by Scott, Tommy Helms, Butch Hobson and Bob Montgomery provided much of Boston's offense.

The Red Sox tied the major league record for back-to-back homers during a season with 15 as Helms and Hobson hit consecutive home runs in the third inning.

Detroit edged California 7-6 as Milt May hit a pair of home runs, his second blast providing the winning run in the eighth inning. Jason Thompson also homered for Detroit and Tony Solaita hit one out for California.

The Oakland A's defeated Toronto 9-8 as Billy North led an 18-hit, six-stolen-base assault with three hits and two steals. The A's, who collected a hit in every inning, won their fourth game in a row.

In National League day games, Cincinnati edged Philadelphia 6-5 on two-out ninth-inning home runs by Dan Driessen, an inside-the-park job, and Johnny Bench. Morgan had his 20th home run for Cincinnati while Mike Schmidt hit his 32nd and Barry Foote his third for Philadelphia.

Bob Knepper pitched a three-hitter and Jack Clark drove in three runs as San Francisco defeated Chicago 7-1.

In night action, Seattle was at Cleveland, Kansas City visited Baltimore and Milwaukee opposed Chicago in the American League and New York was at Atlanta and Montreal played Houston in the National League.

Royals' ten-game winning streak comes to an end

BALTIMORE (AP) — Andres Mora and Rich Dauer drove in two runs apiece, rallying the Baltimore Orioles to a 4-2 victory over Kansas City Saturday night, ending the Royals' 10-game winning streak.

The Orioles, who had lost five of their last six games, took a 2-1 lead in the sixth inning when Lee May singled with two outs, Doug DeCinces doubled and both came home on a single by Mora.

Dauer's two-run double in the seventh finished Jim Colborn, 14-13. The hit scored Dave Skaggs, who opened the inning with a single and moved to third on a double by Al Bumbry.

Mike Flanagan, who needed relief help in the ninth, evened his record at 10-10 while scattering 10 hits.

Kansas City scored in the fifth on singles by Fred Patek and George Brett and a double by Hal McRae. Following an intentional walk to Amos Otis, Al Cowens grounded into an inniing-ending double play to halt the threat.

Before Kansas City snapped a scoreless deadlock in the fifth, each team had stranded a runner in scoring position in each of the first three innings.

John Wathan hit into a fielder's choice with two Kansas City runners aboard in the first, Frank White grounded out following Patek's double in the second and Cowens was retired in the third after McRae walked and stole second.

Colborn, who has a 3-14 record against Baltimore, retired two batters following a double by Dauer in the first and set down two more Orioles with two runners aboard in the second.

Big name teams should rule college ranks again

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Upstart Pitt provided a different look on college football's national championship throne last year. But most of the teams directly behind the Panthers were familiar names in such races and many of them have designs on the 1977 title.

For instance, Southern California and Michigan, which finished 2-3 behind Pitt in last year's Associated Press ratings, generally are considered the teams to beat in the Pacific-8 and Big Ten Conferences, respectively.

Oklahoma, the national champion in 1974 and 1975 and a strong-closing fifth last season, is the heavy favorite in the rugged Big Eight Conference. The experts say Alabama will return to the top of the Southeastern Conference after a one-year absence and the same is expected for Arizona State in the Western Athletic Conference, while Maryland has become an almost automatic choice in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The Southwest Conference, having ended years of domination by Texas, appears to be another three-team scramble among last year's contenders — Houston, Texas Tech and Texas A&M.

Among the independents, much of the preseason sentiment belongs to Notre Dame, although Pitt could change that by beating the Fighting Irish in the opening game, just like a year ago.

Tony Dorsett, who became college football's all-time rushing king while leading Pitt to the national championship, is gone, along with 10 other starters, both kicking specialists and Coach of the Year Johnny Majors, who, having lifted Pitt from rags to riches, now will try to bring his alma mater, Tennessee, back to national prominence.

Majors' successor is Jackie Sherrill, Pitt's former assistant head coach, who spent last season as head coach at Washington State. With Dorsett gone, Sherrill will allow quarterback Matt Cavanaugh to throw more to such talented receivers as Gordon Jones and Willie Taylor.

Pitt will be challenged by Penn State in the East, provided the Nittany Lions get past their opener against Rutgers, whose 18-game winning streak is the longest in the country. Yale is the preseason favorite in the Ivy League.

In the SEC, Alabama likely will be challenged by Florida, which never has won the conference championship; defending champion Georgia; Mississippi State, coming off two years probation, and Kentucky, going on two years probation.

Alabama must rebuild its defensive line, but a high-powered offense featuring quarterbacks Jack O'Rear and Jeff Rutledge, receiver Ozzie Newsome and running backs Johnny Davis and Tony Nathan, may overcome any defensive deficiencies.

Maryland has a record string of 20 ACC victories and there seems to be no end to the Terrapins' domination. Mark Manges and Larry Dick could be the best 1-2 quarterback punch in the nation. North Carolina probably will be the No. 1 challenger.

Appalachian State is a solid choice in the Southern Conference, while South Carolina, East Carolina and Memphis State should be the strongest Southern independents.

In the Midwest, the annual Michigan-Ohio State showdown is expected to decide the Big Ten race, as usual. Although Michigan has a few defensive holes to fill, the Wolverines boast perhaps the premier offensive line in the country, a veteran quarterback in Rick Leach and outstanding runners in Harlan Huckleby and Russell Davis.

The big news is that Ohio State Coach Woody Hayes, who adores pile-driving fullbacks, is switching to a pony backfield with relative lightweights Jeff Logan and Ron Springs as the chief ball carriers. The Buckeyes also have eight returning starters on defense.

In the Midlands, Oklahoma will field the fastest backfield in its history. Quarterback Thomas Lott, halfback Elvis Peacock and fullback Kenny King all do the 40 in 4.4 seconds, while the other halfback in the explosive Wishbone, heralded sophomore Billy Sims, lags behind at a mere 4.5. Despite all the speed, the Sooners' season depends on how well nose guard Reggie Kinlaw and linebacker Daryl Hunt recover from knee injuries.

Almost everyone except Kansas and Kansas State — and that means Colorado, Iowa State, Missouri, Nebraska and Oklahoma State — can be considered a Big Eight contender. Oklahoma State has one of the nation's top runners in Terry Miller, who gained 1,546 yards during the regular season and added 173 in the Tangerine Bowl last year.

Notre Dame has its entire defensive unit back and the Irish are booming end Ross Browner as their top Heisman Trophy candidate. If he wins it, Browner would be only the third lineman in history and the first since Leon Hart, another Notre Dame end, did it in 1949.

However, the Irish will have to overcome the loss of Al Hunter, the only 1,000-yard rusher in the school's history, who was suspended for a violation of dormitory rules.

Western Michigan, Ohio University, Bowling Green and Kent State hope to unseat Ball State in the Mid-American Conference, while Tulsa and West Texas State are getting plenty of support in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Houston and Texas Tech tied for the Southwest Conference crown a year ago, but Texas A&M may pass them. All three clubs have top-notch quarterbacks — Tech's Rodney Allison, Houston's Danny Davis, A&M's David Walker.

But all eyes in the SWC will be on Texas and Arkansas, where long-time, ultra-successful Coaches Darrell Royal and Frank Broyles have stepped down. Fred Akers at Texas and Lou Holtz at Arkansas have been entrusted with trying to get their teams back to the top, where they spent so many years.

In the Southland Conference, McNeese State is favored to repeat, with a strong challenge from Southwestern Louisiana.

In the WAC, Arizona State, Brigham Young and Colorado State are making threatening noises. Arizona State has a great receiver in John Jefferson and BYU has a great passer in Gifford Neilsen. If they were on the same team, the choice would be clear-cut.

Southern Cal's competition on the West Coast is expected to come from UCLA, although Washington, California and Stanford have first-division ambitions.

Sophomore Charles White is the latest in a string of superb Southern Cal runners and Rob Hertel may be the best passer in the school's history. UCLA, which had a great recruiting year, has a top-notch runner of its own in Theotis Brown and a rugged defense led by linebacker Jerry Robinson and tackle Manu Tuiasosopo.

San Jose State must fight off a challenge from Long Beach State in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, while San Diego State, a former PCAA member, again could rate among the nation's leading independents.

Sooners top first poll

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The Oklahoma Sooners have been tabbed as the preseason choice in The Associated Press college football poll to capture their third national championship in four years.

In nationwide balloting by a panel of 62 sports writers and sportscasters, Oklahoma received 23 first-place votes and 1,068 of a possible 1,224 points as the choice to succeed Pittsburgh as the No. 1 team in the nation.

The Sooners, who won the national championship in 1974 and 1975, finished fifth a year ago with a 9-2-1 record in their unsuccessful bid to become the first team ever to win three crowns in a row. They easily outdistanced Michigan in the preseason balloting.

The Wolverines, 10-2 last year, received 19 first-place votes and 1,020 points. Michigan and Oklahoma were the only teams named on every ballot.

Notre Dame was third, followed by Southern California, Ohio State, Alabama, Pitt, Texas Tech, Texas A&M and Maryland.

Notre Dame received 10 first-place votes and 948 points as the top nine teams in the balloting all received at least one first-place vote.

Last season's final Top Ten consisted of Pitt, Southern Cal, Michigan, Houston, Oklahoma, Ohio State, Texas A&M, Maryland, Nebraska and Georgia.

The 1977 preseason Second Ten includes UCLA, Colorado, Penn State, Houston, Nebraska, Mississippi State, Arizona State and Florida tied for 17th, followed by Georgia and Oklahoma State.

The final 1976 Second Ten was Alabama, Notre Dame, Texas Tech, Oklahoma State, UCLA, Colorado, Rutgers, Kentucky, Iowa State and Mississippi State.

Arizona State, which slipped to a 4-7 record after finishing second to Oklahoma in the final 1975 AP poll, was the only team coming off a losing season to crack the presason Top Twenty.

Woods predicts more stable MU

COLUMBIA, MO. (AP) — Quarterback Pete Woods, who looks like Burt Reynolds with freckles, thinks he knows exactly what happened in Missouri's zany 1976 season.

"I blame it on emotionalism," the rangy senior told Big Eight skywriters Thursday. "And I don't think anything like that is going to happen to us again."

Woods is predicting Missouri followers will see a more polished, more stable bunch than the 1976 squad that alternately skied to greatness only to stumble to humiliation.

"Maybe then people will finally forget about all that," he said with a sigh. "All winter, all summer, everywhere we go, people want us to explain what happened."

Missouri captured the intrigue of much of the nation with its stunning upsets over USC and Ohio State. But they also enraged and dismayed many of their alumni with inexplicably bad performances while losing to Illinois, IowaState and Kansas, and eventually compiling a 6-5 record.

"Last year we were a very emotional kind of team," said Woods, who played enough in place of injured Steve Pisarkiewicz to total 996 passing yards.

"Steve was a rah-rah kind of guy and so were some other players who were seniors last year. Sometimes we'd get real high about Wednesday or Thursday and then be kinda flat on Saturday. And sometimes adverse things would happen during a game and it would be like suddenly letting the air out of a balloon we would go so flat.

"I'm a different kind of leader than Steve," he said of Missouri's career passing leader, and first-round draft choice of the St. Louis Cardinals. "I'm convinced you're going to see a different Missouri team."

The Tigers have another murderous schedule, opening at home against USC and counting Arizona State and California among other non-conference foes.

"We have two goals this year," Woods announced. "Consistency and the Orange Bowl." Although the offensive line is questionable, and the defense contains a couple of potentially tender spots, Missouri seems capable of reaching those goals. And Woods will be the key operative.

If ever a young athlete rose to an occassion, it was Woods last year at Ohio State. Making his first start, he guided the Tigers to a 22-21 victory, hurling two touchdown passes and driving to a touchdown and two-point conversion in the waning moments.

In a victory over Nebraska, he teamed up with wide receiver Joe Stewart, who is also back, on a Big Eight record 98-yard touchdown pass.

All his life, Woods has been a winner. A natural athlete, he won nine games as a pitcher on Missouri's Big Eight championship baseball team last year, but decided to pass up baseball this spring to concentrate on football.

And he comes from a distinguished family. His mother, Harriett, is a Missouri state senator, and his father is a copy editor on the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Pressed on the point, Woods admits he may be a better quarterback with Pisarkiewicz out of the picture.

"It will be different, that's for sure. When Steve was on, there's no doubt he was the best player we had. But it was a little unnerving for me to be in a game and look over my shoulder and see Steve warming up on the sidelines. I'm not under as much pressure and I can concentrate on developing my skills rather than constantly fighting to prove myself."

Woods certainly proved himself to professional scouts, who list him among the nation's top quarterback prospects.

"I guess everybody who ever experienced success in college football wants to play in the NFL," he said. "And I 'm no exception. But I'll promise you this much - I am not really thinking about it. I feel there is some force guiding my destiny. Maybe it's God, or fate, or whatever, but I'm sure it's guiding me ina positive way.

"i prefer to deal in the present because I'm really pretty confident of the future anyway. You won't see me ducking out of bounds or doing anything to avoid an injury. I know it sounds corny, but I'm a team player and I'm going to do all I can to see us play in the Orange Bowl."

DIMAGGIO REMEMBERS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Joe DiMaggio, usually reticent when talking about himself, was trapped. He was asked to recall a couple of his most memorable moments during his career as center fielder for the New York Yankees, a performance which landed him in the Baseball Hall of Fame.

"I remember the time in the late 1940s when I missed the first half of the season because of a foot injury and returned to the lineup in Boston," he said. "I hit four home runs in three days at Fenway Park."

Joe also recalled one catch he made. "It was at Yankee Stadium and Hank Greenberg of Detroit hit a ball to deep center field. I ran as fast as I could with my back to the plate. I was almost to the wall, 450 feet or more from home plate, and I stuck out my glove. There was the ball. Was I surprised."

American cagers beat Soviets 87-68

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — The U.S. basketball team defeated the Soviet Union 87-68 to win the gold medal in the World University Games Saturday night, and American swimmers won four of the last five swimming events on the last day of competition.

Th Soviet Union ended the games at the top of the medals list with 30 golds, 33 silvers and 28 bronzes, while the United States was second with 19-11-13. Hungary was third with 14-10-2.

The U.S. basketball squad scored its eighth victory in eight games as Sid Moncrief of Arkansas led the scoring with 16 points.

Freeman Williams of Portland State and Larry Byrd of Indiana State scored 14 each and Calvin Natt of Northeast Louisiana scored 10.

With Steve Schalles of South Dakota State University winning the 163-pound class in freestyle wrestling, the United States finished the 10-day students' sports festival in grand style.

The U.S. women's basketball team won a silver medal. The strong Soviet squad beat the Americans 107-90 in the final.

The top performers in the U.S. swimming triumph were John Ebuna and Sue Hinderaker, who each won two gold medals on the final night.

Ebuna of the University of Tennessee won the men's 100-meter freestyle in 52.05 seconds and swam third in the quartet that edged the Russians in the men's 800-meter freestyle relay.

PUFFED-UP WORMS

What will they think of next?

The newest wrinkle in fishing is air-injected worms!

The idea started with bass fishermen who wanted to give the nightcrawler more life.

Nightcrawlers are excellent bait when fished over brush and other underwater debris, but they become water-logged very quickly and lose their attractiveness to fish.

According to information reaching Mercury outboards' fishing department, an innovative angler borrowed a medical hypodermic needle and injected air into some worms in an effort to make them more buoyant in the water.

The idea worked, and air-injected nightcrawlers are now being used to catch fish all over the country.

Anglers are applying the new method to bass, catfish, walleye, and many other species which are attracted to the puffed-up worms.

The technique calls for slipping an 8/0 hook under the "collar" (a natural band around the worm) and attaching a split shot about 15 inches above the bait.

Experiment with split shot until you find the proper amount needed to sink the worm.

A word of caution from the experts: Be careful when inflating the worm. Too much pressure and it's "pop" instead of puff!

Little River tourney field dwindling

CANALOU – In action Friday, Joliff Flight Haywood City and the Bank of Sikeston were winners in the Little River Valley Slowpitch Classic. One of the closest games of the tournament was played with Joliff getting the nod over IXL 5-4.

George Daniels pitched a solid ballgame with Danny Peet and Major Daniels hitting homers to give Haywood a 14-7 bulge over Kewanee. Daniels got the win with Palmer of Kewanee taking the loss that eliminates them from further play in the tourney.

Montogomery got an RBI single in the sixth inning that proved to be the winner in Joliff's 5-4 triumph over IXL. The game was knotted in the second, fourth, and fifth until the winning rap by Montgomery. The winner was Parker with Ron Henson absorbing the loss for IXL.

The loss put IXL into the loser's bracket where they were downed by the Bank of Sikeston.

Irwin breezing in Pinehurst event

PINEHURST, N. C. (AP) — Hale Irwin, apparently headed for a rout, slashed and chopped his way to a double bogey six on the final hole but, with a two-under-par 69, still retained an imposing five-shot lead Saturday in the third round of the $250,000 Hall of Fame Golf Classic.

Despite his troubles on the 18th — which took place moments after the national television cameras had ended their coverage for the day — Irwin still posted a 54-hole total of 196, a distant 17 strokes below par on the pine-studded, 7,007-yard No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club.

His three-round total, built on scores of 65, 62 and 69, matches the lowest of the season on the tour and put him in a commanding lead in the tournament he must win to gain a spot in next week's important World Series of Golf.

Irwin had his drive in the fairway on the 18th, but missed the green, stubbed his chip and was still short of the putting surface, in deep rough, in three. He got it on in four and two-putted for the double bogey.

Fine must rebuild at Hayti

By MIKE MARSH
Daily Standard Sports Writer

HAYTI - When a new coach enters a school system, he would to like to find the football program in good working order. Coach Larry Fine soon realized that things don't always work out that way. He is faced with the chore of rebuilding an entire program with only 17 young men.

Coach Fine comes from a coaching job in Graham, Missouri where he was a coach for both football and track for four years. His assistant in a new one also. He is Steve Marshall, who comes to Hayti via East Prairie.

Fine will "go back to basics" as he attempts to teach his young players the fundamentals of the game. Of the seventeen boys out for football, Isaiah West is the only returning starter, and he is but a junior. Only two seniors will be on hand to play this year, and none of them has much playing time under their belts.

It would seem that the deck is stacked against, but Fine has found bright spots in the club. Team hustle and desire is probably the greatest of these. "If it depends on hustle, we're winners. The kids are breaking their hearts out for me," proclaimed an appreciative Fine.

Coach Fine's fear is that someone might get hurt, and with his limited squad, one injury could make the difference between respectability and disaster. Hayti has a combined record of 2-16 over the past two years and with a little luck Fine feels that a .500 season is not out of his team's reach.

The team's strenght as a whole would have to be their quickness. The lines will average approximately 165-170 pounds with the backfield at 160. The speed that might lead them to victory is offset in part by the lack of experience and virtually no depth.

Fines feels that his offense should score due to extremely fast backs. Quarterbacks Jeff Bush and Curtis Thomas will lead the attack with halfbacks Theodore Abbott, Ricky Cannon, and fullback Napoleon Lockridge doing most of the running and pass catching.

Taiwan Little League Champs

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Pitcher Chaing Chen-jung, whose .833 batting average set a new tournament record, drove in two runs with three singles and fired a four-hitter Saturday to lead Li-Teh Little League of Taiwan to a 7-2 victory over Western Little League of El Cajon, Calif., in the championship game of the 31st annual Little League World Series.

The title was the ninth in the last 11 years for a Far East representative to the tournament.

The 5-foot-5, 143-pound Chen-jung, who batted 10-for-12 with 10 RBI in three games in the tourney, hit a two-run single in the first inning after a pair of walks and a wild pitch.

The Taiwan teams added another run on an error to take a 3-0 first-inning lead they never relinquished.

Chen-jung's hitting broke the mark of .733 set in 1973 by Chen Pai-sheng, also of Taiwan.

Backup QB worries over for Onofrio

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Coach Al Onofrio's worries about finding a backup quarterback for Pete Woods at Missouri were set to rest Saturday, thanks to strong performanmces by a trio of freshmen—Phil Bradley in particular.

Bradey threw 30 yards for one touchdown, ran 29 for another and handled the option plays impressively as the Tigers scrimmaged on Faurot Field.

"Quite a few of our young peole did well today," Onofrio said.

"Both Bradlkey and Jay Jeffrey are unusually poised for freshman quarterbacks. They both have good speed and run the option very well. Cecil Holloway was another freshman who played well at quarterback, even though he is working for the first time because of an ankle injury."

The first and third units battled each other, and the second team offense and defense squared off. Woods took the No. 1 offense 60 yards on the opening drive and set the tone for an offensive-minded workout.

"Our defense played well, but there is just no way to test it out here," Onofrio said.

"When our top defense looks like it did today it shows you that young people in our second and third-string offensive lines need a lot more work."

The Missouri ball carriers, led by Dean Leibson and Anise Davis all ran well, according to Onofrio. Leibson suffered a slightly separated shoulder.

U.S. Open tennis begins Wednesday

NEW YORK (AP) — The men have scheduled a battle royal for dominance in their game and Chris Evert, the always serene and steady empress of tennis, might totter a bit on her throne. Virginia Wade, the Wimbledon queen, will meet controversial Renee Richards.

The U.S. Open tennis championships, set at the venerable West Side Tennis Club in Forest Hills, begin Wednesday.

Bjorn Borg, the Wimbledon king of the past two years, is top-seeded even though he lost here to Jimmy Connors last year. Borg snatched the No.1 spot in men's tennis ranks last week—wresting it from Connors, who'd held it for 3½ years.

They could meet in the finals at the Open two weeks hence, if the play follows the seedings.

Miss Evert, the 22-year-old from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., bids for her third consecutive U.S. Open title. She seemed indomitable after her triumph last year over Evonne Goolagong, but has not had such a remarkable year after all.

At Wimbledon's semifinals she lost 2-6, 6-4, 1-6 to Ms. Wade, the Briton over whom Britain had nearly despaired after 16 Wimbledon tries. Miss Evert, as well as most of the other top women, have been engaged in World Team Tennis since then, and major tournaments have gone to little-known players.

The razzle-dazzle during the first round at the Open undoubtedly will fall on Ms. Wade, seeded third, when she meets Dr. Richards, the 43-year-old transsexual admitted to the tournament by court order.

Dr. Richards had been banned from all major tournaments this year and hasn't amassed much of a record. She took the U.S. Tennis Association and Women's Tennis Association to court after being required to take chromosome tests. A judge said the test was unfair and that she should be permitted to play at the Open. The USTA complied without requiring her to enter qualifying rounds.

Miss Evert will meet Sharon Walsh of Mill Valley, Calif., and second-seeded Martina Navratilova, the expatriate Czech, will play Mary Hamm of San Antonio, Tex., in the opening round.

Billlie Jean King, still on the rebound from knee surgery last year, is seeded seventh and has a bye in the first round. If all goes accrding to the seeding, Miss Evert and Ms. King would meet in the quarter-finals.

Miss Goolagong, the runnerup the last four years at the Open, returned to tennis two weeks ago after a year-long absence, during which she gave birth to her first child. The Australian, living at Hilton Head, S.C., said she would not play here, however, because motherly duty called.

Borg falls into the same quarter of the draw with eighth-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis of Kings Point, N.Y., who gave him a mighty battle in the Wimbledon semifinals. If both progress according to seeding, Borg would have to meet fourth-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina before gaining the final.

Connors, with a still-healing sprained thumb, is in the same quarter with fifth seed Manuel Orantes of Spain, who upset him here in a dramatic final in 1975. His quarter also includes ninth-seeded Eddie Dibbs and hard-hitting Roscoe Tanner, No.11.

Connors must get past No.3 seed Brian Gottfried and seventh-seeded Ilie Nastase to make it to the finals.

Connors occupies the same quarter with his Wimbledon semifinal foe, upstart John McEnroe, the 18-year-old from Douglaston, N.Y., who made a startling ascension at the British championships. If McEnroe beats Eliot Teltscher in the first round, he would still have to go through Orantes and Dibbs in his part of the quarter before getting another crack at Connors.

Meanwhile, Arthur Ashe, former U.S. Open and Wimbledon champion, said Saturday he has withdrawn from the Open.

America's leading black player, the 34-year-old star said, "I think I tried to do too much too soon. "My left heel acted up again and now I will have to postpone my tennis comeback until 1978."

He had an operation on his heel which had bothered him for years.

Electronics display

Gene Dowling, 632 Taylor, Adult Education Center electronics instructor, adjusts a display during Saturday's presentation of center courses at Kingsway Plaza Mall. Space in many of the classes is still available, with class meetings to start Sept. 6, at the vocational building of Sikeston High School, 200 Pine St. Enrollment in the classes may be made by calling 471-5440, visiting the school, or by mail. Chaffee gym dedicated

Fielding R. Poe, grand master of Missouri Masons, center, of Berkeley, conducts a Masonic dedication ceremony, assisted by Donald Vance, right, Chaffee Route One, president of the Chaffee R-II School Board, and Lee Dalton district deputy grand master, at the school's gymnasium, Saturday. Poe, a former superintendent at the Airport Schools in Sikeston, said the facility was dedicated to education and enlightenment and cited school systems such as Chaffee's as a major contributors toward accomplishments in the United States. Senior volunteer works past 65

TRENTON, Mo. (AP) — She never finished high school, yet Mrs. Helen Barker remembers facts and details with the clarity of an accomplished scholar, even at the age of 67.

"People call me and ask for 'information, please.' They'll ask for how hot it got yesterday or how much rain we had at this time last year. They act like the radio station never run," Mrs. Barker says.

She, like thousands of persons, is retired — or so she says. Retirement to Mrs. Barker means living 514 hours a year to help others through volunteer work.

Her philosophy is simply that "For me, it is better to get up and go than to sit," in spite of the fact that she is crippled with arthritis and uses two canes to walk.

Mrs. Barker's determined attitude has led her to become of the top Retired Senior Volunteers in the state of Missouri.

Behind her lined face and three-layer glasses lurks the spirit of a woman half her age. Her words and phrases are carefully chosen to direct the listener to their meaning. But the tone of her voice is not harsh. Hearing her, one has the impression that her thoughts are free-flowing, but her concentration rately falters.

Born near the tiny town of Half Rock, Mo., Helen Barker has led a varied life. She and her husband, J.C. Barker, have owned a half dozen farms in rural Missouri and have also lived and worked in Des Moines, Iowa and Nashville, Tenn.

Although her work isn't paid for, her time is valuable to many. Her work with the Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) in Grundy County began with what she called "harmless" office work.

That was simple enough to master for Mrs. Barker. After all, she was already the tax collector for Tindall, Mo., had served during elections in Lincoln Township, was on the board of a rural water district, and had been secretary of various clubs and organizations.

She now works at five dirrerent volunteer sites and is on the Grundy County Council on Aging and the RSVP advisory board. Since joining RSVP in 1974, she has accumulated more than 1,000 hours of volunteer work.

Grundy County and the north-central area of Missouri has more than its share of older persons living on fixed incomes. Most are in the 65-69 age group and have problems keeping up with the runaway economy.

Helen Barker's sharp mind for business sees both sides of the elderly consumer's problem, having owned farms and a grocery store. She now serves hot meals in Grundy County's Senior Center which are priced and funded through a federal program.

Most of Mrs. Barker's volunteer work began after her husband died in 1959. J.C. Barker and Helen Schierbaum met through her sister in Des Moines.

"When my husband and I started keeping company, he was a salesman," Mrs. Barker recalls.

taken to Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff with minor injuries.

The driver of the Norden car was cited for failing to yield right-of-way.

One person received minor injuries in a one-car accident at 4:30 a.m. Saturday on Route E, one mile east of Oak Ridge in Cape Girardeau County.

The accident occurred when an eastbound car driven by Robert Elvis Dees, 23, of Cape Girardeau came around a curve, went out of control, knocked down four mailboxes, went off the left side of the road and hit a tree.

He was taken to Southeast Hospital in Cape Girardeau with minor injuries

No. 2 Cont. from page 1

The research group was one of those which, along with the attorney general of Maryland, successfully sought a court order blocking the use of mechanically deboned meat.

Wolfe, a physician and biochemist, told a reporter that he was reserving judgment on the report and USDA's plans to renew approval of the process until he saw what limitations the department actually had in mind to guarantee consumer safety.

"Unless the new regulations are much tighter, we're going to object to it as much as last time," he said.

Up to 1 per cent calcium was permitted in last year's deboned meat product, or one pound for each 100 pounds of meat squeezed through sieves having holes eighteen one-thousandths of an inch (0.018 inches) in diameter. But since bones are not all calcium, the actual amount of bone material permitted was more than that.

According to the panel, bone particle size in the sieved meat "presents no hazard to health" but urged that the USDA set limits on the size of the particles.

The calcium in the bone material could mean "a slight nutritional benefit" for most people, the panel said. Also, it "is not so great in amount as to pose a hazard to the health of most people except for those persons who are hyperabsorbers of calcium and likely already to be under medical supervision to limit their calcium intakes."

Adult Education Center takes on new look for fall

Photos and story

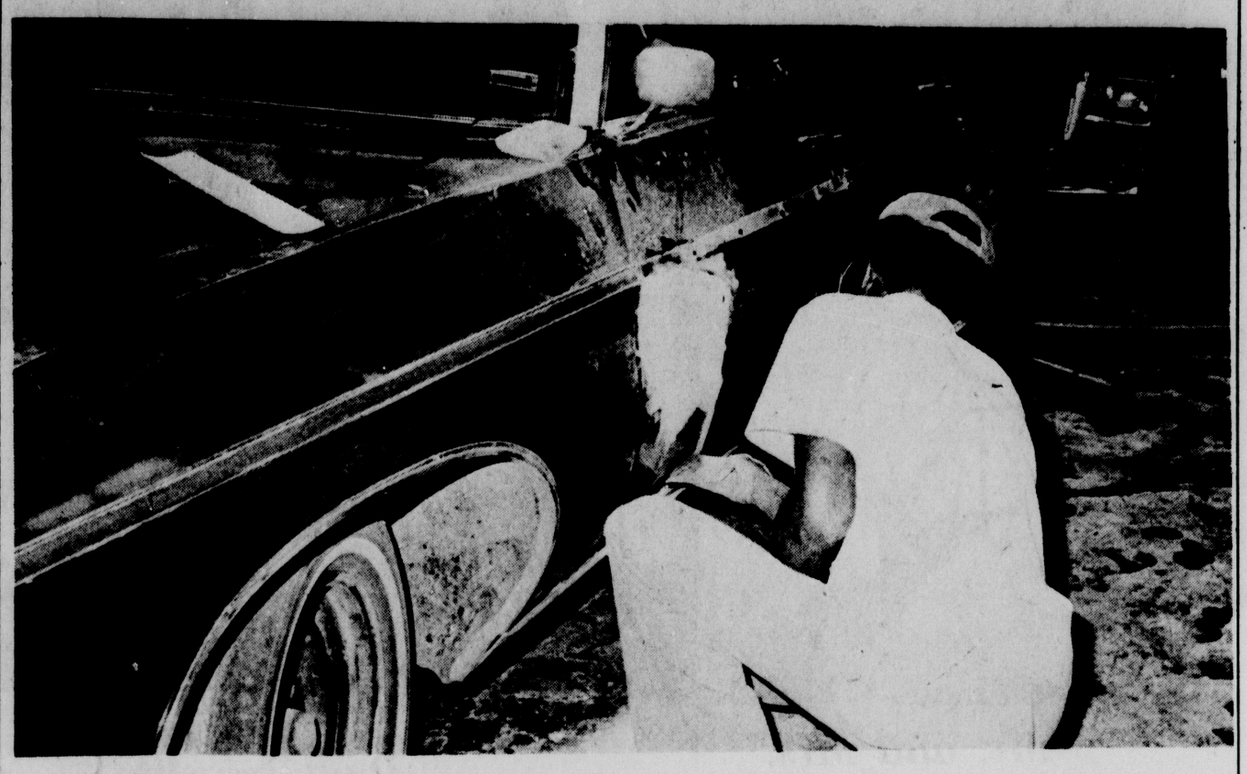
Jill S. Corti



Auto body repairman at work

By Jill Corti

Are you a veteran just home from the service and cannot find work because of lack of skill?

Are you a high school student who is not college bound and looking for a trade?

Are you a high school dropout?

Or, are you an adult, a highschool graduate looking for a way to improve yourself or to pursue something different in your day-to-day routine?

The, Vocational Technical School and Adult Education Center of the Sikeston Public School System, 200 Pine St. has the answer for you.

This year the Adult Education center is offering more than shorthand, typing, investments, electronics, basic education and trade courses. Besides these courses an adult may take a course in Christmas crafts, guitar, chess, macrame, plant care, interior decorating, defensive driving, basic drawing, cake decorating, creative writing, gourmet cooking and quilting.

The reason for the added courses, according to Doyle Brown Jr., the supervisor for the adult education program, is for the Sikeston Public Schools to better serve their community.

The Sikeston Area Vocational School, according to the school's director, Gerald Jackson, was the first area school designated in the state of Missouri.

Jackson said there were two other schools sites similarly selected at that time, but the Sikeston Area Vocational School site was the first to open.

Since opening in 1962, the school is one of 54 new serving secondary students (high school) and adults. Jackson said it is believed that the total enrollment of the Sikeston vocational school also makes it the largest one between St. Louis and Memphis on a North to South axis. The enrollment of the school is between 3,500 to 4,000 adults annualy.

Of the approximate 400 students, 500 are Comprehensive Employement Training Act, (CETA), 750 are high school students and 2,800 are adults.

The adults may be veterans or those people sent by the Missouri State Unemployement Service under the CETA Program.

The secondary or high school students are not only from Sikeston but also come from the area school districts of Charleston, Richland, Dexter, Bloomfield, Bell City, Oran, Scott Central and Kelly at Benton.

There is no boundary on the number of students served in the area, despite the other vocational schools in Poplar Bluff, Kennett and New Madrid.

Courses a secondary student, CETA person or veteran may take include, automotive diagnostic, auto mechanics, building trades, design drafting, electronics, graphic arts, machine shop, office training, power mechanics, secretarial training, welding, air conditioning and refrigeration and auto body and fender repair.

Besides serving in vocational training and basic adult education, the school also provides space for off campus classes for University of Missouri Southeast Missouri State University or other worthy causes.

The school also provides training for industry, especially expanding or new industry that is looking into the area. Some of the industries in the area that Sikeston Vocational School has helped include Triangle PWC and National Lock, both when they first came to the area and on an on going basis.

A lot of persuading, according to Jackson, on the part of Brown has taken place this year to bring the usual five to seven general interest courses up to 20. Brown, who has been in his position since July 1, has been busy contacting area people to take prime time from their evenings and families to bring the courses, such as crafts and gourmet cooking, into the center.

Several full time instructors have also been persuaded to return in the evenings to teach courses. Also among the instructors are retired service people.

According to Brown, the new courses will help to improve a person's general knowledge. If a teen-ager wishes to take one of the night courses, he must first check with his high school principal for approval.

Enrollment for the adult classes is now in progress and will remain open through Sept. 23. All courses have a minimum of 12 persons per class, unless otherwise indicated in the catalog.

For more information or for a catalog write The Adult Education Sikeston Public Schools Center, 200 Pine St., call 471-5440, or visit the "G" Building at Sikeston High School.

Most courses are Veterans Administration approved.

Secretarial work takes practice

Gourmet cooking is tasty addition

Each week a different country from soup to dessert...

Kristin Lewis

"Gourmet is a scary word but it doesn't mean anything..... .....gourmet is one who appreciates fine foods and good cooking."

Checking it out

Kristin Lewis, of Sikeston will be teaching Gourmet Cooking one of the new courses at the Adult Education Center this fall.

In an interview with Mrs. Lewis this week she discussed plans for the course and how she became involved with the program.

"Gourmet is a scarey word, but it doesn't mean anything," Mrs. Lewis said. "The dictionary defines gourmet as one who appreciates fine food and good cooking."

Mrs. Lewis the spanish teacher for Junior and Senior high school says that this creative cooking is a hobby with her and that she was rather surprised when approached on teaching the course with "so many other good cooks in the community."

She added that the title "gourmet cooking" isn't whatshe would have liked to call the course, to her the course will be that of creative cooking or an "adventure in cooking."

The class which begins Sept. 22 will feature a different country and their food each week. Everything from soup to dessert will be tested by the class.

The first week, the class will visit Mexico. Mexico is where Mrs. Lewis spent some time while attending college. The second week will be Italian week. Greek foods will be featured during the third lesson. Mrs. Lewis was very small when she lived in Greece but recalls the foods there with fond memories of the tastes.

Fourth week will be Chinese, then French, German, and Spanish. Mrs. Lewis noted that many think that Spanish and Mexican foods are two of a kind, however, she noted that the Spanish people do not use as many of the hot spices as the people in Mexico do with their foods.

The final week will feature American foods.

The demonstrating-tasting class will meet for two hours and depending on the size of the group will depend on how much preparations the group will actually get to do.

Mrs. Lewis looks to the new courses offered by the center as being "great."

The pastor speaks

Justice

By The Rev. Dr. Arthur C. Fulbright, Th.D.

Justice was one of the four cardinal virtues of the classical tradition, along with prudence, fortitude, and temperance. In his Republic, Plato considered justice the "harmonious functioning of the constituent parts." Not only is justice a necessity in the state, it is fundamental in life.

God's justice is a rock-ribbed theme for Nathan and Elijah and their later prophetic colleagues. Justice-moral rightness-must prevail in all relationships, including one's acceptance of oneself, otherwise there is breakdown. Remove integrity-the result is ethical decay. Take away life's moral-ethical dimension, and persons become empty-headed, irresponsible, incapable of strength of character. Socrates' death, it is said, halted- the moral rot of Greece.

God's eternal rightness reminds humanity that sin cannot endure, and evil, by its very nature, will ultimately destroy itself. All aspects of life come under the scrutiny of God's everlasting justice. Ambrose of Milan insisted that justice and beneficence together become the one social virtue which binds human society together. Said Micah, "He has showed you, O man, what is good; and what does the Lord require of you but to do justice, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with your God?" (6:8)

Open mind

Hurtful things possess

Dear Open Mind:
..I relive, in my mind, over and over, the hurtful things of the past I have suffered at the hands of others. These old experiences possess me. I have a tendency to talk them over and go through them again as if they were still happening. Sometimes obscene things or a song rhyme will dwell in my mind and seem as a plague to me.

I live in a small town. The therapist to whom I went here couldn't seem to understand my problem. What can you suggest?

Not Old Enough To Live In The Past

Not crazy needs help

Dear Not Old:
..I regret that you have not found anyone who understands you and your problem. Understanding alone rarely remedies this condition, but it can be comforting to know that one's problem is understandable, i.e. it is not "crazy" in the sense that it separates you from the rest of us.

I believe you will find it helpful to try and understand that your obsessive thoughts have a defnite function. That is, they are not just "bad" thoughts to be gotten rid of. They are a part of you which you actively use, cling to.

What is their function? First, notice that these thoughts keep you preoccupied with past. Often people who are constantly concerned with the past are very frightened of the present and the future. Being "possessed" with the past is annoying and depressing but it may well be less frightening than one's concern with the present.

Second, notice that there is a great deal of suffering involved in your thoughts. You seem to be constantly reminding yourself that "bad" thoughts can indeed be hurtful in the hope that you will be better able to control and supress yourself.

Finally, I suspect that you are a sensitive person who is greatly impressed by guilt and pain. Hence, any such thought can effectively distract you and save you from facing what is really happening in your life right now. Unfortunately the terrible pain with which you punish yourself will not solve your problems. It will only distract you.

George Benson, M.D.
Psychoanalyst
Medical Director of TCA
St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Not Old Enough To Live In The Past:
..In a town as small as yours, very little help is available. However, you can help yourself to some extent.

1. Alter your frame of reference to a particular event. Pick one of the hurtful things of the past. Try to feel as all the persons involved did. Pretend the person or persons are sitting chairs and say something like, "Why did you....? Answer out loud, as the other person might. Go back and forth until the episode is exhausted.

2. Your mind can concentrate on only one thing at a time, so try to flood it with positive, pleasant thoughts. Do things you've always wanted to do, things you especially enjoy.

3. Do something for someone else. This could be just a call or a visit to a shut-in or active volunteerism.

4. If unwanted thoughts begin to enter your mind, do something physical. Run in place, do sit ups, get out of the house and walk.

5. Reward yourself for success. Rewards can be simple, like favorite food, a movie, etc.

Good luck. Remember, you did survive all the unpleasantness of the past. You won then, and you can win now.

Ask the pastor

Concentrate on sinners

Dear Pator Pembleton: Why don't ministers concentrate on sinners? We Christians are already saved. - Janet.

Dear Janet: It is difficult to reach sinners because of the way some Christians live. The word "Christian" means a follower of Christ. As you know, a true Christian would eat right, drink right, and live right. Do you think Jesus would smoke or drink or commit adultery? He would never be found guilty of these things! Most Christians worship with their lips, but not with their hearts.

As one good saint testified: "I've been in the way now for forty years." Too many Christians are in the way of sinners.

Dear Pastor Pembleton: I have always read your column, and have great confidence in you. I have a question. When a person is converted, how does he feel? - Pete.

Dear Pete: When a person is converted, he feels good! He doesn't hate anyone - he loves everybody. Most important, he loves God and keep His commandments. No one is converted who fails to keep God's commandments.

There comes into one's heart a peace that passeth understanding. The chief result of conversion is not feeling, but a definite transformation in the life. 1 Peter 4:2.

Dear Pastor Pembleton: How do you view the many modern discoveries by which we benefit such as improved methods of prevention and cure of disease, advances in education, and progress in aviation and mechanics? Aren't we moving toward the SUtopia so long predicted? - Larry.

Dear Larry: Agreement is not difficult on the question of man's outstanding achievement in the fields you mentioned. It is a fact, however, that man has not kept spiritual pace with his material advances. This has led to a rather awkward situation. Without spiritual safeguards, man's basest passions are without control and some of his own inventions, therefore, are not safe in his hands. In view of this, I do not share your view that man faces an era of peaceful Utopia. Read Isaiah 57:21; 24:5, 6.

Area children go to Six Flags

SCOTT CITY – On August 11,1977, the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation and the Scott City D.A.E.O.C. Office, sponsored a one-day trip to Six Flags over Mid-America.

A total of 40 children of low income families participated. Adult Supervision was provided. The children saw shows and tried all the rides.

A light breakfast of milk and donuts, donated by area merchants, was served on the way to Six Flags. The children were served lunch and supper before returning home.

The participants were from Illmo-Scott City, Commerce, Benton, Oran, Chaffee and Painton.

'The friend in your mirror'

By KAY NEILL
Area Child and Family
Development Specialist

This summer I had the privilege of being involved in two different groups of Bootheel youth. As part of my presentation, I asked each of the participants to say what they liked about themselves. As you can guess, they stammered around and had difficulty thinking of an answer.

Why is it that so many of us have trouble recognizing and admitting our good points? We need to work on this and learn to accent our skills in order to gain self-confidence.

Do you realize how unique you are? In all the world, there is no one else exactly like yyou. You are special ... someone to respect and believe in, , someone to care about and love.

Be your own best friend. Give yourself a break. Practice liking yourself. Pay attention to your self expectations. Expect to be effective and to succeed, and you will find it actually happening. You can take total charge of your own expectations. Reward yourself when you do well or when you succeed in some way. Think of something you really like about yourself. And be kind to the friend in your mirror.

'Tomorrow in their hands'-Young Life coming to Sikeston

Take, as an example, a recent Young Life meeting at the home of a sixteen-year-old boy in Connecticut. If his parents were dumbfounded by what they saw, they could hardly be blamed. A week or so earlier the boy had asked permission to have the next Young Life club meeting at his home. His mother, knowing that these local teenagers met at different homes every week, readily agreed. Her son was new to the organization, and she had never witnessed a meeting. So she baked a cake, bought some hot dogs, and prepared soft drinks for what she assumed would be a dozen or so young people.

The shock came that evening. At seven o'clock she and her husband stood on the porch of their suburban home, open-mouthed, watching scores of teenagers arrive in cars, on bicycles, on motorbikes, on foot. There seemed to be no end to the parade.

Before long the living room was so crowded that an adult representative of Young Life—a cheerful group leader in his late twenties—suggested that everybody go out to the front lawn. By seven-thirty on this moonlit spring evening, the lawn was thronged by more than sixty youngsters, all laughing, talking, having a noisy good time.

Normally this residential street, Elm Avenue, was so silent that if a dog barked you could hear it half a mile away. With dozens of teenagers now making no effort to be quiet, many a startled neighbor came out to see what was happening. Their children walked close to investigate. A police car stopped, but the homeowner waved reassurance, and the car rolled on.

Presently a young fellow in jeans sat on a porch step, began strumming a guitar, and sixty young voices joined in a hand-clapping chorus of "He's Got the Whole World in His Hands."

That was the start. Other songs followed, contemporary spirituals mingling with popular rock. The neighbors must have enjoyed the concert they heard, for nobody complained. Perhaps they were subliminally aware of a universal truth the Young Life organization has long known: Two things usually attract young people—sports events and music. At sports events they may be divided, cheering for opposing teams. But music draws them together in a common bond of pleasure.

At about eight o'clock the singing ended. Most of the youngsters sat down on the grass, cross-legged, looking up at the leader who had taken the top porch step as a rostrum. Like the boys, he wore jeans and an open-collared sports shirt. Until now he had been merely another member of the crowd, drifting here and there, chatting with anyone who cared to talk. He had shared discussions about the local high school's baseball team, about the imminent senior prom, about the relative merits of certain male, female, and coed colleges.

Now, from the top step, he launched into a brief talk. It took scarcely ten minutes and it was based on a Biblical theme in contemporary terms. What he said could not be characterized as a sermon. It was too colloquial, an easy conversation with friends. The manner in which he stressed the wisdom of the Bible's message sounded so practical, so rational, that any other attitude toward life seemed absurd. He spoke of trust: people trusting their friends, people trusting their parents, people trusting Jesus Christ.

When the leader sat down, there was no applause. The thoughtful silence indicated a meaningful message had been communicated.

By eight-thirty the meeting ended. The young people left as they had come, in cars, on bicycles, on motorbikes, on foot, and Elm Avenue was quiet again.

Perhaps the most notable thing about this Connecticut gathering was that it was being repeated in almost a thousand places throughout the United States and in nine other countries. Similar Young Life sessions were going on, usually in homes but sometimes in school gymnasiums, in the social halls of churches, in store fronts. The Young Life organization, which has been sponsoring such meetings since 1938, now has attendance of over 75,000. Year after year, as its teenage members grow to adulthood, their places are filled by new generations. In the estimate of the association's President, William S. (Bill) Starr, during the past thirty-seven years hundreds of thousands of people have felt its influence on their lives.

A former member of Young Life, himself now the father of two teenagers, told me that one of the things he learned when he attended meetings was not to be ashamed of praying. "I've made a point of having my kids hear me pray for the things our family wanted. What it's done is make God very real to them—Someone in our home, Someone we can talk to. And I tell you that kids who learn to talk to God simply can't be bad."

Nevertheless, we live in an age when misguided youngsters seem to command most attention. As Bill Starr put it, "Newspapers crowd our minds with reports of teenage crime and prostitution and drug addiction, and of course a good deal of it is true. But does this really reflect the character of America's average young people? Not at all. Most kids want to be decent and wholesome and honest. Their problem is how. It is our job to help these youngsters discover for themselves the way to integrity and personal fulfillment. The first step in leading kids is to establish our own credibility with them."

But how? It is not always easy for an adult group leader to win the confidence of teenagers—that is, to a degree that will enable him to interest the youngsters in something that changed the leader's own life. To cope with the challenge, Young Life has a trained staff of 500 professionals, men and women. These devote full time to the organization's work. In addition there are 200 who serve part time. And most leaders hold master's degrees in theology or religious education—many of these degrees earned at the Young Life

Institute just south of Colorado Springs.

Whether they work with suburban teenagers, urban, or with problem cases, what these adults have to learn—or relearn—is how to be young. They have to develop the skill of mingling with young people as equals—at football games, in pizza parlors, at soda fountains, in jukebox haunts, everywhere. They have to learn how to listen to youthful ideas and problems and complaints; to offer counsel only when it is sought; never to pontificate; sometimes to talk in the colloquial language of teenagers; to win friendship and trust by giving friendship and trust.

Oscar Hammerstein II once wrote that a bell is never a bell till you ring it, and love is never love till you give it. An adult cannot easily say such things without the risk of being considered "square." The words sound too much like preachment. "But any time I can help my young friends to understand and utter such thoughts themselves, to one another, to make their own discoveries," one group leader said, "I get the deep-down, satisfied feeling of knowing I'm doing part of my job well."

Considering the vast number of youngsters Young Life serves, its professional staff can hardly hope to accomplish its ends without assistance. Fortunately help is plentiful. It comes from some 4,900 adult and college-age volunteers, many of them former members—"alumni"—of the organization. These volunteers help during the school year and about 3,000 of them also serve as counselors at seven widely scattered vacation camps operated by Young Life.

In the summer these camps, located in the United States and Canada, annually attract more than 15,000 youngsters for one-week stays. Weekend winter camps involve another 55,000. Rates run upward of $85 a week, but Bill Starr insists that no boy or girl is barred for financial reasons. Young Life grants hundreds of camp scholarships.

Since Young Life was founded to disseminate the teachings of Jesus, it is interesting to hear it described as nondenominational. Yet the truth is that it includes Protestants and Catholics, whites and blacks, people of all racial backgrounds. "When we talk about being for kids," Starr ended, "we mean kids everywhere. Our goal is the emergence of decent human beings by changing and enriching their hearts and minds with a knowledge and acceptance of Christ."

Much of this is achieved at the Young Life camps which, by the way, would make travel agents drool. They occupy spectacular sites for both summer and winter sports, offering everything from canoe trips to ski slopes, from mountain climbing to tobogganing, water skiing and para-sailing. The Silver Cliff and Frontier Ranches are perched high in the Rockies. Castaway Club lies among fish-filled Minnesota lakes. Malibu Club (which one travel writer has described as situated in the most beautiful spot in the world) nestles in a fjordlike inlet north of Vancouver in British Columbia. Saranac Village in the Adirondacks, Windy Gap in the Great Smokies, Woodleaf in the gold rush country of California—all these provide memorable adventures. They prompt campers to write letters of thanks for "the best week of my life"; the most gratifying add, "I have come closer, I think, to understanding and appreciating the teachings of Jesus."

Thus the camps fulfill their purpose. But also Young Life's hope, obviously, is that the experience of intimately sharing camp life will engender better understanding of one another among teenagers; and that out of such understanding will grow the compassion and love for which all religions strive.

It is odd to record that an organization of such size, of such widespread activities, originated in Texas through the efforts of one man. The minister of a suburban Dallas church was unhappy over the fact that few young people were being reached by his church. He asked his assistant, a seminary student named James Rayburn, to see what he could do about correcting the situation. Rayburn started by "building relationships," as he termed it. He resorted intuitively to the methods Young Life uses today. He frequented places where teenagers gathered. He made friends. In time he formed a club. Soon thereafter his club kids began to join him in going to church. And Rayburn's one-man campaign, with its success reported in other communities, was copied in those towns. From Texas it spread to other states. Today many of the executive heads of Young Life were among the earliest of those pioneers who formed local youth groups. They have lived with the organization from its start.

Idealistic as Young Life's objectives may be, they cost money. The organization's budget now exceeds $10 million a year. So one may ask where the money comes from. Who pays the salaries of the professional workers—salaries comparable to those of teachers at the high school and college levels?

Bill Starr answers: "We establish adult committees in communities where we have teenage groups. These volunteer committees—about 250 of them now—raise the philanthropic funds we need. About 73 percent of our money comes from individual gifts. Foundations give us another 12 percent. Churches cooperate by contributing 8 percent, and 7 percent comes from corporations."

Then Starr added, "Of course, when you grow as constantly as we are growing, you never really raise enough. Right now, for instance, we have to expand our staff so that we can reach more urban communities. In the past we've concentrated pretty much on suburban areas. The cities had their own youth organizations like the YMCA, various athletic leagues, church clubs and many more. These are good. But when we see the things that are happening in some cities we feel that the kids in many urban areas desperately need our type of alternative to gangsterism, to crime, to drug addiction. By our type I mean an intimate knowledge of the person and teachings of Christ. This confronts us with the most serious challenge we have ever known. In a campaign called 'Bridge to the Future' we're trying to raise an extra $4,850,000, a large part of it for work in urban centers."

One of the most sobering aspects of today's moral decline is that every week some 10,000 teenagers run away from home. One cannot blind oneself to anything so grim. It has caused Young Life to establish homes where runaway juveniles can find refuge. Here Young Life leaders try to discover why the youngsters left their families, to help them experience a kind of compassionate substitute family for a while and to persuade the runaways to return to their homes.

"Runaways of today," said Dr. James Oraker, Young Life's staff psychologist, "aren't that special breed of the past who left home to seek their fortune, to fulfill adolescent dreams of glory. Except for those youngsters forced out of their homes by parents who can't support them, most runaways are escaping from what they perceive to be intolerable conditions at home and at school. The break is often the culmination of accumulated grievances. Suddenly, unchartered freedom seems preferable to the security of a home. For each runaway as many as three or four youngsters with the same problems and temptations remain at home, angry but silent.

Why? What compels young people, the most prosperous of any generation, to reject their parents? Perhaps that is the wrong question. Maybe we should ask, have parents rejected their children?

Robert Mitchell, Young Life's vice-president of Operations and a veteran in its work, asserted, "We must not underestimate the basic intelligence of those so-called problem kids. Many of them have good minds. If those minds have been diverted into ugly channels, it's our job to bring them back to a wholesome attitude toward life. Our basic approach is unconditional friendship and sharing of the teachings of Jesus Christ."

Emphasis on religion can bring some strange responses. At one meeting a Chinese girl, a Christian whose forebears may have been steeped in the philosophy of Confucius, brought this thought to a group leader: "When you see a candle flame, it looks the same from second to second. Yet we know that the flame is always burning up new wax, always changing. It's never the same at one instant as it was the moment before. Isn't that so?"

Though the leader looked puzzled, he concurred.

"Well, isn't a human being like a candle flame?" the girl asked. "He may look the same from moment to moment, but we know his body is always burning up its cells, always changing, so that he's never quite the same at any instant as he was a second before. If that's the case, how can we hold a person responsible for what he did in the past? He's no longer the same person."

This—in its way a remarkable facet of a young mind— made the group leader draw a long, deep breath. "Granting everything you say," he replied, "let me remind you that God gave you things He didn't give the candle—the ability to think, a conscience, a sense of responsibility to your fellow beings, a feeling for the difference between right and wrong. He wouldn't have blessed you with such powers if He didn't expect you to use them. What's more, He gave you guideposts for living in the teachings of Jesus—another thing He didn't give the candle. Does that answer your question?"

Churches also are creating innovative programs to reach young people. One actually follows its members to their colleges. The Reverend Bill Flanagan of the First Presbyterian Church in Colorado Springs travels as far away as Spokane, Washington, to meet with young members of his congregation who are at Whitworth College, a Presbyterian-related liberal arts school. When one of these students was asked what whe liked about "Reverend Bill's" meetings, she said, "He makes me ask myself questions about what I want of college, of life in general, what's important to me and what isn't. I guess what I'm trying to say is that just thinking about religion, trying in your own way to understand the teachings of Christ, gives you a sense of values you can't find anywhere else."

"When we hear kids say things like that," Bill Starr told me, "we feel ours is the most satisfying job in the world. After all, Young Life exists for this: to help communicate the essence of Jesus and His teachings to young people. What keeps us going—and will, I am confident, for many years to come—is the evidence we see of our teenagers rallying to follow the guidance of the Bible. In their hands, I like to think, the world has a chance to be safe."

Back-to-school news

It's a mixed bag of styles in 1977-78

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) — It's bad enough when you're up against Mother Goose, but when they start throwing the rivers and mountain ranges of Afghanistan at you, well, you better be dressed for it.

Show up for school in a pair of survival pants with suspenders, just in case, and a plaid lumberjack jacket with a big down vest over it.

Or something quilted, pocketed, patched, and waterproofed with lots of industrial zippers and hardware, so you've got a fighting chance against the basic rules of grammar and how many "n's" Cincinnati has, on a good day.

Of course, it's not all that rugged. They'll give you a chance to stand up and show pictures from summer vacation, or maybe talk about your uncle who was going to run for councilman until they found this box with $100 bills and he said . . . well, maybe you should choose another topic.

Just make sure you get their attention. Look neat and clean and command their respect with a button-down shirt under a shetland sweater, and a traditional kilt, knickers, or maybe a jumper with a blazer.

Let them know you know where it's at: wear something wine colored which is de rigueur this fall, and add something neutral, like white, which is about as neutral as you can get. But keep that new sweater with the gold and silver knitted through it for a more frivolous occasion. You don't want them to start daydreaming about the price of Mallomars.

Now, if you're going to take a romance language and you think you might want to run for president of, say, Le Circle Francais, or some such linguistic afterschool group, we've got just the thing.

When you get up to explain pourquois you'd make un president excellent, see that you're wearing one of those billowing peasant skirts and a soft floral or gingham blouse. Yes, yes, you should be judged by your merits and not the fact that you're a soft, feminine young thing — but sometimes that doesn't hurt, you know.

If you're going out for cheerleading instead, that's when you'll need a pair of jeans with maybe a bomber jacket or a blouson, hooded top, because then you can leap and split and scream your lungs out, which you can't do that easily in a peasant outfit.

And don't forget to get lots of different kinds of boots and a pair of ballerina slippers for that peasant costume, and for heaven's sake, don't forget a backpack.

AUTUMN'S PRETTIEST peasants may well be members of the under-12 set, as seen in this mini-printed navy cotton dress ($20). Its border is banded with a profusion of flowers and it is laced Heidi-style over a pretend blouse in white polyester. By Wendy Bird.

Dear Ann Landers

Six-year-old sexually precocious

Dear Ann: What do I do when I see a sexually precocious boy of six embrace and rub himself up against a five-year-old girl, trying to satisfy his sexual curiosity? He was doing it in the yard where he thought no one could see him. Should I mind my own business or tell the girl's parents?

I have a 3½-year-old daughter and I would want to be told of this kind of behavior before it went any further. Please answer. – Mother In A Dilemma

Dear Mother: Such behavior is not abnormal – however, you should alert the little girl's mother, also the boy's. Young children of the opposite sex ought not to be left to play unsupervised for long periods of time. They should also be told not to touch each other's private parts, NOT because it's bad, but because bodies are personal property and not playthings.

Most children manage to "play doctor" and experiment (this is not normal curiosity), but they should be checked on periodically to make sure they don't become unduly preoccupied with such goings-on.

Dear Ann: Over the years I've put up with some rather inconsiderate people, but someone just left my home who made me furious. It was a cigar smoker, one of those terrible stinky ones. Now my house smells like cigars. I have an allergy headache that will last for hours. I would have kicked him out the door but he is my husband's business associate so I couldn't say a word.

How can we get it through the thick skulls of cigar smokers that they are infringing on other people's rights? Are they too gross to care, or don't they know what they are doing?

We read and hear a lot about the evils of cigaret smoking, but how can we get through to the cigar freaks? Cigars are not labeled "hazardous to your health," but they really can foul up a place and are a definite infringement on the rights of others. Please print this and comment. -- Where's A Clothespin?

Dear Pin: More and more we are seeing signs that say "No Smoking." This means cigars and pipes as well as cigarets.

I share your disgust in regard to cigars, but I'm not allergic to them. Since you ARE, your husband should ask his business associate not to smoke them in your home. Doctor's orders!

Dear Ann: Thank God "It Hurts To Hate" wrote to you. I was beginning to think I was abnormal until I read her letter and realized that there must be hundreds of us.

I am younger (50) and mother lives next door -- but she won't be able to live much longer. My brother, who lives 20 miles away, doesn't want to be bothered. He makes semi-monthly trips – and stays for one hour. (Mother hasn't been inside his home for two years.) She makes every day a living hell for me. My husband finds me in tears every time he comes home from work. I wonder how long he will put up with a depressed wife. He's a good guy who deserves better. What should I do? – Hurting

Dear H.: By the time you read this you'll know what to do. The answer for "Hurts" was provided by TWO wonderful readers.

If you didn't see it, get a copy of Wednesday, June 8th's paper.

What are the do's and don'ts of teaching your child about the birds and the bees? Let Ann Landers's new booklet, "How, What, and When to Tell Your Child About Sex," give you the ground rules. For your copy send 50 cents in coin, along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope, to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

'Do I have to use my own money'

By Erma Bombeck

My neighbor, Wanda Weird, was complaining to me the other day about her son. "That kid is going to drive me crazy," she said. "Everytime I turn around he wants to be paid for what he does. Do you know what he had the nerve to give me last Mother's Day? He gave me a chintzy little plaque made out of library paste and toothpicks that he made himself."

"I think that's rather sweet," I said.

"From a 19-year-old boy?"

I know how Wanda feels. Our son's middle name is, "Do I have to use my own money?" Some years ago, in a burst of parental insanity, we initiated the "allowance" system at our house. We thought it would be an incentive to do a good job, instill a firsthand working knowledge of how our free enterprise system works, and give him a feeling of financial independence. We didn't know then he was saving up for a down payment to buy Nevada.

What do we get for our $2 a week?

We get the table cleared whether we are still eating or not. I have had my coffee cup snatched from my mouth while my lips were still blistering.

We get a decision-maker who decides that the remains of a $6 sirloin should be tossed down the disposer while a peach seed floating in a bowl of syrup should be saved in the refrigerator.

We get a garbage hustler whose open lid policy has attracted dogs who have taken busses to get to our garbage can smorgasbord each night.

Every week, his money goes into the bank, giving life to a new adage, "It is better to receive than to give." Whether it's gum, a movie, a poster, a record, there is always the perennial, "Do I have to use my own money?"

Yesterday, we stopped in front of an ice cream parlor and I could just anticipate his next question. So I said to him, "I do not think you realize that it costs parents $147,154 to raise just one child. That includes education, health expenses, clothes, housing, food, and the potential salary of a mother who might have worked but stayed at home to raise the child. There is some sacrifice involved. Of course, we wouldn't have it any other way. But think about it. Imagine that in a liftime your father and I will have coughed up $147,154 on your behalf."

He was silent for a moment, then got out of the car and went in for the ice cream. When he returned, he handed me a cone and said, "I only got one dip each for us. I didn't think you could afford two dips each."

Chinese peanuts make big hit

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

Associated Press Food Editor

One of the most harmonious peanut recipes we've ever happened on comes from a new, privately printed Chinese cookbook called "Harmony of Flavors" by Yung-chi Chao Chen. Tasters at our house were so enthusiastic about the fascinating flavor of these peanuts that we've had to make four batches of them. Be forewarned!

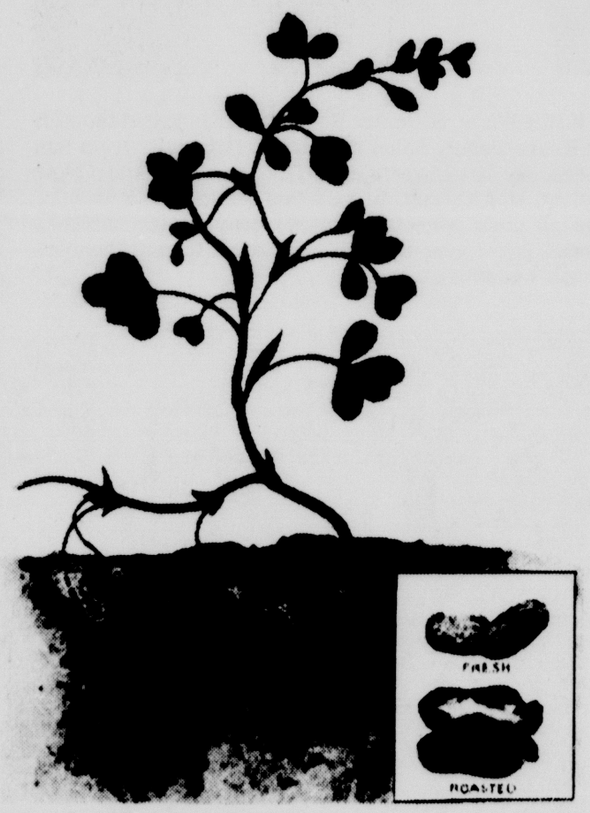
Mrs. Chen is well known for her Chinese cooking classes at the Princeton Adult School in Princeton, N.J., where she has been teaching for a dozen years. When she started the classes most of the students were women, but gradually men — university professors, university and high school food services personnel, doctors, lawyers and writers — began joining.

And there's been another change. Mrs. Chen says: "My students also display increasing sophistication. In the past they accepted without question whatever I taught them, but now they are specifically asking for regional dishes such as Szechwan Spiced Bean Curd (mapwo doufu) or Boiled Dumplings (Shwei jyau)." Consequently, "Harmony of Flavors" is not restricted to any particular region of China. Instead, it contains recipes from the major regional cuisines — dishes that are popular in all parts of China.

Most appealing is the clear way the recipes are given: after the ingredient listings, preparation and cooking directions are neatly set off.

But back to Mrs. Chen's Roasted Peanuts (Kau hwa-shengmi). The recipe for them appears in a welcome chapter on cold dishes — welcome because these dishes are of course prepared in advance.

A note of our own. The shelled raw peanuts called for in the following recipe are available by mail order. Judging by the mail-order bags a friend sent us — from a large supplier in Georgia and one in North Carolina — this is an excellent way to come by them.



PEANUTS—As pictured in 1911, this illustration is from the culinary print collection of AP Food Editor Cecily Brownstone.

However, shelled raw peanuts are also available in health-food stores. In our own neighborhood in New York City, we found some good ones in a small shop run by a yoga group.

MRS. CHEN'S PEANUTS

1½ to 2 pounds shelled raw peanuts with inner skins
1½ to 2 tablespoons salt
1½ to 2 tablespoons sugar
4 or 5 star anises
¾ to 1 cup water

Preparation:

1. Line a large baking tray with aluminum foil. Spread the peanuts evenly on the tray.

2. In a small saucepan, bring the water to a boil. Add salt, sugar, and star anises, cover, and simmer for 10 minutes. Pour the liquid and star anises over the peanuts and let soak for 30 minutes, or until the liquid is almost entirely soaked up.

Roasting:

1. Preheat the oven to 300 degrees. Place the tray on the center rack and roast the peanuts for 30 minutes. Reduce the oven heat to 200 degrees. Stir the peanuts and roast for 1½ to 2 hours or until the peanuts are completely dry. Check and stir the peanuts now and then with a spatula to make sure all the peanuts are evenly roasted.

2. Remove from the oven and let cool. Store in jar.

From "Harmony of Flavors" by Yung-chi Chao Chen; available by mail order from P. O. Box 256, Princeton, N. J. 08450, for $7.95 plus 65c handling.)

Highway use tax due Aug. 31

ST. LOUIS -- Most owners of large trucks, truck-tractors, or buses in Missouri must file a Federal highway use tax return, Form 2290, by August 31.

The tax generally applies to single unit trucks weighing 13,000 pounds or more, to truck-tractors weighing 5,500 pounds or more, to trucks of 9,000 or more pounds equipped for use in combinations, and to buses with a taxable gross weight of more that 26,000 pounds, the Internal Revenue Service said.

Revenue from the highway use tax program assists states in financing the Interstate Highway System, but the tax is imposed on those vehicles using any public highways, city streets, state roads and interstate roadways.

The tax year for the highway use tax begins July 1 and runs through the following June 30. For vehicles placed in service after July, Forms 2290 must be filed with the Kansas City Service Center by the last day of the month following the month a vehicle is used on a public highway for the first time, the IRS added.

Form 2290 and further information on the proper filing of the Federal highway use tax returns can be obtained at the St. Louis IRS District Office.

Beatty P. Miller of 706 Courtney Dr., Sikeston, was at Hilton Head, S.C. recently to participate in a three-day business and educational conference with officers and other leading sales representatives of Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. Miller, associated with the company's office in Poplar Bluff, qualified for the conference by providing more than $1 million of life insurance protection for his clients. He placed in the top 10 per cent of Metropolitan's 21,000 sales representatives in the United States and Canada. Pictured with him at the Hyatt on Hilton Head Hotel is his wife, Ruth.

Missouri consumers are being victimized by a "silent price inflator," according to James L. Sullivan, State Director of Consumer Affairs.

Sullivan's statement was in reference to marked increases in consumer prices as a result of skyrocketing product liability insurance costs. Product liability insurance coverage is insurance protection that businesses and manufacturers carry to pay any lawsuits that may arise out of the use of their products.

"The problem may reach crisis proportions in Missouri and throughout the country," Sullivan said. "And most consumers are not even aware that a significant portion of the purchase price of many products is now going to cover insurance costs."

"I am particularly concerned for consumers in two areas. Large businesses and manufacturers are forced to absorb rapidly escalating insurance costs and pass them on to the buyer," Sullivan said. "Small businessmen and manufacturers often find difficulty getting product liability insurance or paying for it and, as a consequence, are forced out of business," he added.

"Either way consumers are bearing the brunt of this problem through increased product costs or in a reduction of business competition when small firms go out of business," Sullivan said.

Testimony before a Missouri Senate Committee on Product Liability, chaired by Senator Welliver, has shown as high as 5 per cent to 25 per cent of a product's cost may be related to insurance protection. Translated, as much as $2.50 of a certain $15 recreational equipment item's cost goes for product liability coverage. Another directly related to product liability insurance cost.

"I'm also concerned that some insurance companies are responding to only a few large lawsuits and consequently, are raising rates drastically in fear of additional suits." Other companies simply follow suit in a "domino effect" of raising rates, Sullivan said.

Another difficulty in reviewing insurance rates and claims is the lack of adequate statistical data to determine rate propriety, Sullivan said. The Department of Consumer Affairs, the Division of Insurance and the Senate Committee are all working together to try and establish credible statistics, he added.

"I'm sensitive to the rights of Missouri citizens to seek legal recovery when products are shown to be defective. However, court judgements have been allowed when a product was altered or misused, and this simply fuels the fires of inflationary product cost increases," Sullivan stated.

NEW YORK (AP) — Paramount Pictures has been preparing a long list of celebrities to star or make guest appearances in a filmed version of the hit Broadway musical comedy, "Grease."

Starring in the production are three-time Grammy Award-winner Olivia Newton-John, Broadway star Stockard Channing and John Travolta, who made his name in the television situation comedy "Welcome Back Kotter."

The film company said guest stars would include Eve Arden, Frankie Avalon, Joan Blondell, Sid Caesar, Alice Ghostley and the '50s-style rock 'n' roll group Sha Na Na.

$91 million suit against Chrysler dropped

NEW YORK (AP) — A $91 million government suit against Chrysler Corp. was dismssed this week by a federal judge who said in effect that the government just didn't have a case.

The dismissal didn't make many headlines, but perhaps it should have, just as there were headlines when the case was filed. At that time it was said that Chrysler failed to meet clean air standards.

In the year that followed, Chrysler said it spent about $100,000 for out of pocket legal expenses, but probably lost untold millions because of diminished sales and reputation. "We were made to look like villains," said a spokesman.

The problem began last year in the production of 9,185 Plymouths and Dodges. They were accidentally equipped with an emission item that failed to meet the precise description of a similar item installed by Chrysler on a government test car.

The test car already had been certified by the Environmental Protection Agency as meeting its standards. It expected all production models to have precisely the same equipment. Chrysler, the EPA said, failed to comply.

The error was as much clerical as mechanical in the sense that the item, which cost less than $10 installed, made almost no difference in the emissions exhausted. Chrysler found and corrected the error. It told the EPA. It recalled cars.

The EPA agreed that improper device met its emission control requirements in most instances. It even certified the device to be installed on cars built in the future.

But, it said, Chrysler had violated the EPA certification program on those 9,185 cars already produced, and it was going to make a stand. Chrysler officials met with the EPA and Justice Department seeking to resolve the dispute.

"They told us to pay $1 million and sign a consent decree," said Sidney Terry, vice president for public responsibility and consumer affairs. "We said it sounded like blackmail."

The Justice Department then filed suit for $10,000 a car, not because the atmosphere was threatened, but because it felt the regulation was.

J.C. Penney reports 9 per cent increase

NEW YORK – J.C. Penney Company, Inc. reported recently a 9.0 per cent in increase in net income for the second quarter. The department store and catalog chain had net earnings of $33.7 million for the 13 weeks ended July30 compared with $30.9 million in the same period last year. Net income per share amounted to 52 cents compared with 49 cents in 1976, when there were approximately 1.5 million fewer shares outstanding.

For the first half, JCPenney's net income was $63.6 million, or 98 cents per share, an increase of 4.6 per cent from net income of $60.8 million, or 96 cents per share in 1976.

As previously announced, second quarters sales rose 8.3 per cent to $1.992 million from $1.839 million for the same 1976 quarter. Volume for the six months increased 7.9 per cent $3,854 million.

Chairman Donald V. Seibert and Pres. Walter J. Neppl noted that gross margin improved in the second quarter over the prior year's second quarter and six month periods. Increased promotional markdown activity, designed to meet competition as well as stimulate sales activity, caused gross margin to fall, however, from the first quarter's level. The progressive increase in sales activity during the quarter provided leverage to offset somewhat the upward pressures of personnel and occupancy related costs. Interest expense increased 14.3 per cent in the second quarter.

JCPenney stores and catalog were again the principal contributors to the Company's earnings in the second quarter. Drug stores and insurance subsidiaries also continued to show improved profits. Losses from The Treasury stores were reduced from previous levels.

The Company previously indicated its intention to discontinue its supermarket operations over the next several months. The Company also sold its Italian operations in June and received a Federal income tax credit closely approximating its pretax loss on the deposition. This income tax credit lowered the Company's effective tax rate in the second quarter and the first half.

Seibert and Neppl said the stronger sales increases are expected in the second half and that current inventory levels place the Company in a good position to capitalize on new merchandise opportunities.

JCPenney enlarged store physical plant by 2.8 million gross square feet during the first half through the opening of 47 retail units. During the same period last year, store plant increaquare feet, when 31 retail units were opened.

Agribusiness puts $5.6 million into Kansas City area

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Agribusiness is a major stimulant to the Kansas City metropolitan area economy, and injected $5.6 billion into the area's economy last year, according to a report by the Midwest Research Institute.

The MRI study released Monday says agribusiness provided jobs for 94,000 workers in the seven-county area—Johnson and Wyandotte counties in Kansas and Jackson, Clay, Platte, Cass and Ray counties in Missouri.

That means one of every six persons in the metropolitan Kansas City area is employed in an agribusiness-related jobs. The agribusiness payroll amounts to $869 million annually.

The findings of the research project were disclosed Monday at a Chamber of Commerce news conference.

City officials and businessmen attending the news conference pointed to the importance of the study in boosting Kansas City as a world food center.

Bill Theis, a grain company official and vice president of the chamber's economic development division, said the study would be used as a basis for recommendations to establish a lask force for a world food conference in Kansas City in 1979 or 1980.

Theis said it would also be helpful in attempts to bring a world's fair to Kansas City in 1985, "especially if it has as its theme food and agribusiness."

Theis noted efforts are being made to persuade the U.S. Department of Agriculture to move out of Washington. "There is a push in the federal government to become more regionalized and it is possible that the Agriculture Department would have three offices and one would be in Kansas City," he said, adding that the MRI study would contribute to the effort.

The study found that farmers and agribusiness firms borrowed $700 million from the city's financial institutions last year. Farm land valued at more than $323 million was sold last year by Kansas City real estate firms and, the manufacture of agriculture-related products last year accounted for 19 per cent of the sales of all products manufactured in the Kansas City area.

The study said the metropolitan area maintained its position as a major wheat flour milling center and is an important grain storage area with its elevator capacity of 117 million bushels.

USDA to extend loan maturity dates for 1976

WASHINGTON, – The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) recently announced that all 1976-crop wheat and feed-grain loans which mature prior to Oct. 31, 1977 may be extended to Oct. 31,1977 at the option of the producer. By extending loan maturity dates, USDA will give farmers the option of continuing to hold their grain in hopes of higher market prices. There will be no allowance for storage during the extension period. (Feed grains include barley, corn, oats, rye and sorghum).

Under Commodity Loan Programs, producers borrow money from the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) offering their crops as collateral. The loans are "nonrecourse" which means that when the loan matures, producers either repay the loan plus interest in cash or forfeit the commodity to CCC. CCC loans usually mature after one year and are therefore known as "anniversary" loans.

In practice, the loan rate becomes the minimum price that a producer will receive for the crop. Since a producer generally will not redeem grain under loan if the market price is below the loan rate.

Loans give producers the opportunity to obtain cash while holding their crops for later sale and to benefit from possible price increase that often come later in the season after harvest. By holding a crop market gluts and extreme price swings nad transportation bottlenecks are minimized to a great extent by spreading commodity marketings over the entire year.

CCC loans are administered by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS). Farmers who wish to extend the maturity date of their loan should contact their County ASCS Office of the Agricultural Service Center.

Take a tax deduction on your European trip

BY CROCKETT SCOTT

"A work of art should carry its justification in every line."
....Joseph Conrad

To take a full or partial tax deduction on your trip to Europe, visit some of the snuff box collectors, and producers of fine sterline during your wanderings.

And, of course, make a purchase or two.

You just might pay for the expedition on the profits from your later sale of the goods; and you will have a lot of fun too; --- along with the educational aspects of your exposure to the whims of life in centuries past.

With the stock market so determinedly downcast, thousands of Americans are making their long term commitments these days in the personal property of their forbears on the Continent and in the British Isles.

In Munich, for instance, hordes of tourist-collectors trek to the galleries of Julius Bohler, " collector of old master paintings, scupture and works of art."

To obtain a capsule orientation of some of the finest works in Europe and the wants of noted connoisseurs there, visists to such museums as The Kunstverein of Cologne and the Galerie des Beaux Arts at Berdeaux are recommended.

A few years ago rave reports emanated from the summer exhibit from China at the Kunstverein. There were rare objects of the Shang Yin dynasty ---1500 B.C.--1027 B.C.---the period of original working of bronze.

Here were seen the spherical shapes caulerons; and ritual objects; animals adorning tablest, and vases and bottles from the era.

At the Vila Hugel in Essen a collection was shown of Japanese prints depicting life in the seventeenth century by Moronbu.

In Lyon, collectors often look upon famed tapestries at the Musee des Beaux-Arts.

Lyon is famous too for its summer opera, ballets, concerts and theater: so the cultural benefits are many for the investor, who wants to eat his cake and retain a portion of it as well.

As one moves on Paris, visits are suggested to the Palais Galleira and the Orangerie.

As in the beardreem of American brokerage houses, one very well may get a tip or two about purchaseable works of art at the Louvre.

Best place of all, considering there is no language barrier, and rich resources too---is, of course, the United Kingdom.

For sterling, visit Mappin & Webb, no.2 Queen Victoria St., E.C. 4, Lendon; Simon Kaye, Ltd., 1½ Albemarle St., Piccadilly, London,W 1; or Asprey & Co., Ltd., 165-169 New Send St., London W1.

To see the finest in upholstered furniture from 18th century France (and works of art of this period too) call upon Alexander & Berendt, Ltd., at 1 Davis St., Berkeley Square, London,W1.

Precious carpets and tapestries can be seen at Perez, 112 Brempten Rd., London S.W. 3.

Your education very probably can be boosted perceptibly too by a call at Stewen Diamond & Fine Art Co., Ltd., at 35 Brook St., Mayfair London W.1.

For a glimpse of 17th century French Louis XIV needlework a panel of grespoint and fine petitpoint, is mentioned by the travelers who have been there and seen to look in at Mayercas, Ltd., 38 Jermyn St., St., James, London., S.W.1.

In Scotland, collectors usually make a call to Bridge St., in Aberdeen; there to view the offerings of John Bell.

Quite often you see in this establishment beautiful Chippendale mahogany wing chairs, Sheraton mahogany breakfront bookcases; and Hepplewhite mahogany arm chairs; or a George III silver coffee pot with original lamp and stand.

JEFFERSON CITY — A surprised Gov. Joseph Teasdale was the recipient of a pile of baked and sanitized cow dung in which two ball point pens were mounted as a desk set. State agriculture department officials presented Teasdale with the gift July 29.

After receiving the gift, Teasdale said, "Gee thanks, that's very creative."

A card attached to the gift said, "If you can't dazzle them with brillance, baffle them with bull–."

Research key to agriculture production gains

The House and Senate recently voted final approval of the 1978 Agriculture Appropriations Bill -- the legislation providing operating funds for the Department of Agriculture and related activities. Final approval of such a bill usually is so routine that it is not even reported in the newspapers. But this was a special moment for me nonetheless, as it marked the climax of my first year as chairman of the Senate Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee. This time, it was "my" bill going down Pennsylvania Avenue for the President's signature.

For a "city boy" like myself, handling agriculture appropriations was both a challenge and an education. And the most interesting part of that education was in the area of agricultural research.

American agriculture in the 1970's is producing more food than ever before, despite the fact that each year we lose about two million acres of farmland to urbanization and development. The primary reason for our remarkable strides in food production is agricultural research. Current work with soybeans provides a good example of how this research process works.

Soybeans are a relatively new American crop. Twenty years ago, we were importing soybeans from the Orient. Since that time, however, we have found that the soybean may be the "super food" of the future. The soybean is extremely high in protein, yielding more protein-per-acre than any other crop.

Teasdale seeking cooperation between ag and government

SEDALIA -- Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale Thursday said his administration is seeking to emphasize close cooperation between agriculture and state government.

In remarks prepared for delivery at the annual Ham Breakfast at the Missouri State Fair in Sedalia, the governor said his appointment of a 36-member Agriculture Advisory Council will enable him to keep in close touch with all segments of the Missouri's agriculture community.

"These distinguished Missourians on the council have a keen insight into agriculture and will be of immense assistance to my administration in this field," Gov. Teasdale said. "Agriculture is Missouri's leading industry and with the advice of the council, I plan to maintain agriculture as the backbone of our economy."

Gove. Teasdale also said foreign trade is an important facet of Missouri agriculture. Last year, Missouri agriculture exports amounted to nearly $700 million in value.

"We must continue to improve our foreign markets to benefit our agricultural economy," the governor said. "To that end, I have instructed our Department of Agriculture to intensify and expand its efforts to promote the sale of Missouri agricultural products abroad."

The governor also praised Missouri's new livestock marketing law, which was contained in his legislative program, saying it will improve disease control in marketing facilities and protect not only the livestock producer, but also the consumer.

Gov. Teasdale also said he has instructed the Department of Agriculture to investigate methods to eradicate the black cutworm that has infested corn crops. In that connection, the governor has ordered the state to intervene in Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) hearings in an effort to help find suitbale pesticides to control the cutworm.

USDA experts farm exports to rise 5.4 per cent

WASHINGTON— The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has issued a reminder to wheat producers concerning the use of purchase agreements as a marketing option.

Under provisions of the Loan and Purchase Program, producers who hold 1976-crop wheat not under government loan are eligible to sign a purchase agreement with the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC). A purchase agreement signed now, commits CCC to buy 1976-crop wheat next March at the loan rate established in the producer's county. Under the agreement, however, the farmer may still sell the wheat on the market before the March delivery date. Should this occur, the farmer need only inform the CCC of the sale and the purchase agreement would be voided.

Purchase agreements may play a role in the formation of the Food Grain Reserve Program announced April 4 by Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland. The deadline for signing a wheat purchase agreement is Feb. 28, 1978. If a producer signs an agreement on or before Feb. 28, that producer may convert the purchase agreement to an extended loan. If the agreement is converted, the wheat could move directly into the Food Grain Reserve Program and the farmer would be paid an additional $0.20 per bushel to cover the first year's storage costs.

Farmers who wish more information on wheat purchase agreements or the Food Grain Reserve Program should contact County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) offices or Agricultural Service Center.

USDA reminds farmers of agreement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department now expects U.S. farm exports for the year ending Sept. 30 to rise by 5.4 per cent in value from a year earlier despite a forecast decline of 6.7 per cent in volume.

That would mean 111.1 million tons of commodities shipped out, compared to almost 117.8 million a year earlier, but the products would be worth $24 billion compared to last fiscal year's $22.76 billion.

USDA also foresees a jump of one-third, from $10.5 billion to $14 billion, in the value of agricultural imports, shrinking the favorable balance of trade by 18.4 per cent to $10 billion.

While meat imports have been smaller and the increased sugar imports have been cheaper, higher prices for coffee, cocoa, tea, vegetables, fruits and nuts are responsible for the import boosts, a recent analysis said.

Negating beneficial impacts for most farmers from the record $24-billion in exports are the movements in both value and volume of wheat and feed-grains. The value was down nearly 15 per cent to $7.8 billion for the first nine months of the fiscal year and is projected at only $10 billion for the full year, an 18 per cent drop.

Wheat export volume after bumper crops is off about 24 per cent; feedgrain, about 3 per cent.

Other commodities have done well, however. Cotton exports in the first three quarters were up 56 per cent in volume and 106 per cent in value; rice, 21 per cent in volume; vegetable oils, 28 per cent; and animal fats, 37 per cent.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 641.99 million pounds of red meat in cold storage July 31 was 12 per cent below the June 30 mark and 1 per cent less than last year, the Crop Reporting Board says.

Frozen beef holdings totaled 391.1 million pounds, up 2 per cent, and frozen pork, 177.4 million, up slightly.

But supplies of butter in cold storage were more than double, while those of potatoes, cheeses, fruits and eggs also were up sharply.

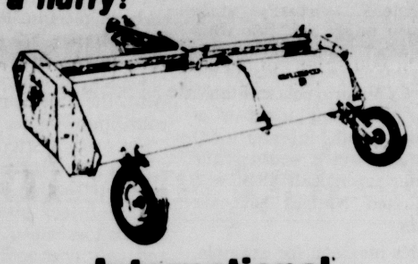
Get rid of crop residue in a hurry!



International 50/60 Shredders

These shredders truly fine-shred heavy, tough cotton, corn or sorghum stalks to speed decomposition, ease your tillage, planting and cultivating work. And they actually require less power to operate because knives are spiral-mounted around the rotor so they hit your crop at different times.

- 2 sizes to make short work of big acreages ... 150 and 170 inches wide.
- Shatter-shear type knives can be reversed to match the job; blunt edge shatters stalks completely.
- Wheels easily adjust up or down for cutting height, in and out to match row spacings; endwise transport for 170-in. model.
- Safety features: full shielded drives, gear case; extended end sheets; front-mounted curtain.

Let's arrange a demonstration. Finance plans available.

A TAX DILEMMA: HOMES

The American taxpayer's favorite "loophole" - deductions for home mortgage interest and real estate taxes - is under the scrutiny of tax reformers.

A person's home is not only his castle but in most cases the only tax shelter he has. And few people seriously suggest abolishing that advantage.

But there is strong sentiment in both the White House and on Capitol Hill for at least reducing the tax advantages for home ownership.

Critics say the advantages go mostly to the affluent, because they can afford more expensive homes with higher mortagages and property taxes. Every home owner benefits, of course, but because the deductions come right off the top of one's income, they are of more value to those in the higher brackets.

Thus one reform being talked about is to change the deductions from income to a credit against income taxes. The credit would be limited to some specified ceiling which would be the same for everybody.

The trouble with this, however, is the wide variation in housing costs around the country. A tax credit that might be liberal for a home owner in a small town where homes are relatively inexpensive and property taxes low could work a hardship in a high-priced area.

Another tax provision that would be chancy to tamper with is the one that allows a person to defer the capital gains tax on the profit from the sale of his residence if he buys a new one at the same or higher cost.

This particular shelter has enabled millions of people to upgrade their standard of living and keep a jump ahead of inflation.

Making the tax advantages of home ownership more equal for people of all incomes is a worthwhile goal. There is also the question of the present system's inherent unfairness to renters, who enjoy no such advantages.

But reform in any of these areas should be approached with the utmost caution, lest a very large monkey wrench be unwittingly thrown into one of this country's most basic and vital industries.

UNEXPECTED HONOR

There are so many public buildings that having one named after you is no very great honor. And so many politicians have been indicted lately that one of them standing trial isn't so unusual.

But the story of former Rep. Edward A. Garmatz, D-Md., is something else. He's been indicted on charges of conspiring to take $15,000 from shipping concerns in return for sponsoring legislation favorable to them.

If all goes according to schedule, he'll be tried in Baltimore — in the Edward A. Garmatz Federal Courthouse. Now there is a singular honor indeed.

HUMAN RIGHTS IN VIETNAM

Human rights is the hottest phrase in Washington, the watchword so far of the Carter Administration.

The formal acknowledgement that all is far from well in human terms in Indochina came just as a presidential mission arrived in Hanoi and Vientiane to inquire into the fate of the Americans still listed as missing in action in Vietnam. Both Hanoi and Vientiane were more receptive than in the past to the U.S. envoys, setting the scene for more missions, more talks, and, Hanoi at least hopes, a resumption of diplomatic relations and perhaps, at some future date, an infusion of Yankee dollars.

The Soviet Union, which was only too ready to supply North Vietnam with arms, trucks, fuel and war supplies during the war in order to knock American out of its toehold in Southeast Asia, is not, apparently, all that ready to help rehabilitate Hanoi and take on another client state. Castro has taught Russia how expensive that can be.

But somewhere down the line there may be major hitches in the exploration of new relationships between Vietnam and the United States. How will Carter's insistence on human rig hts as a condition for foreign aid fit into the equation?

If you live in Monroe County or anywhere else in Missouri, you're right in Vacationland. Instead of driving hundreds or thousands of miles to a vacation spot, you can find one within a few miles of your home, or a few hours driving to other areas of the state.

Over the Fourth of July week end, 282,000 people visited Missouri parks most of them Missourians. It was a new record.

But this didn't begin to tell the story. In Monroe County, blessed with over 800 miles of streams , campers were everywhere on private property. It was the same in other counties of the state.

Be thankful you live in VACATIONLAND.

THIS,TOO,SHALL PASS

It probably won't help much, but it might be worth a try.

If you are suffering from the current heat wave—actually melting down into your shoes—why not try recalling how things were here just a few months ago. For instance, last January. Remember?

Remember when just getting out of the driveway of a morning was a major accomplishment? Remember when the mercury never climbed above 10-above all day long? Remember when snowdirfts were knee-high to a tall Indian? Remember when furnances strained as the wind blew and the snow fell, and the mercury plunged, all at the same time? Remember when schools were closed, businesses slowed and meetings were cancelled because it was too cold, or too snowy, or too slick, or too something else equally as terrible? Remember?

That was just a few months ago...a mere wink of the eye in the passing of time.

So, if you're sweltering and sweating, and suffering while you scratch the mosquito bites and wish for another glass of something cold to drink—just remember? This too shall pass.

KEEP OUT BANKS LOCALLY CONTROLLED

..The sympathies of most people in this area go the president and board of directors of the First National Bank of Mexico, who are opposing purchase of a controlling interest in the bank by Central Bancompany of Jefferson City.

They believe that in most communities where outside control has occurred, the local community has been hurt, because decision power has gone to interests that do not live in the community and are therefore not as interested as local people would be. It has happened in towns not too far from Paris and Mexico. It can happen here. In some, such shift of control has resulted in new banks being started, in which there are local stockholders only.

Many people recall that several years ago. Central Bank of Jefferson City virtually controlled the state government, dictated who or who could not be a candidate for state office, held most of the state funds on deposit without paying any interest.

They don't want control of their money by a Jefferson City of any other outside bank or banking corporation.

It is just another step under which control of our nation is being shifted to the hands of a few people.

A 'CIRCUIT BREAKER' FOR THE ELDERLY

From The Kansas City Star

Inflation and rising property taxes can be a devastating combination for older persons on fixed incomes. In some cases the burden becomes too great; they are forced to give up their homes. Missouri's "circuit breaker," started five years ago to provide a tax reduction for individuals over 65, is considered extremely helpful.

This assistance has been improved for lower income people by the 1977 Legislature. For example persons over 65 with an income of less than $2400 will get an income tax credit or repayment for all of their property taxes or 20 per cnet of their rent, up to a maximum of $500.

Supporters cite an example of how the new tables will help. Under the present law persons with an income of $5200 and tax of $410 receive a reduction of $201. The refund after the change would be $267. The rebate would increase as income diminishes.

Yet not all of those eligible took advantage of this program. To get the full benefits, those who qualify must file for the credits. A concerted state effort needs to be made to bring this positive program to the attention of all those who need it.

HOW MANY MORE ARE THERE?

The death of 42 people in a Tennessee county jail from poison fumes from burning foam rubber pads makes many people wonder just how much of that dangerous stuff there may be elsewhere in public institutions or in the upholstering in furniture in our private homes.

When installed, it was supposed to be almost fireproof. It was said to be difficult to ignite, but when it did catch fire and start smouldering the fumes were deadly.

It appears that highly dangerous materials such as those may be in general use throughout the United States, while the OSHA and the EPA, supposed to make life safer and our environment more healthy, are nit-picking around the nation and often making general nuisances of themselves in more minor and less vital matters.

THE RIGHT TO LIFE

WASHINGTON— Every time you have a "Son of Sam"-type incident, there is an outcry for some kind of national gun legislation which will hopefully prevent guns from getting into the hands of the "sickies," of which this country seems to have more than its share. Then, as soon as the publicity dies down, the matter is forgotten until the next main media event gets people excited again.

The reason you can't get Congress to pass any decent antigun legislation is that one of the strongest lobbies in Washington is the National Rifle Assn., and the weakest groups are the antigun people.

Finstermeister, who has been trying to get Congress to address itself to the problem, may have come up with a solution.

He told me, "We can't get congressmen or senators to budge on gun control because no one pays any attention to us. They think we're kooks."

"You're a voice crying in the wilderness," I admitted.

"But there is a solution. I think the gun control people should hook up with the Right to Life proponents."

"They're against abortion," I said.

"That's true. But why are they against abortion? Because they maintain you're killing someone when you remove a fetus. Since they're interested in saving the life of a person, it follows that they should work for gun control as well."

"But the National Rifle Assn. maintains that guns don't kill people--people kill people."

"That's true, but the majority of people killed were killed with guns. Now there is some question of whether or not a fetus is a person. For the sake of getting the Right to Life people on our side, I'm willing to buy 'the fetus is a person' theory if they'll buy our thesis that a person being shot by a gun is also a live human being and should have the same protection as an unborn baby."

"That's a tough one for the Right to Life lobby. Being antiabortion is one thing. But when you want them to come out against killing real people with guns, you're opening a whole new can of beans."

"It's the same can," Finstermeister insisted. "You're either for life or against it. Whether it's a doctor who takes a life performing an abortion or someone with a handgun drilling his wife or best friend, you're snuffing out someone. The Right to Life people should be able to understand that. Even HEW Secretary Joe Califano should be able to understand it."

"But if you introduce gun control into the Right to Life movement, you might have a split in the organization," I protested. "Many Right to Life people own guns."

"That's not my problem. They have to be consistent. If they're going to march on city halls, state capitals and the halls of Congress to save life, they can't ignore the gun issue. Listen, I have the greatest respect for the Right to Life movement. It is one of the most well-organized lobbies in this country, and they have a lot of clout with legislators. That's why I want them on our side.

"Right now I can only produce four pickets for an antigun bill. But if the Right to Life organization joined forces with us, I could get 10,000 in 24 hours. Those people really care. They could truly give the National Rifle Assn. a run for their money."

"It sounds good on paper," I said. "How are you going to propose the marriage of your two organizations?"

"I'm not. You are, in your column," Finstermeister said.

"Not me," I protested. "My office isn't equipped to handle the telephone calls and mail if I so much as suggested it. You're going to have to do this one on your own."

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

On to 21st CEntury?
Octogenarian George Meany launching National and Worldwide Labor offensives

WASHINGTON— You can bet your security blanket that the nation's most powerful, most feisty curmudgeon, 83-year-old labor chief George Meany, will be president of the AFL-CIO at least until 1980, the Lord permitting. It's official. His national headquarters has just announced he will run again at their December convention.

Since Meany has led the "movement" virtually since 1939, you might ask, "So what else is new?" Lots. Though he's now going on 84, this last of the century's historic political-labor colossi is leading a series of national and international campaigns which would shake up American industrialism and the United Nations just for starters.

At this moment, for example, reports from his national office disclose he's planning a worldwide transportation boycott of the J. P. Stevens company. Meany could hit the nation's second largest textile corporation hard if he could tie up the firm's intercontinental shipments. This he could accomplish with the cooperation of the London-based International Transportworkers' Federation's maritime and dockside units.

They reach all the way from New York and Britain to Hong Kong, Japan, New Zealand and Australia. Meany already has the support of Teddy Gleason's International Longshoremen's Assn. (ILA, AFL-CIO), which virtually crippled the American copper industry during an inland coordinated strike almost a decade ago.

There's been some talk of swinging the Teamsters' Brotherhood into the boycott launched by the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers' Union directed by the union's leadership team of Murray Finley and Jack Sheinkman. Frank Fitzsimmons' independent brotherhood has already endorsed labor's organizing drive against Stevens.

If such a coordinated trans-ocean boycott strategy is launched at the AFL-CIO Executive Council sessions her next week, it will take energy-sapping direction, involved in the tracing of cargo, selection of target freighters and intercontinental communications.

At the same time Meany, his octogenarianism notwithstanding, is preparing to move quickly from his two-day possibly three-day executive council meetings to a pre-Labor Day session of the low profile, but significant and influentiai Labor-Management group. Early in September, he and his apparent heir and second-in-command, the 55-year-old secretary-treasurer Lane Kirkland, will confer at the Hay-Adams Hotel with their industry counterparts led by Reginald Jones, General Electric's chief executive officer.

They'll be chaired by Harvard's shuttling economic diplomat, Prof. John Dunlop. Sometimes, the subcommittee is small. Sometimes they're joined by the government's economic big five -- Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, Treasury's Mike Blumenthal, Commerce's lady Juanita Kreps, presidential economic advisory council chairman Charles Schultze and the still unknown Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage-Price Stability (COWPS). (Which is investigating the steel industry on President Carter' order.)

Actually, the full Labor-Management group has eight labor and eight business leaders. But they meet quarterly in plenum. It's the small committees which re developing the economic papers for eventual aciton on inflation. When the time comes they'll sit with Jimmy Carter.

For every Carter grin there's a Meany scowl. Meany's private complaint is that the President smiles, listens pleasantly, bids his visitors adieu on schedule and then "does nothing."

There are razor-edged differences between these two presidents. For example, Meany wants to shake up the United Nations by pulling the U.S. out of the International Labor-Industry-Government (tripartite) Geneva, Switzerland-based Labor Organization (the ILO). This is the oldest United Nations affiliate. On his 83rd birthday, Aug. 16, Meany and Kirkland went over to the Labor Department for a showdown with Mr. Carter's top foreign policy expert -- national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski and Secretary of State Cyrus VAnce, among others. Starting at 11 a.m., they argued for a long while. The President's foreign service people don't want to leave the ILO; they aren't taking the booing and denigration of the American delegation at the Ilo's Geneva conferences as a diplomatic affront.

But Meany hung right in there. He warned that American delegates would lose face if they stayed in after all the derision and hooting coming from the vast majority of small nations led by the distastefully anti-Semitic, anti-American, Cuban representatives.

Further, it would cost the U.S. over $40 million for the ILO's two-year budget period to support the ILO and its officials in the style to which they never were accustomed until they worked their way into the practically autonomous, self-perpetuating bureaucracy.

There's no doubt that President Carter wants to stay in. This in effect is what Vance and Brzezinski said that morning.

But it would take considerable pressure to get the official AFL-CIO and the Chamber of Commerce delegations back into the mocking ILO annual assembly. The U.S. has given its two years' notice of resignation. Unless there's some withdrawal of the resignation letter by Nov. 5, the U.S. is out of the ILO and that would shake the entire United Nations by setting a dramatic precedent.

Agree with Meany or not, whatever he's eating, drinking and smoking while goin on 84, he ought to bottle and distribute.

Gulf Pipeline May Stay Empty While Producers Sit on Gas

and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON - In the Gulf of Mexico, a hundred miles off the Texas coast, a half-billion-dollar natural gas pipeline is under construction. But thanks to some dubious backstage dealings, it could be a long time before the huge conduit transports anything more combustible than air.

The Federal Power Commission (FPC), faced with the prospect of dwindling gas supplies, officially approved the pipeline project last year. Normally, pipeline builders must have contracts with natural gas producers in hand before construction can begin.

In this case, however, permission to build was granted even though the pipeline companies had no guarantees from gas producers. This, of course, has left the producers in the catbird's seat. They have simply decided to sit on their gas until prices are high enough to assure hefty profits.

The pipeline project, known as the High Island Offshore System (HIOS), is actually a conglomerate of three competing enterprises. The competition banded together and hired a potent Washington law firm – Gallagher, Conner and Boland – to argue their case before the FPC.

Christopher Boland, the principal HIOS attorney, just happens to be a close personal friend of Robert Perdue, the FPC deputy general counsel at the time. Even before the matter actually came before the commission, according to our sources, Boland was huddling in private with the then-chairman, Richard Dunham.

Dunham then ordered his general counsel to make sure the project was approved even though HIOS had no written promises from producers that gas would be provided for the pipeline.

The case was taken away from veteran FPC attorneys who were unanimously opposed to the HIOS plan. They were replaced with a staff lawyer, just one year out of law school, who recommended a go-ahead. The commission subsequently approved the project.

Meanwhile, the natural gas producers are still waiting for prices to rise before they sign contracts with HIOS. FPC sources told us there is little they can do to rectify the situation because the conduit has already been certified.

The commission, incidentally, now specifically requires prior contracts for all pipeline projects.

The pipeline companies, of course, won't lose a penny, no matter how long their titanic tube lies empty. Natural gas consumers will absorb the construction costs and the maintenance expenses, which may reach $120 million a year.

Footnote: Perdue, now the FPC's acting general counsel, told our associate Marc Smolonsky that he never discussed the project with any HIOS lawyers, including Boland. We were unable to reach Dunham; HIOS attorney Boland did not return our calls.

Bourne Again: President Carter is fervently trying to trim some of the the bureaucratic underbrush that keeps growing in Washington. But every swing of his reorganizational ax seems to be blocked by some congressional sponsor or special interest group.

For example, a confrontation is now shaping up between Carter an d House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill over the White House Office of Drug Abuse Policy.

Congress created the drug abuse office last year, but President Ford ignored the lawmakers and refused to activate it. When Carter took over, however, he opened the office and was so enthusiasitc at first that he named one of his favorite advisers, Peter Bourne, to run it.

But the White House reorganization team has now recommended that the office be abolished, the 10-member staff and most of the $1.1-million budget eliminated and Bourne demoted to a special drug aide to Carter.

O'Neill, at present, has the upper hand in the drug dispute because Congress must approve the scuttling of the office. The burly speaker has received complaints from nearly 100 congressmen, including Rep. Lester Wolff, D.-N.Y., chairman of the House Select Committee on Narcotics. O'Neill has promised to discuss the issue with the president next month.

Kim's Overkill: In the early 1970s, North Korean strongman Kim Il-sung decided that if he wanted to remain competetive with economically strong South Korea, he had to import massive amounts of machinery and equipment from the West.

In some cases, he purchased entire factories. From 1972 to 1975, say informed U.S. sources, Kim imported as much Western machinery as China which has 50 times the population. But Kim was unable to put all the technology to use. At this time, say our sources, much of the machinery Kim imported is still sitting in cartons at the factory sites.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Aug. 28th, the 240th day of 1977. There are 125 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1609, the English navigator, Henry Hudson, discovered Delaware Bay.

On this date:

In 1828, the Russian writer, Leo Tolstoy, was born in the province of Tula.

In 1833, the British Parliament banned slavery throughout the British Empire.

In 1913, the Palace of Peace — a gift of the American industrialist Andrew Carnegie — was dedicated at the Hague in Holland.

In 1916, Germany declared war on Romania.

In 1917, 10 suffragettes were arrested as they picketed the White House in Washington.

In 1963, about 200,000 people — blacks and whites — joined in a peaceful civil rights rally in Washington.

Ten years ago: There was a shakeup in the British cabinet with Prime Minister Harold Wilson taking over the reins of the Department of Economic Affairs.

Five years ago: President Richard Nixon announced he would not seek an extension of the draft law when it expired in 1973.

One year ago: Terrorists in Iran killed three American employes of Rockwell International, a United States concern doing work for the Iranian armed forces.

Today's birthdays: Actress Ingrid Bergman is 60 years old. Actor Charles Boyer is 78.

Thought for today: "A wise man changes his mind, a fool never." — a Spanish proverb.

Law allows bond issues without voter approval

By SUE A. MERKNER
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Residents of Missouri cities and counties no longer will need to approve the issuance of revenue bonds by government bodies for the construction of buildings and other industrial facilities.

Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale signed into law recently a bill which allows cities and counties to form corporations to borrow money by issuing revenue bonds without requiring approval by a majority of voters.

The law will enable cities and counties to play a more direct role in the construction of revenue-producing factories, warehouses and other industrial facilities.

Corporations may be formed by three or more persons under the new law. However, under state statutes, the corporations themselves may not operate any manufacturing, industrial or commercial enterprise or engage in corporate farming operations.

The corporations will only have the power to authorize projects and issue industrial construction revenue bonds.

The tax-free revenue bonds are paid off by the revenues the local government receives from leasing or operating the facility built with them.

The bill has been called unconstitutional by several legislators, including Rep. Robert E. Young, R-Carthage, who said the governor should have vetoed the bill because it violates several provisions of the Missouri Constitution.

According to the constitution, all corporations must be organized under general laws, but Young said this bill is a special law.

Additionally, Young said, the constitution says shareholders of the corporation should elect the directors. This bill allows the governing body of the community or municipality which authorized the corporation formation to elect the directors, he said.

"Such a provision is clearly unconstitutional," Young said, because it would allow "some outsider" to elect the corporation directors.

Young also said the new law gives local governments more power than they should be allowed because it permits them to file articles of incorporation themselves.

"Counties and municipalities are creatures of the state and they . . . have only those powers given to them by the state," he said in a constitutional objection to the bill. "This is an attempt to give power, or duty, or responsibility, or all three in excess of those allowed."

Young said the bill violates other provisions of the state constitution by denying shareholders their share of "just compensation" if the corporation folds or dissolves. The bill gives the corporation property to the local governing body upon termination, subject to the rights of creditors.

ABC's top talent scout looks like Charlie's Angel

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pam Dixon bears a faint resemblance to Kate Jackson, one of Charlie's most attractive Angels. But she's not an actress. She looks instead for people who can act.

At 29, she's ABC's top talent scout, holds vice-presidential rank. She scouts talent for shows ranging from TV flicks to series pilots, the latter being a big part of her workload these days.

Miss Dixon, who has signed such knowns as Cloris "Phyllis" Leachman and such unknowns as Rebecca Reynolds for potential series, estimates she interviews eight thespians a day for ABC.

By night, she and her five-member staff are still a-scouting in little theaters or talent showcases like the Comedy Store. Catch a Rising Star and the Improvisation here and on the East Coast.

She laughed when asked if she's ever ambushed by mendicants who leap from the bushes crying, "Alas, poor Yorick, how'd I do?"

"Yes, you do get a few of those," she allowed. "But I've never found anyone that way. I think most people who are serious about acting really do take the time to do it legitimately."

The legit way, she says, is through an agent or by simply mailing a photo, a resume and writing for an interview.

While scuffling actors may feel the sun will rise in the West before ABC guards let them plead their case to the busy Miss Dixon or her associates, she says such isn't true at her emporium.

"We've a policy that we'll see not only anyone sent by an agent, but also anyone who takes the time to send a picture and resume," she says. "We've always had that open-door policy and will continue it...

"If I find them interesting or if their background shows they've really tried, really studied, we'll let them come in and do a three-minute (acting) scene."

Now the bad news: She's never signed what she calls an "off-the-street" actor for a series pilot on the basis of said scene.

But at least it's a foot in the door, says the lady who put her own foot in TV's door in 1968, as secretary to the head of casting at CBS here. She later became CBS' casting director here.

Murder sentence clears man

FARMINGTON, Mo. (AP) —Michael Lee Dunn, 22, already serving life imprisonment in another slaying, has been sentenced to life again for a murder for which another man served a year in jail.

Dunn was sentenced Monday by Judge Stanley Murphy of the St. Francois County Circuit Court in the beating death of Mrs. Lydia Marlow, 81, of Bonne Terre, Mo., on June 21, 1976.

Dunn had previously been sentenced to a life term in an August 1976 stabbing. Police say Dunn admitted both killings.

Billy England, 19, of Bonne Terre had been held in lieu of $50,000 bond while awaiting trial in the murder of Mrs. Marlow. He was released July 1, after Dunn confessed to police.

England's attorney, John Williams, said England might have been convicted on the basis of a statement wrung out of him in questioning by the Highway Patrol two days after the killing.

"They kept telling me that they found blood on the clothes they took from me and that my fingerprints were all over the house," England said. "I said there was no way I could have been there."

England said he broke down when "they started talking about God and religion," implying he would go to hell for what he had done.

However, Wolliams said the case "didn't add up" and his firm hired a private detective and began an extensive investigation of the case.

England passed a polygraph test in June of this year and was released after witnesses came forward to testify that Dunn had killed Mrs. Marlow.

HAPPINESS is a trophy bigger than you are. The six-foot first-place trophy for the "Cajun Classic" dwarfs Kurt Clay, son of one of the team managers in the annual slow-pitch softball tournament held in Opelousas, La. Teams from seven U.S. Sunbelt states, Canada and Mexico participated in the tourney sponsored by Lou Ana Foods.

"Failing to Learn-Learning to Fail"

"Failing to Learn - Learning to Fail," a one-hour "NBC Reports" special examining a problem that is gaining wide recognition as one of the reasons for delinquent behavior, will be presented Tuesday, Aug. 30 (9-10 p.m. DST), on the NBC Television Network. Announcement of the program was made today by Lester M. Crystal, Executive Vice President, NBC Television News.

Mike Gavin, producer of the special, says: "An estimated eight million school children in the United States have learning disabilities. They come from all walks of life, all ethnic groups, all geographic areas. They are youth's walking wounded, and recent studies of delinquent populations have shown up to a 90 per cent correlation between learning disabilities and delinquent behavior."

Filming in Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Denver and New York, the special will explore these questions: What are learning disabilities? Where do they come from? How do they manifest themselves? What can be done about them? NBC News correspondent Betty Rollin is the reporter on the program.

"Failing to Learn-Learning to Fail" will be co-sponsored by Textron Inc. and the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., both through J. Walter Thompson Company.

On the special, Rollin will explore through the lives of four children the disability syndrome -- how words, symbols and pictures entering healthy eyes and ears become strangely distorted, reversed or upended in the world of the learning disabled.

What is the underlying disorder? "Nobody knows for sure," says Gavin, "but medical experts have given it a name: Minimal Brain Dysfunction. It means the brain does not function 'normally.'

"The program will detail through a minute examination of the lives of these four disabled children just how this puzzling problem in the brain becomes a social problem and how it leads to anti-social, delinquent behavior. The process is called 'The Failure Syndrome.'"

The special will show how persistent failure in school leads to emotional problems, then to behavior problems and then -- all too often -- to defiance and

Final presentation of series to be shown honoring Jack Benney

After inveigling his way into performing at a benefit run by the wives of four famous Hollywood personalities, Jack Benny finds that his role is referee at a wrestling match between American heavyweight champion Count Billy Varga and California junior heavyweight champion Gene Le Bell, on "The Jack Benny Show," Tuesday, Aug. 30 (7:00- 8:30 p.m. ST) on the CBS Television Network. The show is the final presentation in the series of four rebroadcasts of television performances which demonstrate the artistry of the late master comedian.

In the episode, which was originally presented on "The Jack Benny Program" August 25, 1965, the benefit committee, composed of Mesdames Milton Berle, Kirk Douglas, Groucho Marx and Phil Silvers, fearful that Benny will want to play his violin at the event, arrange for his role as referee. Undaunted, the comedian assures them that he is an expert -- which remains to be proved.

The show, like the previous three in the special series, was written by the Emmy Award-winning team of Sam Perrin, George Balzer, Al Gordon and Hal Goldman, with Fred DeCordova as producer-director and Irving A. Fein as executive producer.

Jack Klugman stars as "Quincy" in series

Jack Klugman stars in the title role of "Quincy," an expert medical examiner whose talent for intuitively spotting miniscule medical clues is augmented by a driving determination to know the truth.

The one-hour mystery series is a blend of drama and humor that focuses on topical cases that come to the attention of the little- known practitioners of medical jurisprudence in the Los Angeles City Coroner's office.

The series has several co-stars. Garry Walberg plays Police Lt. Frank Monahan, who is not always helpful in Quincy's determined effort to unravel the mysteries of a case. John S. Ragin is Dr. Robert Astin, who walks the thin line between his administrative responsibilities and keeping his maverick assistant, Quincy, in line. Robert Ito is Quincy's hard-working lab analyst, Sam Fujiyama. Val Bisoglio plays Danny Tovo, the owner of Quincy's favorite restaurant and a devoted chum. And Joseph Roman appears in the role of Police Sgt. Brill.

Janis Joplin tells own story in music

In 1960 Janis Joplin was an outsider, one of the unpopular girls at Jefferson High in Port Arthur, Tex. A few short years later she was on the pinnacle of the popular music world, one of the most famous rock and blues singers of the era, adored by millions of fans around the world. The grueling pace of a life at the top took its toll, but at the time of her death in 1970 her fame was undiminished.

Her odyssey is told -- in her own words and music -- in "Janis," a musical documentary that will be telecast onNBC (12-1:30 a.m. DST), following the Friday, Sept. 2, presentation of "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson." (NOTE: "The Midnight Special" will be preempted on this date.)

In 1966 Joplin became the vocalist with Big Brother and the Holding Company, an association that lasted three years and made her a star. Thereafter, she performed on her own with backup groups.

This film shows Janis in performance at Woodstock (1967); in Frankfurt, Germany (on a 1969 tour); during the Festival Express Train tour of Canada in 1970; and in interviews on Swedish and British television.

In September, 1970, she returned to Port Arthur for the 10th reunion of her high school class and a large part of the town's population turned out to see the school's most famous alumna. A reporter, knowing she had not been one of the popular girls in her class, asked her if she had attended her senior class prom. "No," she replied, "nobody ever asked me."

"Janis," a 1974 Universal Pictures release, was produced by Crawley Films, and directed and edited by Howard Alk and Seaton Findlay.

550 pound bear "Ben" stars with Dan Haggerty

"The Life and Times of Grizzly Adams" is the story of a mountain man who has forsaken civilization for a life in the wilderness of the Northwest where a grizzly bear is his constant companion. The series begins its second season on NBC-TV in September.

Dan Haggerty stars in the title role as James "Grizzly" Adams, a man who in the 1880s adopted a new life in the wilderness to avoid imprisonment for a crime he did not commit.

Denver Pyle co-stars as Mad Jack, a gruff, wizened fur-trapper friend, and Don Shanks plays Adam's blood brother, Nakuma, a Crow Indian who once saved his life. Also appearing in the series is the ever-present Ben, a 550 pound bear.

Thursday Night Football??

NEW YORK (AP) — The possibility of Thursday night and, perhaps, Sunday night football appears more and more likely as the National Football League's talks with the three networks continue.

The NFL's TV contracts with NBC, CBS and ABC all run out at the close of this season. The current talks are centering on four-year contracts to cover the 1978-81 seasons. It is probable that NBC will again end up with a basic American Conference package, CBS with a National Conference package and ABC with its Monday night games.

Sources say, however, that this time around the NFL is offering a fourth package to include about a half dozen Thursday and possibly Sunday night games. And to sweeten the pot, the NFL is reportedly offering rights to the first and fourth Super Bowls in the four-year deal to whomever accepts the Thursday night package.

In other words, whichever network accepts the risks involved in televising football against prime time programming on Thursday and-or Sunday nights, and also agrees to the added expense, also gets two of the four Super Bowls currently being negotiated.

Sources say that CBS, currently running third in the ratings game, is definitely interested in the fourth package. NBC is interested in Thursday nights but wary of Sunday nights. ABC, which has the strongest prime time schedule, may be reluctant to give up some of its entertainment programming for another night of football. At the same time, however, ABC has been coveting the Super Bowl for some time, and may find the lure of getting two of them too much to resist.

NBC'S Olympic heads replaced

It may not be charitable to offer such speculation but it seems a remarkable coincidence that, at a time when NBC's contract with the Soviet Union for TV rights to the 1980 Summer Olympics is due to come under Congressional scrutiny, the network executives most reponsible for the deal have both been replaced.

Carl Lindemann Jr. left as vice president of sports a few months ago and now Bob Howard has been replaced as president of NBC+TV. Lindemann and Howard were the prime movers for NBC in the Olympic deal. If Congress should find some cause for concern in the contract and call NBC on the carpet, the network can now point out that "those responsible are no longer with us." Very convenient.

Fall TV defense shapes-up

The new fall season is fast approaching with network programmers, like quarterbacks looking over the defense, switching signals, juggling personnel and desperately looking for an opening in enemy defenses.

NBC, using the growing popularity of boxing as a weapon, scheduled a blockbuster fourfight show for Sept. 14 to run smack against ABC's special two-hour premier of "Charlie's Angels", its hit female detective show. The "Night with the Heavyweights" features top contenders Ken Norton and Jimmy Young in separate bouts.

Now comes CBS with a programming move of its own. CBS will present "Night of the Champions", another four-bout boxing show that is scheduled one night before NBC's fight card. Carlos Palomino defends his WBC world welterweight title and Danny Lopes defends his WBC world featherweight championship in the key bouts.

Sugerland Express" stars Goldie Hawn

Oscar winner Goldie Hawn (Best Supporting Actress, "Cactus Flower," 1969) stars as a desperate, problem-plagued young woman who takes on the establishment in a last-ditch attempt to keep her family together, in "The Sugarland Express," an off-beat comedy adventure on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" Sept. 3 (8-10 p.m. DST; repeat of)11-8-75).

Lou Jean Poplin (Hawn begins her crime spree by breaking her reluctant husband, Clovis, out of a minimum security prison, although he only has four months left on a sentence for petty larceny.

Traveling in an old, slow-moving vehicle, they attract the attention of Slide, a Texas highway patrolman who attempts to have the car pull over. A chase ensues when Lou Jean wrests control of the auto and then drives it into a tree.

Unhurt, the two turn on the officer as he seeks to lend assistance, and they take command of him and his car.

After quite a bit of official confusion, the Highway Patrol discovers that one of its cars has been hijacked and an officer has been taken hostage.

Still determined to get to the town of Sugarland and rescue their imperiled son, the lawbreakers and their sympathetic but complaining hostage lead a parade of more than 200 police, newsmen and private cars across the state.

Internationally renowned fashion models double as undercover agents

Cornelia Sharpe and Jayne Kennedy portray internationally famous fashion models who lead double lives as American espionage agents in "Cover Girls," a 90-minute adventure drama which will be the "NBC Movie of the Week" Sunday, Sept. 4 (8:30-10 p.m. DST; repeat of 5-18-77) Don Galloway is featured and Vince Edwards guest-stars.

Monique Lawrence and Linda Allen, a pair of high-fashion models, combine their globe-girdling photo assignments with undercover work as United States agents. When not in front of a camera they are on the trail of Bradner, an expatriate embezzler, who is also targeted for a crime syndicate kidnapping. They are assigned by their boss, James Andrews, to foil the abduction and deliver the clever Bradner into the hands of the American authorities. But an unexpected complication arises when the refugee financier falls in love with Linda.

Failing to Learn:

delinquency. Gavin says: "First, you take a youngster of average or above-average intelligence who cannot learn in the same way as the children around him. Then, put him in a classroom where he is doomed to fall behind. He starts picking up labels from the other children -- dummy, troublemaker, weirdo.

"He starts acting out, hitting back. He makes friends of other troublemakers who can't make it in the classroom. He thinks of himself as dumb. His parents think he's lazy. His teachers call him uncooperative.

"For most such kids, it doesn't take 12 years of schooling to get the message. So they drop out -- or get kicked out of school. All too often, the children end up behaving in a way that fulfills everyone's worst expectations. Police blotters are filled with the names of many of these people. Properly diagnosed and treated at an early age, most children with learning disabilities can overcome their handicap."

The program will examine some of the ways each parent, each teacher, each interested observer might spot some of these youngsters, before too much damage is done, and will explore some of the methods, theories and techniques by which people and institutions can organize to reduce such a tragic loss in human values.

NBC

Jaime Sommers is "Bionic Woman"

Jaime Sommers was a top-seeded tennis pro -- until she was critically hurt in a parachute accident. Devastatingly injured, she was rebuilt into the world's first bionic woman by Oscar Goldman, director of the Office of Scientific Investigation, and Dr. Rudy Wells, chief of research at the OSI.

Both of her legs, her right arm and the parts of her right ear were replaced with bionic materials, giving her the ability to run 60 miles an hour, lift a ton and hear a whispered conversation from half a mile away.

Following her bionic surgery, Jaime returned to her hometown of Ojai, Calif., where she lives with the mother and stepfather of her childhood sweetheart, Col. Steve Austin, the world's first bionic man. Jaime teaches school to eighth and ninth graders at the Ventura Air Force base, but also accepts assignments from Oscar Goldman when her special bionic abilities are needed.

Lindsay Wagner, as Jaime Sommers, and Richard Anderson, as Oscar Goldman, star. Featured are Martin E. Brooks as Dr. Rudy Wells and Martha Scott and Ford Rainey as Steve Austin's mother and stepfather, Helen and Jim Elgin.

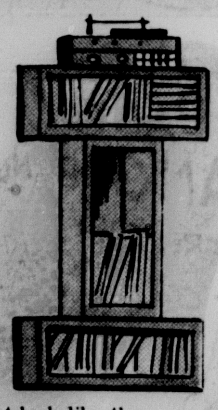
PONYTAIL ◆ ◆ BY LEE HOLLEY

DEAR FOLKS:

Know what I just saw? My friend, Bill Leahy, did something that he doesn't even know he did. Got that? Anyway, I was visiting his house and you should see how he has his turntable and FM receiver set up. It's fantastic.

Bill has three of those cubes



that look like they are made of pressed wood and sorta tan looking. Well, they really aren't cubes, they are more like rectangles, 18 inches high, maybe 12 inches wide.

He has one lying down on the floor, one centered on that, upright, and the other one lying long ways on top of that. Sitting on the top cube is the receiver and then the turntable on top of this.

You could arrange these any way you wanted. Stand two upright and one longways. Have them all lengthwise. Any height or width, space them along the wall.

Got the picture? Now for the zinger. Guess where he has all of his records? In the cubes. They fit perfectly.

It really looks nice.

I thought it was such a good idea. Maybe it's not new to you but I certainly would never have thought of it myself.

This would be a great idea for a kid's room. The cubes can be painted to match any decor and are relatively inexpensive.

It seemed like such a brilliant idea, I had to pass it on to you. Hope you can use it.

If the sun isn't shining where you are, know that I want to share our sunshine with you.

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

ALL KEYED UP!

DEAR HELOISE:

If you have problems with your keys, try my idea.

You will need a four-inch-wide by 10-inch-long board, five cup hooks, yarn, rickrack or other decorations (if you want) and hooks to hang the board.

Place the cup hooks on the board two inches apart. Then decorate the board with the yarn and other decorations.

Hang the board on the wall and you will have a handy place to keep your keys.

A S-L-O-W BURN!

DEAR HELOISE:

I can't ever seem to get my gas stove on a real low flame without the flame blowing out or burning my food.

Trying to s-l-o-w cook those all-day black-eyed peas was impossible...

Then I borrowed a grill top from another unused burner. It lifted the pan from the flame and slowed the cooking!

The pan rests steady on this double grill, but for safety I use a back burner.

I'm a slow-cooker but not a slow-learner.

MY BOOKMARK

DEAR HELOISE:

For about one and one-half years now my brother, Mom and I have been wanting to send something into your column, but everything we tried Mom said she had gotten from your column!

Finally I decided to send in one of my own ideas.

I'm always losing my bookmarks. So, when reading a library book, I stick my bookmark in the card pouch at the back of the book.

This way the bookmark stays in its place when not in use but is right at hand when needed again.

DEEP-DISH TIP

DEAR HELOISE:

This is for women who start to make a casserole or cobbler and find that their dish isn't deep enough.

Take a piece of aluminum foil that is large enough to go completely around the top of your dish. Fold it in half lengthwise and place around the top of the dish. Fold the ends together to fasten.

This leaves room for the cobbler to rise without running over the sides.

ON THE WING!

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's one for bird lovers!

My parents have a pet shop and, as will happen, the birds sometimes manage to escape their cage.

My mom solved the problem of catching them. It's usually easy to get within a foot or two of the birds, but using a net can damage their wings and legs.

Mother simply lays a lightweight cloth over the bird and can gently reach under the cloth and pick the bird up and replace it in the cage.

No harm done and saves a lot of time chasing the bird from place to place.

THE SHELL GAME

DEAR HELOISE:

When I bake a pie shell, I use two glass pie plates. One nine-inch and one eight-inch.

I place the eight-inch glass plate over the crust in the nine-inch plate and bake.

To remove the eight-inch pie plate when the shell is brown, I lift it slightly with a fork, then a hot pad.

This shell may be filled several days later if the top pie plate is left on, as the crust will stay fresh and not get soggy even in humid weather.

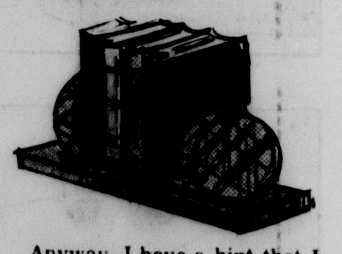
I have never had a failure in the years I have done this.

B. K.

DON'T SHELVE IT!

DEAR HELOISE:

I am only 10 years old but I read your column every Sunday — or I try to — because you see, my sister and I always fight over your column.



Anyway, I have a hint that I think is very unique. Get one of those round oatmeal containers. Glue on the lid and cover the box with adhesive-backed paper.

Then cut out a section of the container and glue the opposite side on a long board to hold it steady.

Now you can put your books in the open section and you have a homemade bookrack.

Deadline near on coal contract

Sikeston feeling pressure of slow court ruling

By Ron Porter

The failure of the Missouri Supreme Court to rule on the legality of Sikeston's plans for a 235 megawatt power plant is beginning to worry city officials who must soon decide whether or not to sign a coal contract with Western Fuels, Inc.

Western Fuels is a nonprofit organization that is planning to open a mine in Southern Illinois to supply coal for power plants in Sikeston and Kansas City, Kan.

But the deadline for deciding whether or not Sikeston will participate in the project is drawing close.

"It's getting down to the point where we're going to have to fish or cut bait, and we don't want to do that until we hear from the Supreme court, "E. R. "Dick" Inman said Friday. Inman is director of the director of the Board of Municipal Utilities.

."We don't want to get any more money involved in this thing than we have to," he added.

Signing the contract will obligate the city-owned utility for thousands of dollars, money which would be lost if the court rules against the city.

That poses a dilemma for the city. Should it spend the money and take the chance the court will rule in its favor, or wait and hope Western Fuels does not go ahead without Sikeston.

"We could be (in trouble) if it got too close (to the deadline) ... we could have to wait so long it would have to go by the wayside," Inman said.

Inman said the group has an option on the mine site, but a number of studies have yet to be done to determine the amount of coal there and its quality. Those are some of the resons for the approaching deadline.

The mine is slated to begin producing coal in late 1979 or early 1980, just before the new power plant goes into operation.

The massive power plant will dominate the city's skyline. The boiler plant will be 210 feet high, about 10 feet higher than the smoke stack at the present plant.

The smoke stack at the new plant will be 450 feet high.

The plant will cost $150 million to build. That money includes the cost of land, construction, start up money, legal and financing fees and the effect of inflation over the next several years.

The facility will be located on 455 acres of land north of Compress Road and west of the present steam plant.

Although most of the property was annexed to the city limits Jan. 13, the board has not exercised its option to buy the site. Again, the holdup is with the court.

The coal will be brought to Sikeston by rail and stored in a stock pile that will cover 18 acres, Inman said. The stockpile will hold 600,000 tons of coal.

He added that the site is designed to handle trains up to 100 cars in length and have all 100 cars on the site so they will not be blocking roads, while waiting to unload.

Inman said the city had looked into the feasibility of having the plant built on the Mississippi river, barging the coal to the site, and then transmitting the power back to Sikeston.

One of the big problems with that is using river water for cooling.

"Its just as cheap to use ground water and cooling towers if you have a lot of ground water," he said. "According to the Environmental Protection Agency, you have to go to such elaborate means to build your intake facilities for water supply in the river that it's so expensive you're better off going to cooling towers."

Bringing the coal in by barge would be cheaper, he said, but then he added the coal is coming such a short distance, that it does not make much difference.

Sikeston plans to have the power plant in operation in the early 1980s with the excess power being sold to 11 other communities in Missouri. Those communities will drop off the power grid over the years until aobut the year 2000 when Sikeston will be using all the power the plant generates.

The sale of the power to the other towns is what the court suit is all about.

The suit was brought by Charles Mitchell of Sikeston and Don C. Diven of Trenton and later joined by Arkansas-Missouri Power Co., Sikeston was later joined by REA Electric Cooperatives and the public counsel for the Public Service Commission.

The court must rule on two challenges: Whether or not Sikeston is building the power plant for the benefit of Sikeston or just so it can sell power to other communities and whether or not the cities involved have the authority to obligate themselves to buy power over long periods of time.

City officials have expressed confidence in the outcome of the suit, but apparently were unprepared for the lengthy delay in the court ruling.

The judge, who city officials believe will make the ruling, went on vacation in July and did not return until August., The court went into recess in August and no ruling was issued.

Inman said he hopes the ruling will come early in September.

"If the court would hurry up and act, we could make the decisions and get the thing going," he said.

OUR 68TH YEAR | NUMBER 154

Carter wants public support on Panama

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter predicts the Senate will ratify his Panama Canal treaty and says he will "go to the nation with a fireside chat" to win approval because "the consequences would be very severe" if the treaty is rejected.

The President said he is concerned about public sentiment against the pact. He called it his personal responsibility to 'sell the treaty to the American people and to the Senate to lessen the chances of violence in Latin America.

Carter spoke in an interview made public Saturday by the White House. He was questioned Friday by editors and broadcast news directors from across the country who met with him in the Cabinet Room. The interview was one of a continuing series for out-of-town journalists.

The President gave no date or time for his fireside chat. Barry Jagoda, his media and public affairs adviser, said arrangements for the presidential address have not been completed.

"It will not be this week or next," Jagoda said.

The address is expected to be broadcast nationally.

In the interview, the President also said:

—If the United States grants full diplomatic recognition to mainland China "it is undoubtedly going to be well into the future." But Carter said Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance's visit to Peking last week was "very encouraging."

As a result of Vance's meetings with Chinese leaders, Carter said, "I think they understand our position better and we understand theirs."

—There is "a growing impatience" with lack of progress toward peace in the Middle East. "I think that any nation in the Middle East that proved to be intransigent would suffer at least to some degree the condemnation of the rest of the world," Carter warned.

"I have to say there is going to be a great deal of disillusionment on our part in the Middle East and around the world if some progress is not demonstrated within this year."

—He is in no hurry with his other foreign policy initiatives. In addition to relations with China, Carter mentioned strategic arms limitation talks, a comprehensive nuclear test ban, U.S. relations with Cuba and efforts for black majority rule in southern Africa.

"I feel like I have got time," he said. "I don't feel under any constraint ... to act precipitously."

Taylor in serious condition

ST. LOUIS -- Elmer Taylor, 46, of Bell City was reported in serious condition Saturday night in the intensive care unit of Firmin Desloge Hospital at St. Louis University with wounds suffered when he was stabbed.

A spokesman for the hospital said no further information could be released Saturday night.

The stabbing incident occurred about 9:30 p.m. Friday in front of the home of Taylor's former wife, Jean Taylor, of 208 Edwards St. in Sikeston, allegedly by his 13-year-old son.

Taylor was found lying face down in the street outside the home, with a hunting knife stuck in his back.

He suffered two stab woulds, noe that reportedly partially severed his spinal cord.

The knife had a blade about six and one-half to seven inches long.

4 injured in SeMo accidents

Four persons received minor injuries in two area traffic accidents Friday and Saturday, the highway patrol said Saturday night.

Three persons received minor injuries in a two-vehicle accident at 1:40 p.m. Friday on Route AA, a half mile north of Brosley.

The accident occurred when an eastbound pickup truck driven by Bonnie Norden, 37, of Brosley failed to yield the right-of-way and collided with a northbound car driven by Joanne Wyrick Dabbs, 42, or Brosley.

The driver of the Norden truck and her son, Michael, 13, were taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff with minor injuries. The driver of the Dabbs car was

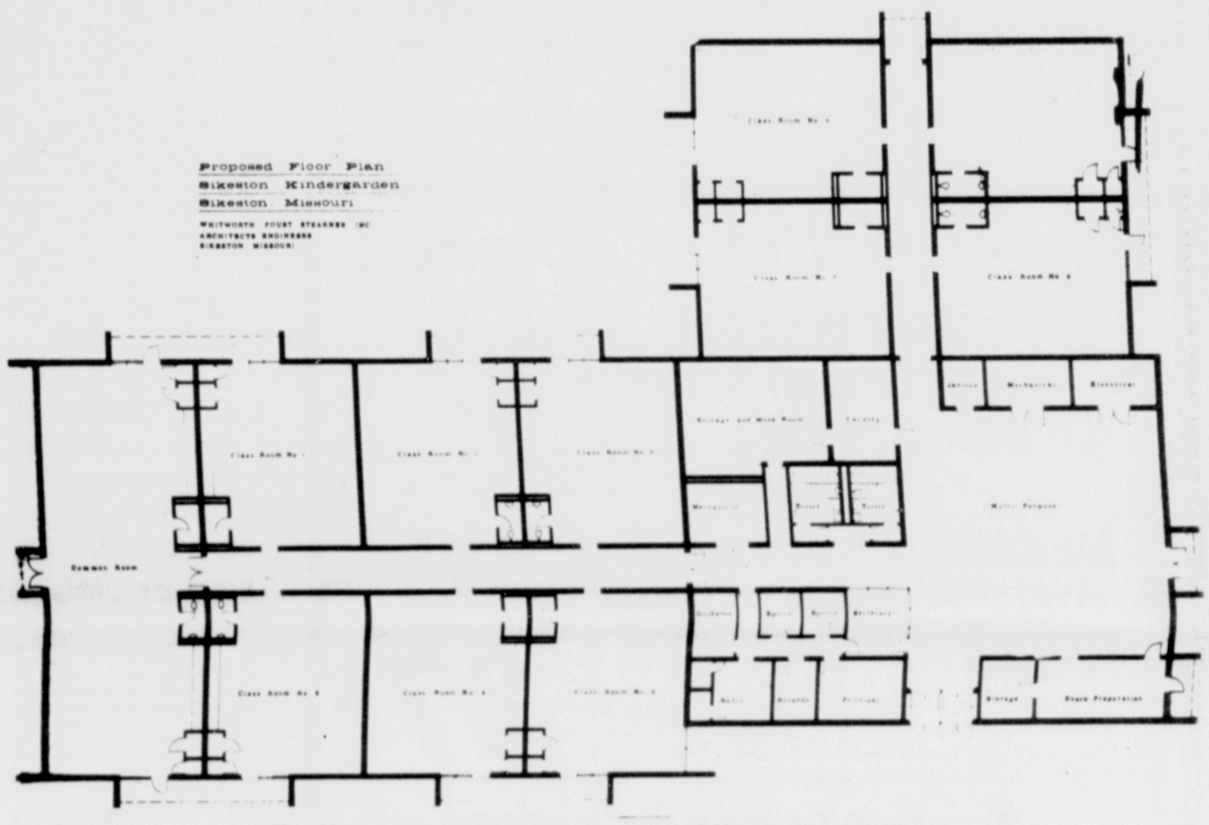
CB, tape player and rings stolen

A Citizens Ban Radio, a tape player and some rings were among items reported stolen to Sikeston police Friday.

Wilma Jean Lett of Morley told officers that a CB radio, valued at $169, was taken from her car between 5 and 9 p.m. Friday, while her car was parked at the Grecian Steak House, 531 Greer. Entry to the car was reported to have been gained by forcing the passenger door open.

A tape player, valued at $50, was reported taken from a garage at 810 Gulf St., about 6 p.m. Friday, while the owner was out delivering a car.

Marie Copeland, 842 Cambridge, told police that three rings, valued at $225, were taken from her residence between Aug. 20 and 26. A former house guest is being sought for questioning in the matter, police reports said.



Floor plan drawing of the proposed kindergarten complex.

Board approves architect's drawings of new kindergarten

The architect for the new Kindergarten facility unveiled drawings of the proposed structure during a special Sikeston R-6 School Board meeting at noon Friday.

The board gave its approval of the elevation and floor plan drawings made by Bob Stearnes of Whitworth, Foust and Stearnes, Inc.

Stearnes said the design has been kept simple, avoiding expensive materials that would push up the cost of the structure.

The cost of construction is estimated between $730,000 and $740,000. The board is seeking an $800,000 bond issue on Sept. 20 with the remaining $60,000 to $70,000 going for the cost of building a road and utilities to the site.

Stearnes said the building will be well insulated, especially in the roof, which is the main heat loss area.

He said the heating system to be used has not been decided, but he is leaning toward individual electric heating units for each room.

He said that would mean low maintance costs and high reliability. If one heating unit goes out, the whole school does not have to close down, he said.

He said heat pumps used at other schools in the district sometimes break down and are expensive to repair. They are so complicated that a specially trained repairman must come from St. Louis, to fix them.

The building will sit on the west side of the 12-acre lot. The property is located about 1,200 feet east of North Main Street, along the yet to be extended Salcedo Road.

Stearnes told the borad that wage rates have been set for the building. They range from 4.75 per hour to 8.45 per hour. Stearnes said the rates are high, but reasonably near what the board wanted.

The 22,000-square-foot, concrete block building will house about 400 five-year-olds and will replace an aging wooden structure located on airport property.

The board approved a resolution calling for the bond issue election on Sept. 20, a legalism required by the bonding attorneys. The board had previously agreed on the Sept. 20 election date.

Polling places for the kindergarten bond issue will be: Ward one including Park, Airport and McMullin precincts, at the middle school gym on Tanner Street; ward two, including Allen Precinct at Lee Hunter Elementary School on Baker Lane and Sunset Precinct at Lincoln School, 229 Westate Street; ward three, including Delmar and Clayton precincts at Southwest Elementary School on West Murray Lane; ward four, including Armory Precinct at the Senior High School, 200 Pine st. and Broadway Precinct at Southeast Elementary School on Ables Road.

In Miner, votes will be cast at Miner Town Hall. In Morehouse, balloting will be at the high school building for ward one, ward two and Salcedo precincts.

In other action, the board raised the insurance on school buildings by $2 million. The buildings have been insured for $10 million.

Keith Ziegenhorn of Ziegenhorn Insurance, which handles the insurance, said replacement costs have gone up by about $5 per square foot over the past year.

District buildings were underinsured by 20 to 25 per cent, he said.

The board agreed to allow the sale of excess property accumulated over the past few years by the school system.

The property, 10 pieces of equipment, most of which have been in storage, include a milling machine and electronic testing equipment.

The money realized from the sale will go to upgrading of existing equipment.

Landers in stable condition

Samuel Landers, 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Landers of Taleapoosa, was reported in stable condition Saturday night in the intensive care unit of Delta Memorial Community Hospital at Sikeston.

Landers underwent surgery Friday morning, following an accident at 8:05 a.m. Friday at the Landers farm, two miles south of Taleapoosa.

Landers was apparently unloading corn out of a truck into an auger-type elevator when the grain auger fell on him.

Ag department favors letting meat be mechanically deboned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department intends to propose once more that meat processors be allowed to add bits of bone and odd scraps of meat to hot dogs and other processed food.

Almost a year ago, after consumer groups obtained a court decision, USDA canceled its interim approval for the use of "mechanically deboned meat" in food products and withdrew plans for changes in federal regulations to allow the practice on a permanent basis.

But a 12-member panel of government experts has completed a study of mechanical deboning and, for the most part, has given its approval for the process to be resumed.

Asst. Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman, who oversees USDA food and consumer programs, said in an interview that the new proposed rules are being drafted and probably will be announced next month.

Department officials had argued last year that mechanical deboning allowed the salvage of much beef and pork attached to neck bones, ribs and other parts of cattle and hog carcasses which otherwise would end up on the garbage heap.

Up to one billion pounds of additional meat could be saved annually by the process and thus help ease family food bills, they said.

But critics said the process — basically the practice of grinding up meat and bones and forcing the mixtures through sieves — resulted in so much finely ground bone in the product that it raised questions as to its potential effect on human health.

Ms. Foreman, who prefers the title, said the public will be given ample opportunity to comment on the renewed proposal and that no final decision on the use of mechanically deboned meat will be made until all views are considered.

"We think that we have largely resolved most of the issues that were raised previously," she said. "But I expect a little hell from all sides."

The meat industry wants the process because it means more can be salvaged from carcasses of cattle and hogs slaughtered for the consumer market. Some consumer groups, however, still have reservations.

Dr. Sidney Wolfe of the Public Citizens' Health Research Group, initially set up by consumer advocate Ralph Nader, said Saturday that he had not read the entire report.

CIRCUIT COURT

CHARLESTON -- Two men received prison sentences handed down in Mississippi County Circuit Court Friday by Judge Marshall Craig, and three others were placed on supervised probation.

Kid Jackson of Charleston was given concurrent three-year sentences on amended charges of second degree burglary and stealing, reduced from armed robbery. Probation on the charges, stemming from the theft of $12 March 10 from George Roach with a .25-caliber pistol, was denied. Jackson entered a guilty plea to the amended charges July 27.

Gary Thurmond Tatum of East Prairie was sentenced to concurrent five-year terms in custody of the state Department of Corrections on burglary and stealing charges. Probation for Tatum, who pleaded guilty to entering the Thurman Moriarity home at East Prairie on April 23, was denied. He was given credit for 93 days served in jail.

Three-year probation was given Michael Ray Weems of rural Charleston following a stay on a three-year prison sentence for stealing. Weems, who pleaded guilty to stealing by deceit in connection with taking a check on May 6 from Cook Grain Co. for 33,330 gross pounds of soybeans which did not exist, was ordered to make restitution of $8,433.74 to Cook Grain Co. within 30 days.

Junior Weems of East Prairie pleaded not guilty to a stealing by deceit charge, and trial was set for Sept. 21.

Bobby Lee Ware and Ronnie Kay Bostic of Charleston were placed on three-year supervised probation on burglary charges, stemming from a June 6 break-in at the Alberteen Johnson home in Charleston. Two-year sentences for each were stayed.

Barry Cleaves of Charleston entered a voluntary plea of guilty to second-degree burglary and stealing (amended from armed robbery), and his oral application for probation was taken under advisement. Cleaves is accused of taking $15 from Luther Dunn March 10 and is to report back to Circuit Court Sept. 13.

Tyrone Price was sentenced to one year in Mississippi County jail on a charge of take, steal and carry away (reduced from armed robbery). The charge was filed in connection with a $647 robbery Nov. 12, 1975 from Kenneth Vernon Lawrence at a Quick-Sak store in Sikeston.

Trial for William Graham, charged with arson in a change of venue case from Scott County, was set for Oct. 12. Graham is accused of setting fire March 30 to a mobile home on Route ZZ in Scott County, owned by Elizabeth Northington.

Rocky Lane Allcock pleaded guilty to a charge of malicious destruction (reduced from attempted burglary), and received a six-month jail sentence with credit for 33 days. Allcock pleaded guilty to breaking a window July 1 at Slaten's Standard Station at Charleston.

Changes of venue to Scott County were granted George Johnson, charged with assault with intent to kill and selling a contro a controlled substance. Johnson is accused of assaulting Soloman Hatchett April 23 with a .30-caliber rifle and selling heroin to David Smith at Charleston on Sept. 7, 1976.

Richard L. Douglas and Flora Mae Douglas.

Thomas Smotherman and Elizabeth E. Smotherman, with custody of one child awarded to Mrs. Smotherman and Smotherman to pay $20 per week for child support and receive visitation privileges.

ACCIDENT PATIENTS

Accident patients treated Friday in the Emergency room at Missouri Delta Community Hospital include:

Arnold Ray Kidd, Charleston, cut left hand on grinder; Debra Owen 22, of Joliet, Ill., possible first or second degree burns on right leg after radiator blew up, splashing hot water on leg; Stephen B. Duke, 5, Sikeston, cut arm on glass; Clint Jobe, 6, Bertrand, bruises from accident on mini-bike; Riley Brown Jr., 50, Matthews, injured little finger in pulley; Craig Welker, 23, Sikeston, cut right little finger in elevator door; Shirley Ling, 39, New Madrid, tripped over skate board and injured wrist; Charles Palmer, 41, New Madrid, hit in forehead while playing softball, two-inch cut; Brian West, 13, Sikeston, bruised right hand on belt buckle; Vivan Flannigan, 27, Sikeston, fell getting out of bath tub, neck strain; Debbie Strachan, 22, Sikeston, bitten by brown spider on right arm.

MAGISTRATE COURT

NEW MADRID -- Calvin Earl Brandenburg and Raymond Loyd Brandenburg have been bound over for trial in New Madrid County Circuit Court on a felonious assault charge following a preliminary hearing before Judge John Bailey.

State's evidence consisting of testimony by the complainant Henry S. Muse was heard and Raymond Loyd Brandenburg testified as a defense witness. Bond of $1,000 was set for the defendants.

Misdemeanor fines

Michael Dwayne Phillips, careless and imprudent driving, $25; Joe Ealeam Owens, expired operator's license, $20; Harry Lee Mobley, unregistered boat, unregistered outboard motor, non-resident with resident commercial fishing permit, unlabeled live fish box and fishing without non-resident permit, $65 with $50 to be remitted provided defendant shows compliance with requirements to boat motor and residency on or before Oct. 10.

Melvin Lee Mansfield, fishing without permit, $25; Michael Patrick Petersak, improper registration and no copy of fuel permit, $25; Hugh McKinley Carrington, no trailer license, $20; and Don Lee Harris, splitting license plates, $20.

Bond forfeited

Minnie Lee Hunter failed to appear in court on a charge of fishing without a permit, and $25 bond was ordered forfeited.

Speeding fines

Jeffery E. Erickson, $48; Willie L. Perry, $44; Rodney Noel Mize, $37; Larry J. Butler, Tamara Felisa Schaffer, Jody A. Hanover, Everard Weisburd and James Albert Graue, $35 each; David Cargene May and Steven Lee Flowers, $32 each; Und.a Tyrone West and Edward Ray Williams, $31 each; and Ronnie DeWayne Owens, $30.

Civil cases

Sheriff's service was returned unable to locate defendants in a suit on contract filed by Commerical Credit Business Loans Inc. against Mitchell and Pat Hufford.

Missouri Delta Community Hospital was granted $658 judgment and $12 costs in a suit on note and account against Starlin Ray Kelley Sr,. and Doris Kelley following an agreement upon method of payment.

Insulation, lumber prices rise sharply

WASHINGTON (AP) — A dramatic rise in the prices of lumber and insulation in recent weeks will increase the cost of the average new house $700 to $1,500, housing secretary Patricia Harris said today.

Mrs. Harris said that since July 1 lumber prices have gone up 12 to 28 per cent, depending on the region, and insulation prices have risen between 5 and 15 per cent.

She told a news conference she has asked the Council on Wage and Price Stability "to determine the causes and implications of the rise in lumber prices."

She said that the higher lumber prices and shortages of insulation may lead to time-consuming delays in housing construction and higher consumer prices.

"It is our goal to make the standard home once again affordable to the average American family," she said.

Mrs. Harris said that in the past 11 years, housing costs have increased 89 per cent, while family income has gone up only 47 per cent.

She said the average cost of a new house in the first quarter of this year was $51,300. She said the rising lumber and insulation prices alone could boost it up to $52,000 or more.

Todays News In Brief

Hormel to lay off 325

AUSTIN, Minn. (AP) — An official of Geo. A. Hormel & Co. announced Saturday that layoff notices, which cannot take effect for 52 weeks, will be sent to 325 employes at the Austin plant.

W. R. Hunter, general manager of the plant, said the termination notices will be issued by Sept. 10, but cannot take effect for one year under terms of the union contract with Local P-9, Amalgamated Meatcutters and Butchers Workmen of North America.

Local P-9 has about 2,200 members while total employment at the Austin meat packing plant is about 2,600.

Hunter said the plant currently has a surplus number of employes based on present production levels. He said the action to reduce the workforce had been deferred pending the outcome of recent contract talks with the union concerning the possibility of building a new plant in the southern Minnesota city of 27,000 persons.

Union members voted unanimously July 27 to reject the proposed eight-year contract, which eliminates incentive pay and contains a no-strike provision.

"With the rejection of the company's offer by Local P-9, it is regretable that we must now adjust the workforce to the level of production which our plant will support," Hunter said.

"Disproportionate energy consumption and excessive unit production costs further add to the necessity of reducing the production level of the Austin plant," he said.

The layoffs are on the seniority basis and include workers hired after June 1968. This includes Richard Arnold, Local P-9 president whose term expires in November. He was hired in February 1969.

Two members of the eightmember union executive board, Lynn Renville and Michael Ruzek, also will be laid off.

The company announcement came one day after union leaders from 14 Hormel plants around the country wound up a two-day meeting in Austin, pledging support for Local P-9 members.

"The Hormel locals are now working out the details of an appropriate response to the company threat," said a statement issued by the union leaders.

Arnold called for a "fresh start" in negotiations and indicated that union leaders would not accept the elimination of incentive pay, as they did in earlier bargaining.

Judgment reversed

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A $3.4 million judgment against Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith has been reversed by a three-judge panel of the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The panel ruled in a 2-1 decision Friday that the stock-brokerage firm, the nation's largest, and three of its officers did not have to pay the damages to heirs of the founder of the firm's St. Louis office.

A federal judge had ordered the judgment after the executor of the estate of Kenneth H. Bitting accused Merrill Lynch of defrauding Bitting's heirs. The appeals court ordered the case dismissed.

Christians vow long fight

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Right-wing Christian leaders said Saturday their war with Palestinian guerrillas in southern Lebanon will go on until the Palestinians are driven out.

The Christian leaders criticized the Syrian-dominated Arab peacekeeping force for failing to invade and control the Palestinian refugee camps where they say the guerrillas have their bases.

"Unless the aliens withdraw, the tragic, bloody events in the south will not end," the Christian leaders said in a statement issued at the end of a two-day meeting in Ehden, 40 miles north of Beirut.

U.S. Embassy burns

MOSCOW (AP) — Officials checked safes and secret files in sensitive areas of the U.S. Embassy on Saturday after a stubborn blaze raged through the top three floors of the 10-story building.

Some embassy employes driven out of their apartments in the north and south wings by the fire Friday night were allowed to return by midday Saturday.

But the central section of the building, with offices and some residences, remained closed, and electricity and gas remained off.

Embassy officials said the fire apparently was ignited by an electrical fault, reportedly in an eighth-floor press and cultural-affairs office. Also heavily damaged were the offices of the economic and commercial section.

Young pushes peace plan

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — Ambassador Andrew Young and British Foreign Secretary David Owen, "still in business" despite tough opposition from both black and white Africans, met with guerrilla leaders and their chief backers Saturday to try to sell a new peace plan for Rhodesia.

At the same time, the heads of the region's two white-minority governments, Prime Ministers Ian Smith of Rhodesia and John Vorster of South Africa, met in Pretoria, South Africa, to study the plan.

Owen and Young, the black American U.N. ambassador, were expected to go to Rhodesia later this week to meet with Smith. Young would be the highest-ranking American to visit Rhodesia in years.

The two face an uphill task on their current mission. Both sides have attacked a key element of their plan for blackmajority rule in Rhodesia — a reported proposal that the Rhodesian armed forces be disbanded and black nationalist guerrillas be disarmed during the transition.

Corruption hits inner circles

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Following the time-tested sleuthing technique of "follow the money," Indian investigators claim to be unravelling an intricate pattern of alleged embezzlement, fraud, extortion and abuse of authority by the inner circle of former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

In the past two weeks, authorities have arrested two of Mrs. Gandhi's former Cabinet ministers — her former private secretary and one of her family's most trusted aides on charges of official corruption.

Mrs. Gandhi's 30-year-old son Sanjay, whose political and financial dealings are under investigation by a special government commission, has already been implicated in at least a half dozen legal cases, but so far he has not been arrested. Investigators acknowledge the cases filed against Sanjay to date are relatively minor.

Government sources say the investigations have also touched Mrs. Gandhi herself, but no charges have been formally lodged against the 59-year-old Mrs. Gandhi who governed India for 11 years.

"The cases against Mrs. Gandhi and Sanjay have got to be ironclad," one highly placed government source said. "There can be no mistakes."

The Indian press, by and large, has been giving sober front-page coverage to the investigations and to the continuing revelations about what happened during Mrs. Gandhi's 21-month authoritarian "national emergency" when the press was under rigid censorship.

Mrs. Gandhi, Sanjay, and her Congress party all allege that the investigations are part of a "political vendetta" by Prime Minister Morarji Desai's new government and call the charges baseless.

Jobless rate climbs again

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Statewide unemployment continued to climb in July, rising another .3 of a percentage point over the jobless rate a month earlier, the state Divison of Employment Security said today.

The number of Missourians without jobs last month hit 121,-7000, representing 5.6 per cent of the state's workforce.

Employment remained above 2 million persons, but only slightly, and division Director Joseph Dietrich attributed the rise of the jobless rate to seasonal losses in nonmanufacturing jobs.

Of the state's five major metropolitan areas, only Springfield and Columbia recorded unemployment rates below the statewide average. St. Louis placed unemployment at 5.7 per cent, Kansas City at 6.3 per cent and St. Joseph at 6.6 per cent.

Teen draws 15-year term

WARRENSBURG, Mo. (AP) — A Sedalia-area teen-ager was sentenced to 15 years in prison Thursday for the Jan. 25 armed robbery of a grocery store at Chillhowee.

Judge Robert Russell of Johnson County Circuit Court imposed the sentence on Timothy Lee Green, 17.

Green and Michael F. Reedy, 20, of Knob Noster, were charged with robbing the store at knifepoint. Two robbers escaped with more than $400, but Green and Reedy were arrested later by the Johnson County sheriff and the money was recovered.

Reedy was given a 10-year suspended sentence and placed on probation for five years Wednesday.

Postal Service taking 2nd look at Saturday service

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service, which seemed ready to end Saturday mail deliveries a few months ago, is taking another look at whether the public would accept the cutback.

Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar said Thursday that before any decision is made to reduce service, "We intend to do a comprehensive study of what the public wishes."

The Postal Service still is considering the cutback, but will delay its decision until a new public opinion survey is completed, Bailar said.

Last spring, the Commission on Postal Service recommended that Saturday service be eliminated, saving the financially troubled Postal Service an estimated $400 million a year.

Bailar praised the study group at the time and said the service was considering the move.

Then, in late June, the agency put the proposal on its agenda for a July meeting of the Postal Service's governing board. But when the meeting was held, the item was passed over.

Bailar's speech to a convention of the National League of Postmasters in San Juan, Puerto Rico, was the first public explanation of the delay.

A survey conducted by the A.C. Nielsen polling organization for the study commission found 79 per cent of the public would be willing to forego the sixth delivery day if it would help hold down postal rates.

Dear Sir:
The enclosed news clipping appeared in the Jefferson City newspaper yesterday.

I think this matter is of concern to many of our constituents, as well, so I am taking the liberty of sending this information to you. Representative Fred DeField of Charleston and I also signed this letter which should now be in the hands of our Congressional leaders for consideration when they are asked to vote on this treaty.

Sincerely,
Fred EuGene Copeland

Legislators urge treaty opposition

More than 90 members of the Missouri House of Representatives have signed a letter, urging Missouri's two senators to "vote" against any treaty that lessens America's sovereignty" over the Panama Canal.

The letter to Sen. Thomas Eagleton and Sen. John Danforth says the proposed treaty to grant control of the canal to Panama has created a situation of utmost gravity, affecting the security of the United States and of its allies in the free world.

"We hope you will promptly, vigorously and publicly reassure us of your position in opposition to the proposed Panama Treaty," says the letter which was drafted by Rep. Paul Buseik, R-Springfield.

Five Central Missouri representatives signed the letter, including Rep. Joe Holt, D-Fulton; Rep. Flavel Butts, R-Camdenton; Rep. Carrol McCubbin, R-Eldon; Rep. Norbert Plassmeyer, R-Freeburg; Rep. Harold Reisch, R-Columbia; and Rep. James Strong, R-Jefferson City.

Buseik, a Springfield pediatrician, said most of the legislators were more than willing to sign the letter. He collected the signatures in less than three hours while the representatives were attending the special session of the General Assembly on Monday and Tuesday.

Dr. Busiek, who says he has information which indicates that the Soviet Union is pushing for Panamanian control of the canal, describes the proposed treaty as "absurd."

The letter, he adds, hopefully will let the two senators "know how the state legislature and the people of Missouri feel about the treaty."

Dear Sir,

What ever happened to good clean country music? I for one was not sittin' in the middle of the road of life, playin' both ends against the middle. I called a radio station last week for a clean country song by a clean country artist, it was never played. How's that for a country radio station? I can only assume that I'm country and they're whatever it is they want to call it.

I'm just plain country, now before anybody pops his buttons off laughin', let me tell you a bit about being country or better yet visit your local farmer. He doesn't lay up in the sun to get a tan, he's herdin' a tractor all day. While you're under an air-conditioner playin' pool with the boys, He's feedin' the cattle that one day ends up as a steak on your table. He marches thru dusty fields in the hot sun, checking crops that benefit all mankind.

During planting and gathering seasons, he's lucky to get to church on Sunday but he makes sure you get that food. His blue jeans are faded, his face is red but a world of hungry mouths, his rough hands have fed. The clothes that have covered your body so long, I guess you've forgotten, it's cotton he's grown.

So please Mr D.J., don't cut him out of the world of entertainment. Tomorrow after you've had your ham and eggs, go down to the radio station, get under that air-conditioner and give him a true country song. If it wasn't for the poor boy a lot would go undone, the plow would never furrow or the mill would never run. There wouldn't be no taters, there wouldn't be no beans, the rich would all be poor boys in faded old blue jeans.

P.S.
I'm thinking about trading my radio in for a C.B. By the way sir, what's next on country stations, "Disco Duck?"

Dexter doctor recalls battles to control Bootheel epidemics

Dexter – The battle 40 years ago to bring syphilis under control in the Missouri Bootheel was hardly less than the war on the dreaded mosquito a generation earlier. There's a physician in Dexter who remembers.

"We didn't have penicillin, just shot them full of neosrapharmine and bismuth. Some of them maybe didn't want to be treated, so we'd head off down there, hit 'em over the head and fix 'em up."

Maybe his bark is worse than his bite. Or, maybe it's not. But the chances are Dr. Theodore Lamar Waddle won't tell.

'Doc' Waddle, who's been practicing medicine in Dexter for nearly 40 years,is his own man - he sets his own pace, he sets his own style and at 74 years old he still has his small office open five days a week.

The doctor might talk a little rough ("Hell, I even look a little rough!") but there's a sparkle in his eyes and the understanding and knowledge that's brought on by nearly a half-century of helping people.

When the young doctor, fresh from medical studies at Louisiana State University, set up practice here in 1938, he was no stranger to Dexter - or Southeast Missouri.

Waddle, along with a team of other doctors, nurses and engineers, came to Dexter in early 1937 after a winter flood devastated a large part of Southeast Missouri.

"We had small pox epidemics in Bernie, and diarrhea and other diseases and health problems real bad.

"The program was federally-funded but operated under the Missouri Department of health as a demonstration unit."

Before coming to Dexter with the health unit, Waddle had practiced in Holden.

"That was right in the middle of the Dust Bowl days.

"I can remember seeing pitchforks with the handles eaten half away by grasshoppers. There wasn't even a leaf on a tree; poeple were buying what little water they could get.

"I damn-near starved to death up there. I didn't collect from people and finally left town with thousands on my books and 200 bucks in my pocket."

Waddle remembers those days.

He recalls a meeting of area doctors when he opened his Dexter practice.

"They talked about lots of things, including problems in collecting.

"One doctor said he'd really been working on his accounts and was now collecting 80 per cent.

"Another doctor was shocked, saying he was only getting 60 per cent.

"I sat there and kept my mouth shut...I was getting 98.3 per cent," Waddle said.

But Doc Waddle has never earned 6-figure incomes or sought "big money."

He is serious about health care and caring for people and says "We've got the best health care in the world...period."

Dr. Waddle was born near Springfield, Mo., and worked some with his father, who was a printer and at one time edited a rural weekly near the Kansas-Missouri border.

"My father wouldn't let me learn how to set type...said I needed to learn something else."

While waiting to get into medical school Waddle tried his had at teaching. He was high school principal at Drexel for two years.

But medical school was still his goal. After the two-year medical program at the University of Missouri he studied at L. S. U., Johns Hopkins and Michigan University.

Today, at age 74, Waddle has "slowed down a little." His clinic is open 17 hours a week.

What did the doctor seek from life?

"A satisfying way of existence.

"And I think I've done that, as well as I could have.

"I've made a lot of enemies over the years and I've never been afraid to tangle with anybody - and I'm still not.

"But I've made a lot of close friends, helped a lot of people and saved a few lives along the way.

"Don't know what else anybody could want."

Some guys get hooked by urge to build plane

NEW BRIGHTON, Pa. — Chuck Paton is building a helicopter he doesn't know how to fly, but his fellow aviation club members aren't worried about his future as a pilot.

For the past three years, the 47-year-old laboratory supervisor at Westinghouse Electric Corp. has spent most of his evening and weekend hours patiently working on his chopper.

"It's not unusual for one of our men to finish a plane before learning how to fly," said Dick Funkhouser of nearby Coraopolis, a long-time member of the Experimental Aircraft Association's Beaver Valley chapter.

"Some guys just have the urge to build a plane."

Paton, a chapter member for the past several years, said he first saw an ad for a helicopter kit in an aircraft trade magazine.

"When I saw what the finished product looked like at an air show, I was hooked," he recalled.

Paton's Rotor Way Scorpion, which cost about $9,000, is nearly complete outside the garage of his Beaver County home. It is one of about a dozen chapter projects now under way.

Funkhouser is constructing a World War I Sopwith Pup biplane from wood he hand-picked from a local lumberyard. Earl Wilderoder of Beaver Falls is building a Great Lakes biplane. Chapter vice president Dick Hall of Aliquippa is at work on a single-seater Baby Ace he designed himself.

Most of the members, like Paton, were trained in the service, but the rest of their backgrounds are varied.

"We've got everything from bankers to steelworkers to engineers in our club," Funkhouser said. "We've got guys who never finished high school and we've got guys with masters degrees. Our common interest is that we want to build aircraft."

Hall, a licensed aircraft mechanic who supervises U.S. Steel's bulk mail center in Pittsburgh, has built several planes for others. His Sopwith Pup is only the second plane he intended to build for himself.

"I built a regular-sized Baby Ace in 1955, but it was too small for my long legs," Hall said with a laugh. "This time I decided to custom build the whole thing myself to make sure it was the right fit."

"I did my first welding and painting jobs on this helicopter," Paton said with a craftman's pride. "For a while there were little flecks of foul-smelling brown dust all over the house when I was sanding down the first coat of paint."

Convicted slayer of Hanafi children dies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ronald Harvey sported a grey mink cap with a feather and drove fancy cars with television sets inside. He also murdered children.

The FBI once thought Harvey dead until an anonymous tipster in December 1973 spotted him cruising down a Philadelphia street in a baby blue Cadillac, mink cap, leather coat and red check pants.

He was arrested three months later by FBI agents in Chicago and held under $5.5 million bail in connection with the January 1973 slayings of five Hanafi Muslim children and two adults in Washington, D.C.

Harvey was convicted of murder in all seven deaths and later convicted of murdering former Camden, N.J., mayoral candidate Major B. Coxson and the teen-age daughter of Coxson's common-law wife.

Harvey, 37, was serving a total of nine terms of life imprisonment when he died of heart failure Sunday at the U.S. Bureau of Corrections Hospital in Springfield, Mo.

He had been flown by air ambulance in June from the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta to the hospital where his condition deteriorated until death, Charles James, a spokesman for the hospital, said in a telephone interview.

Harvey was from Philadelphia, but no one had claimed Harvey's body as of Tuesday night, said James. Burial arrangements were incomplete.

The Hanafi slayings were the largest mass murder in Washington history. The Coxson slayings were equally gruesome.

Coxson was found bound and shot three times in the head in 1974 in his plush Cherry Hill, N.J., home. Lita Luby Coxson, 16, was shot once in the head and died four days later, police said.

Coxson's common-law wife, Lois, was blinded by a bullet in the attack. Her 15-year-old son, Toro, was shot and blinded in one eye. A 13-year-old son fled the house and called police.

The Washington massacre took place in the Hanafis' headquarters, a house donated to the sect by fellow Hanafi and Los Angeles Lakers basketball star Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

Hanafi leader Hamaas Abdul Khaalis, father of six of the seven victims, demanded that Harvey and others be turned over to his men for retribution last March when a group of Hanafis terrorized Washington with their occupation of several office buildings.

Philadelphia police records indicate Harvey and a handful of his contemporaries had a history of terrorizing black businessmen in a type of protection racket.

Harvey once was described by a Philadelphia prosecutor as "Mr. Enforcer."

Harvey smiled and yawned in the courtroom when convicted of the Hanafi murders, but his demeanor had changed when he came to trial in Camden this summer for the Coxson slaying.

Weakened by heart and stomach problems, he was brought into the Camden courtroom on a stretcher June 7 for sentencing.

"You look pathetic," Camden County Judge Leon A. Wingate told Harvey, "but I don't think you looked pathetic when the crime occurred."

Mrs. Partin to head Vanduser CF drive

VANDUSER -- Radio-TV personality Jack Buck, chairman of the Gateway Chapter, Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, has appointed Mrs. Bill Partin 1977 Breath of Life Chairman of Vanduser.

In accepting the chairmanship, Mrs. Partin expressed hopes for the annual fund raising drive that begins in Vanduser with a door-to-door march in September.

"Through volunteer efforts and increased community support, we may one day realize a future in which children no longer suffer from lung-damaging diseases, the most serious of which is cystic fibrosis," she said.

Mrs. Partin underscored her remarks by explaining that "the life expectancy of CF children has increased year by year and we have every hope that scientists will find a control or cure for cystic fibrosis. A major purpose of the CF Foundation is to conquer this tragic inherited disease which occurs once in every 1,600 live births in the United States and is a leading genetic killer of children."

Through volunteer efforts across the country, the Breath of Life Campaign supports in addition to research a network of over 125 Cystic Fibrosis Centers specializing in diagnostic and treatment services for children with CF and other lung-damaging diseases, including asthma, Bronchiectasis, childhood emphysema and chronic bronchitis and public health education programs to alert parents to the symptoms of lung-damaging diseases in their children, and to seek treatments which can improve their children's lives.

Scouters relax

Ernest Elledge, left, of Sikeston outlined plans Thursday night at the Okeechobee Scout District fall program kickoff meeting at First United Methodist Church for this year's School night for Scouting. Joining Elledge before the meeting for a slice of watermelon is District Committee Chairman Roger Tolliver. Elledge Organization and Extension chairman, announced thet Scouting night will be held in schools throughout the district on Sept. 15. On that night, all boys in the area who are old enough for cubbing or Scouting will be given the opportunity to join. (Daily Standard photo)

Mrs. Epy heads MH campaign

MATTHEWS – Mrs. Charles Eby is chairman of the Mental Health Association campaign this year in Matthews.

Mrs. Eby will organize Bellringer volunteers to go house-to-house during September, Mental Health Month in Matthews.

All proceeds from the campaign will benefit the Mental Health Association in Missouri, a voluntary citizens' organization not state or federally funded.

The Mental Health Association is a nationwide organization dedicated to improving and expanding care and treatment for the mentally ill and handicapped. Research into the causes of mental illness is only one of the volunteer support activities. Unpaid volunteers provide help to patients in hospitals, and carry out extensive public education programs.

"Mental illness affects one out of ten people." In Missouri, then, over 490,000 people will need services for mental or emotional problems at some point in their lives.

One of the primary goals of the Mental Health Association is to see that people are served in their own community, when they need help.

The Association must rely on public support to accomplish its goals since it receives no government funding.

Almost 88 per cent of all intercity passenger miles were traveled by private motor vehicle in 1974.

Sikeston Head Start to enroll

The Sikeston Head Start Center, Airport Drive, will enroll handicapped and non-handicapped children for the 1977-78 school year next Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. each day.

Parents who wish to enroll their children ages 3-5 should bring with them a copy of child's birth certificate, Medicaid number, shot record and verification of income.

Head Start personnel are encouraging enrollment of handicapped children who will be provided with necessary services as needed.

In the capital

JEFFERSON CITY — A Kansas City consulting firm has given officials in mid-Missouri the green light for further study of two proposed coal gasification plants.

The two gasification plants, which the report says would be able to produce electricity and synthetic gas, are planned for the Green Hills area of north central Missouri and a point midway between Kansas City and St. Louis.

A report by Lutz, Daily and Brain, an Overland Park, Kan., consulting firm, said that although there has been "limited coal gasification experience," the outlook for the proposed Missouri facilities is good.

The plants could be in operation by 1982 if officials went ahead with them on schedule, according to the report.

The document listed five possible sites for the plants, two in the Green Hills area and three in mid-Missouri.

Tinnin presented Mule Skinner plaque

State Sen. Nelson B. Tinnin of Hornersville, 25th District, was awarded the Missouri Mule Skinner's Plaque by Brig. Gen. Hal F. Robertson, Deputy Commander, Missouri Army National Guard, in ceremonies in Cape Girardeau on Aug. 21. The citation presented with the plaque reads as follows: Citation for The Missouri Mule Skinner's Plaque, "in recognition of outstanding support of the Missouri National Guard, the Missouri Mule Skinner's Plaque is hereby presented to Sen. Nelson B. Tinnin, Senator 25th District. During his long and distinguished career, Sen. Tinnin has given unselfishly of his time to assist the Missouri National Guard in critical legislative action, through difficult reorganizations which required action on State and local levels and in many other endeavors to include new armory construction thereby enhancing the defense posture of our nation and of the Missouri Army National Guard." Sen. Tinnin has been instrumental in supporting the Missouri Army National Guard in legislation and funding.

'Mighty Mo's' historic decks now echo to tourist footfalls

BREMERTON, Wash. (AP) — The decks of victory and vanquishment where America accepted Japan's unconditional surrender almost 32 years ago today echo the footfalls of tourists.

Her giant guns are plugged. Dehumidifiers suck moisture from her insides 24 hours a day. Her hatches are sealed against the air.

On a warm weekend, as many as 4,000 tourists climb the gangplank and step aboard the ship. They walk the sloping teak deck to the bow and gaze at jellyfish peacefully undulating in the water far below. Youngsters are propped by parents on the mute cannons for snapshots.

As new generations come to the ship, many recall The War only from books.

"Which war?" a teen-ager recently asked his mother, who had just explained that Gen. Douglas MacArthur "signed the papers, right here, to end the war."

Seaman Jose Austria, a 27-year-old from Bayamaeng, The Philippines, stands by the gangway as guide in his white summer shirt, dark pants and billed Navy cap.

"People say to me, 'How deep is the water here?' They say, 'What war was this in?' 'What are these turrets on the front of the boat?'

"Not so many people ask anything about her history. The Big Mo has a great history."

At 0900 on Sept. 2, 1945, in Tokyo Bay, the Japanse and Americans stopped the war with a surrender ceremony on her deck. A plaque marks the spot.

The ship was commissioned June 11, 1944, late in the war, but fired her guns at Iwo Jima, Okinawa and the Japanese mainland on the way to her rendevous with history in Tokyo.

"The older people know what it stands for," said Austria. "The kids, they are only curious. Mostly they care about the humidity inside the ship and that kind of stuff.

Many of them come on board and they say, 'Oh, yes, this is the ship where they made the movie.'"

What's the law?

The case of the topless waitress

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Myron operated a restaurant where his customers could eat dirt cheap -- but they weren't interested in eating dirt. What they were interested in was watching his topless waitresses parade back and forth. And while his waitresses attracted a great number of diners, they also attracted the authorities, with the result that Myron was given a summons for violating an ordinance that prohibited restaurants from providing entertainment without a license.

"Somebody's made a booboo," protested Myron in court. "I've never provided any entertainment in my restaurant. I have no performer and none of my waitresses sing, dance or even do card tricks. All they do is dish out the food and work very hard. Consequently, I didn't need any entertainment license."

"While he may not employ performers as such," responded a local official, "when Myron's shapely waitresses bounced by, they were as entertaining as any act in town. That's why he needed a license."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict Myron of providing entertainment without a license?

This is how the judge ruled: YES. The judge held that entertainment is defined as a pleasant occupation of the senses. And, concluded the judge, Myron's bare-chested damsels occupied the senses of his customers with sufficient apparent pleasure so as to constitute the prohibited entertainment without a license.

Handyman may have run sex school for children

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Wayne Thomas Heacock is a neighborhood Pied Piper, adored by all the children, approved of by their parents.

Today, the 34-year-old handyman is charged with criminal sexual conduct. Investigators believe that for 20 years he ran a "sex school" for children that "graduated" almost 200 youngsters and awarded prizes for performance.

Heacock is in the Oakland County jail under $125,000 bond. He pleaded innocent at his district court arraignment Wednesday on a five-count charge of first-degree criminal sexual conduct with a 9-year-old boy. Heacock requested a court-appointed attorney.

Describing the case as "probably the largest child molesting incident in the history of this office," Oakland County Prosecutor L. Brooks Patterson said handwritten diaries found in Heacock's home detailed sexual encounters with youngsters, mainly boys. The diaries dated back to 1957.

The prosecutor said no evidence has linked Heacock to the recent sex murders of several children in Oakland County, but the special task force investigating the murders would examine material seized at Heacock's home.

Patterson said investigators confiscated tape recordings, movies and photographs. Heacock also surrendered at least two boxes of documents in addition to the diaries, Patterson said.

He said the diaries and other documents mentioned the operation of a secret group called "The IC Club," in which youngsters were invited to participate in sexual acts.

It was run like a school, Patterson said, with prospective students answering a 40-question entrance exam and promising to be Heacock's best friend and never to tell anyone about the club's activities.

Patterson said there were apparent progressions up the ladder similar to grades in school, with pupils advancing from one sexual act to another.

When a younvster accumulated a certain number of points, he was given a prize, which in one case was a 10-speed bicycle, the prosecutor said.

The investigation was launched after a girlfriend of a boarder in Heacock's home stumbled onto one of the diaries.

People in Heacock's working-class neighborhood said they don't believe the charges.

"I've known him for almost four years," said Floyd Young, a neighbor. "I just don't believe it. I know Tom. I know what he stands for. This is bound to be false."

Commission considers bill of rights for phone users

By RENEE HOLDER
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — A consumer Bill of Rights for telephone customers is being considered by the Missouri Public Service Commission.

The revised billing practices for telephone companies would provide more information to customers about service and billing and would standardize the billing practices of all Missouri telephone companies.

The commission has held four hearings on the revisions over the past three months in different areas of the state.

The proposed date that the companies would have to comply with the standards is Dec. 31. A similar revision of billing practices for electric, gas and water utilities was adopted by the commission in 1975 but legal appeals by the utilities have prevented them from going into effect.

The commission plans to revise the billing practices of all utilities as part of its "Blueprint for Action" designed in the fall of 1975.

Some of the major requirements in the proposed billing standards for telephone companies are:

—A customer applying for service would have to be informed by the company of the cheapest rate available.

—Bills would have to itemize charges for basic service, toll charges, taxes and franchise fees and show the due date. Bills also would have to carry a telephone number customers could call to make inquiries of the company.

—Deposits could not be required unless a customer had been delinquent in paying telephone bills.

—If a deposit were required, it could not exceed an amount equal to two months' service charges. The deposit would have to be refunded in 12 months if the customer's payment record is satisfactory.

—Within two minutes of accepting a telephone inquiry and three minutes of a visit, the companies would have to have personnel available to handle the matter.

—Companies would have to issue a pamphlet describing the rights and responsibilities of the company and the customer.

—Service could not be discontinued unless the company office was open to handle reconnection of the service.

—If a telephone were needed to obtain emergency medical assistance for a person under a doctor's care, discontinuance of service would be postponed for up to 21 days.

—Customers would be allowed up to 21 days to pay their bills, or to make arrangements with the company that would enable a customer to pay his bill at the most convenient time of the month.

Paul Phillips, an attorney for the commission staff, says the revisions came about as a combination of a response to customer complaints, especially about deposits and late payments, and a preventive measure against possible future abuses.

He says the rules were drafted to comprehensively deal with all billing practices, whether they have been complained about or not.

The revisions will make customers aware of both their responsibilities and those of the company, Phillips says. The new standards will establish uniformity among telephone companies in the state, he says.

"Most telephone customers don't realize there is more than one company in Missouri, but in fact, there are 53," he said.

Most of those companies are fighting the changes.

Ted d'Andriole, of Southwestern Bell, says the rules are not necessary.

For one thing, he says, many of the new rules are already part of the company's policy. He says only five per cent of their customers must pay a deposit, and if they pay their bills regularly, they get that money back in six months.

James Haines, an attorney for the commission staff, agrees that not all the standards have never seen the light of day.

"It's not as though every revision breaks new ground," he says.

Customers also do not seem to think the rules are necessary, d'Andriole says. Only six customers showed up at the four hearings held on the revisions, he says. Besides that, he says the company handles very few complaints on billing practices.

"We don't hear any hue and cry for reform from our customers," he says.

Commission chairman James Mulvaney concedes telephone companies do not have as great a problem with billing practices as other utilities.

"I'll be the first to admit it — telephone companies are not in the same category as the gas, electric and water utilities, but there are customer complaints in the area, and also a need for uniformity," Mulvaney says.

d'Andriole also finds some other problems with the new standards. One of those is cost.

He says it will cost Southwestern Bell $350,000 to put the rules into effect the first year. Just issuing the pamphlet alone will cost more than $100,000, he says.

The commission's demand that the company accept 90 per cent of customer calls within 10 seconds is unreasonable, d'Andriole says. On certain days, such as Mondays, it would not be physically possible for their personnel to answer those calls, he says.

The rules will also be of little help to customers who pay regularly, he says.

Clampdown planned against sterility-linked pesticide

MIDLAND, Mich. (AP) — The federal government will clamp down next week on use of a potent pesticide linked to sterility among men who helped make the product at Dow Chemical Co. The chemical also caused cancer in laboratory animals.

Dow, headquartered here, on Thursday asked its 250 worldwide distributors to return supplies of DBCP — dibromochloropropane — until it can determine what went wrong.

In Washington, the U.S. Labor Department said Thursday it would issue temporary emergency standards for the chemical to limit the public's exposure. The labor department urged chemical companies to protect workers who use it.

The Environmental Protection Agency also said Thursday it is working with the Food and Drug Administration to see if any DBCP residues remain in food crops that might pose a danger to the public.

It also said its regional offices are testing soil and water near major DBCP manufacturing and formulation plants.

Federal officials stopped short of banning the sale of pesticides containing DBCP, however, as at least one consumer group had asked.

Dow officials said their action was precautionary. There is no evidence the chemical, marketed by Dow under the trade name Fumazone, poses a hazard to farmers who handle it only occasionally.

It is used mainly by fruit farmers in California and Hawaii and soybean farmers in the Midwest to kill microscopic worms that nibble roots and stunt crops.

The federal action will temporarily reduce the amount of DBCP that can be included in pesticides that use it as a base. That standard will be in effect while data on the pesticide is reviewed and a permanent standard is set. That could take six months to a year.

The labor department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) also urged pesticide-processors who use DBCP to reduce airborne concentrations of the chemical as much as possible and to test workers for adverse effects.

Dow and Shell Oil Co., the only other domestic producer of DBCP, both halted production of the pesticide after tests on workers at Dow's Magnolia, Ark., plant showed several men with abnormally low sperm counts or no sperm at all. Further tests on 75 workers showed half with sterility problems.

Shell sold its product as Nemagon Soil Fumigant.

Ten workers who handled Dow-produced DBCP at the Occidental Chemical Corp., in a Lathrop, Calif., also showed no sperm or extremely low levels.

That company also stopped producing DBCP products, which it marketed as CHA-KEM-CO, Garden Fume, Green Light.

Freshmen frightened by college commits suicide

ROLLA, Mo. (AP) — Police said a 17-year-old college freshman from an affluent Chicago suburb, frightened with his first two days of school and afraid of being a failure, committed suicide Wednesday by laying in front of a Frisco freight train.

It was a way of death jokingly suggested by a fraternity brother Monday night when Harry James Bruce Jr., talked with his roommates about suicide.

Police said Bruce youth arrived in Rolla Saturday to attend the University of Missouri-Rolla. By Monday night he was talking with roommates about school being too hard, and asked them about an easy way to commit suicide. One lightly referred to stepping in front of a train, or using a gun. The youths told police they did not take Bruce seriously.

Tuesday night Bruce talked of jumping in front of a train, and once again the roommates thought he was joking.

Wednesday morning Bruce walked to railroad tracks just down the street from his Sigma Pi fraternity house, waited until a train was near, then laid his head on the rails, police said.

Nearby, police found the youth's college textbooks. Inside a chemistry notebook was a poignant handwritten note.

It told of love for his parents, his sisters and brother, remorse over a wreck he had had recently, his concern that school was too hard, that he would not be able to do well, and his parents would be disappointed in him.

"I have been unhappy with my life, so I just want to rest in peace," the note continued. "I hope I'm not upsetting anyone, and if I am, I am sorry. But I can't handle the pressures. God take my soul and make none of those who cared for me sorrow."

Authorities spent several hours trying to reach the youth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry James Bruce Sr., who left their Winnetka, Ill., home Saturday for a vacation after sending their son off to school.

Lance not 1st friend to be defended by President

WASHINGTON (AP) — In another time, another president went to the defense of an embattled aide and friend, saying he admired the man, respected his integrity, needed him in the White House.

But Dwight D. Eisenhower's support did not settle the problems of Sherman Adams. They got worse and three months after that presidential endorsement, Adams resigned.

When congressional investigators reprimanded Harry Truman's old friend and military aide, Harry H. Vaughan, the President snorted an expletive to dismiss suggestions that he quit or be fired. Vaughan stayed.

Now President Carter has rallied dramatically to the side of Budget Director Bert Lance, whom he once described as one of the closest friends he has in the world.

The three cases differ, of course. While Vaughan and Adams denied wrongdoing, investigators found improprieties in their affairs.

That isn't so with Lance. To date, there have been only questions and allegations, and the one official finding in his case so far is that of federal banking investigators, who reported on Thursday that they found no basis for prosecution in his transactions.

Furthermore, Vaughan and Adams were accused of accepting or offering favors as White House officials. The questions raised about Lance involve his private affairs, before he came to the government.

But in another way, the three episodes are similar, for in each case, the target of inquiry and criticism was a personal friend of the president he served. In such circumstances, presidents tend to fight back, even if it is politically risky.

Carter is. His defense of Lance amounted to a dare to anyone to challenge the personal loan and banking practices that brought the budget director under government investigation.

The President said that as far as he is concerned, the questions were answered and the matter was settled when federal banking officials reported on Thursday that they found no basis for prosecution in Lance's banking transactions.

But the report was not quite as sweeping as Carter made it sound. Indeed, Comptroller of the Currency John G. Heimann said Lance's affairs raised unresolved questions as to what should constitute acceptable banking practices.

And whatever the merits of the case, it is not likely to lapse into the past tense as quickly as Carter tried to put it there. The investigations are not over. Republicans are hungry for issues, and Lance may yet be a political target.

After all, Carter made the rules. He set tough standards in his campaign statements and in the code of conduct he fixed for administration officeholders. Carter said it was important to avoid not only wrongdoing but also, wherever possible, even an appearance of wrongdoing.

Against this background, Carter's efforts to pronounce the Lance ordeal at an end may have been premature. The political opposition hasn't spoken yet, but it probably will.

Discrimination charged by employment agencies

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Blacks, women and the middle-aged continue to be discriminated against by several employment agencies here, a report says.

According to the report, which was released Thursday, some employment agencies accepted improper telephone orders that discriminated on the basis of sex and age.

The study was prepared by the Missouri Public Interest Research Group Foundation, a privately supported group devoted to consumer and other public interest issues. Researchers in the study identified themselves as prospective employers in telephone calls to the agencies in which they described the ficticious job openings.

One order called for a man to manage a bakery and sandwich stop. A second called for a young woman to serve as a receptionist for a small law firm.

The survey said that of the 16 agencies notified of the bakery job, 10 did not question the request for a man to fill the job. Of the 17 agencies called about the receptionist's job, 13 accepted the woman-only position.

In addition, the report said one Missouri State Employment Service office agreed to send only white applicants for the receptionist job, and all eight St. Louis area offices of the employment service accepted the age stipulation.

Gene Roelofs, author of the study, has called for an investigation by the Missouri Commission on Human Rights.

Meanwhile, state employment officials and managers of branch offices expressed skepticism about the report.

"I think it's extremely unlikely," said a spokesman for State Employment Service Operations. "We have a manual provision that prohibits accepting discriminatory job offers. I would like to have some facts in the matter."

The Prime Minister of Great Britain draws no salary from that office. He supports himself with the salaries of any other office he holds, for example, the First Lordship of the Treasury.

SHS offense lagging behind, Smith says

By CHARLIE FRANCIS
Daily Standard Sports Editor

A controlled offensive scrimmage under the lights Friday night at Public Schools Stadium confirmed Terry Smith's fears about his Bulldog football team -- they have a long way to go before next Friday night's season opener against Farmington.

"Our defense is way ahead of the offense," Smith pointed out Saturday after contemplating the results of Friday night's practice. "I think the defense will be as good as it was last year," he said,

Offensively, it was a long night for inexperienced Bulldogs. "We probably jumped off sides 20 times," Smith moaned about the ragged ness of the scrimmage.

"Our pass offense is lagging way behind," said the Bulldog mentor about his team's biggest problem. The 1976 10-1 club was not know as a passing team, and Smith warned that this year's club would not throw as well as did their predecessors of a season ago.

The problem with the Sikeston passing game won't lie with senior quarterback Jay Cox, who directed last year's junior varsity club to a 4-4-1 record. "He (Cox) won't be the best around, but he'll be a pretty fair passer," testified Smith about his diminutive passer. "But we've got to find some guys who can catch the football."

Paul Gilbow and Craig Littleton, last year's top two receivers, are departed via the graduating route, and no newcomers have stepped in to assume the tight end and flanker positions. In fact, Smith says that this year's team will run without a wide receiver and will go with a fullhouse backfield, partially because of the lack of good receivers.

"We're gonna give some seniors a shot at it the first ballgame," said Smith about his starters at the end spots. But if they don't produce, there may be a few juniors and sophomores seeing action there.

The backfield seems to be set for the most part. Glynn Felton, Mike Shell and Gary Silverthorn will operate behind Cox in the standard T formation, although Smith admitted that there might be some variations in the offensive set as the season wears on.

"Our five interior linemen are doing a pretty fair job," said Smith about the brightest spot on the Bulldog offense. New faces will be at each position along the line, but they are learning fast and developing into a good unit. "They'll be right at home after the third or fourth game," said the SHS coach.

Injuries at a couple of key positions on defense have hurt preparations there, but Smith expects that unit to be ready for the Farmington opener.

Most of the Bulldogs took Saturday off, although the quarterbacks and receivers worked on their thing. The crew will hit it hard for four days this week, with the emphasis on the offense, although much polishing needs to be done on the defense and speical teams as well.

Archery season approved

The Conservation Commission has approved a third straight fall archery season for wild turkeys. The season will be the month of October for Missouri residents. All the 1977 spring turkey hunting counties, plus St. Louis County, will be open for the bowhunters who have taken 47 turkeys with arrows each of the first two seasons.

Big name teams should rule college ranks again

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Upstart Pitt provided a different look on college football's national championship throne last year. But most of the teams directly behind the Panthers were familiar names in such races and many of them have designs on the 1977 title.

For instance, Southern California and Michigan, which finished 2-3 behind Pitt in last year's Associated Press ratings, generally are considered the teams to beat in the Pacific-8 and Big Ten Conferences, respectively.

Oklahoma, the national champion in 1974 and 1975 and a strong-closing fifth last season, is the heavy favorite in the rugged Big Eight Conference. The experts say Alabama will return to the top of the Southeastern Conference after a one-year absence and the same is expected for Arizona State in the Western Athletic Conference, while Maryland has become an almost automatic choice in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The Southwest Conference, having ended years of domination by Texas, appears to be another three-team scramble among last year's contenders — Houston, Texas Tech and Texas A&M.

Among the independents, much of the preseason sentiment belongs to Notre Dame, although Pitt could change that by beating the Fighting Irish in the opening game, just like a year ago.

Tony Dorsett, who became college football's all-time rushing king while leading Pitt to the national championship, is gone, along with 10 other starters, both kicking specialists and Coach of the Year Johnny Majors, who, having lifted Pitt from rags to riches, now will try to bring his alma mater, Tennessee, back to national prominence.

Majors' successor is Jackie Sherrill, Pitt's former assistant head coach, who spent last season as head coach at Washington State. With Dorsett gone, Sherrill will allow quarterback Matt Cavanaugh to throw more to such talented receivers as Gordon Jones and Willie Taylor.

Pitt will be challenged by Penn State in the East, provided the Nittany Lions get past their opener against Rutgers, whose 18-game winning streak is the longest in the country. Yale is the preseason favorite in the Ivy League.

In the SEC, Alabama likely will be challenged by Florida, which never has won the conference championship; defending champion Georgia; Mississippi State, coming off two years probation, and Kentucky, going on two years probation.

Alabama must rebuild its defensive line, but a high-powered offense featuring quarterbacks Jack O'Rear and Jeff Rutledge, receiver Ozzie Newsome and running backs Johnny Davis and Tony Nathan, may overcome any defensive deficiencies.

Maryland has a record string of 20 ACC victories and there seems to be no end to the Terrapins' domination. Mark Manges and Larry Dick could be the best 1-2 quarterback punch in the nation. North Carolina probably will be the No. 1 challenger.

Appalachian State is a solid choice in the Southern Conference, while South Carolina, East Carolina and Memphis State should be the strongest Southern independents.

In the Midwest, the annual Michigan-Ohio State showdown is expected to decide the Big Ten race, as usual. Although Michigan has a few defensive holes to fill, the Wolverines boast perhaps the premier offensive line in the country, a veteran quarterback in Rick Leach and outstanding runners in Harlan Huckleby and Russell Davis.

The big news is that Ohio State Coach Woody Hayes, who adores pile-driving fullbacks, is switching to a pony backfield with relative lightweights Jeff Logan and Ron Springs as the chief ball carriers. The Buckeyes also have eight returning starters on defense.

In the Midlands, Oklahoma will field the fastest backfield in its history. Quarterback Thomas Lott, halfback Elvis Peacock and fullback Kenny King all do the 40 in 4.4 seconds, while the other halfback in the explosive Wishbone, heralded sophomore Billy Sims, lags behind at a mere 4.5. Despite all the speed, the Sooners' season depends on how well nose guard Reggie Kinlaw and linebacker Daryl Hunt recover from knee injuries.

Almost everyone except Kansas and Kansas State — and that means Colorado, Iowa State, Missouri, Nebraska and Oklahoma State — can be considered a Big Eight contender. Oklahoma State has one of the nation's top runners in Terry Miller, who gained 1,546 yards during the regular season and added 173 in the Tangerine Bowl last year.

Notre Dame has its entire defensive unit back and the Irish are booming end Ross Browner as their top Heisman Trophy candidate. If he wins it, Browner would be only the third lineman in history and the first since Leon Hart, another Notre Dame end, did it in 1949.

However, the Irish will have to overcome the loss of Al Hunter, the only 1,000-yard rusher in the school's history, who was suspended for a violation of dormitory rules.

Western Michigan, Ohio University, Bowling Green and Kent State hope to unseat Ball State in the Mid-American Conference, while Tulsa and West Texas State are getting plenty of support in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Houston and Texas Tech tied for the Southwest Conference crown a year ago, but Texas A&M may pass them. All three clubs have top-notch quarterbacks — Tech's Rodney Allison, Houston's Danny Davis, A&M's David Walker.

But all eyes in the SWC will be on Texas and Arkansas, where long-time, ultra-successful Coaches Darrell Royal and Frank Broyles have stepped down. Fred Akers at Texas and Lou Holtz at Arkansas have been entrusted with trying to get their teams back to the top, where they spent so many years.

In the Southland Conference, McNeese State is favored to repeat, with a strong challenge from Southwestern Louisiana.

In the WAC, Arizona State, Brigham Young and Colorado State are making threatening noises. Arizona State has a great receiver in John Jefferson and BYU has a great passer in Gifford Neilsen. If they were on the same team, the choice would be clear-cut.

Southern Cal's competition on the West Coast is expected to come from UCLA, although Washington, California and Stanford have first-division ambitions.

Sophomore Charles White is the latest in a string of superb Southern Cal runners and Rob Hertel may be the best passer in the school's history. UCLA, which had a great recruiting year, has a top-notch runner of its own in Theotis Brown and a rugged defense led by linebacker Jerry Robinson and tackle Manu Tuiasosopo.

San Jose State must fight off a challenge from Long Beach State in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, while San Diego State, a former PCAA member, again could rate among the nation's leading independents.

Sooners top first poll

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The Oklahoma Sooners have been tabbed as the preseason choice in The Associated Press college football poll to capture their third national championship in four years.

In nationwide balloting by a panel of 62 sports writers and sportscasters, Oklahoma received 23 first-place votes and 1,068 of a possible 1,224 points as the choice to succeed Pittsburgh as the No. 1 team in the nation.

The Sooners, who won the national championship in 1974 and 1975, finished fifth a year ago with a 9-2-1 record in their unsuccessful bid to become the first team ever to win three crowns in a row. They easily outdistanced Michigan in the preseason balloting.

The Wolverines, 10-2 last year, received 19 first-place votes and 1,020 points. Michigan and Oklahoma were the only teams named on every ballot.

Notre Dame was third, followed by Southern California, Ohio State, Alabama, Pitt, Texas Tech, Texas A&M and Maryland.

Notre Dame received 10 first-place votes and 948 points as the top nine teams in the balloting all received at least one first-place vote.

Last season's final Top Ten consisted of Pitt, Southern Cal, Michigan, Houston, Oklahoma, Ohio State, Texas A&M, Maryland, Nebraska and Georgia.

The 1977 preseason Second Ten includes UCLA, Colorado, Penn State, Houston, Nebraska, Mississippi State, Arizona State and Florida tied for 17th, followed by Georgia and Oklahoma State.

The final 1976 Second Ten was Alabama, Notre Dame, Texas Tech, Oklahoma State, UCLA, Colorado, Rutgers, Kentucky, Iowa State and Mississippi State.

Arizona State, which slipped to a 4-7 record after finishing second to Oklahoma in the final 1975 AP poll, was the only team coming off a losing season to crack the presason Top Twenty.

Home run hitters have a big day Saturday

By The Associated Press

It was a good day for the long-ball hitters Saturday.

The Texas Rangers slammed five home runs, including two by Bump Wills, to support Bert Blyleven's six-hitter and defeat the New York Yankees 8-2 Saturday.

Two of Texas' round-trippers were consecutive inside-the-park shots. Toby Harrah lifted a fly ball to deep right field with two men on in the seventh. Yankees right fielder Lou Piniella crashed into the wall attempting to catch the ball, which bounced halfway back to the infield. Harrah circled the bases before the ball was retrieved.

Wills, who slammed a Mike Torrez delivery into the upper deck in the fourth, then belted a drive to deep center field which bounced off Mickey Rivers' glove and rolled all the way to the fence. Wills scored easily for his ninth homer of the year.

Mike Hargrove led off the game with his 13th homer and ninth in his last 17 games for Texas and Bert Campaneris swatted one leading off the fifth. Graig Nettles hit his 31st homer of the year for New York, tieing him with George Scott and Bobby Bonds for the American League lead.

The loss snapped Torrez' seven-game winning streak and was Blyleven's 12th win in 23 decisions.

Boston crept within two games of first-place New York in the AL East with a 7-5 triumph over Minnesota. Home runs by Scott, Tommy Helms, Butch Hobson and Bob Montgomery provided much of Boston's offense.

The Red Sox tied the major league record for back-to-back homers during a season with 15 as Helms and Hobson hit consecutive home runs in the third inning.

Detroit edged California 7-6 as Milt May hit a pair of home runs, his second blast providing the winning run in the eighth inning. Jason Thompson also homered for Detroit and Tony Solaita hit one out for California.

The Oakland A's defeated Toronto 9-8 as Billy North led an 18-hit, six-stolen-base assault with three hits and two steals. The A's, who collected a hit in every inning, won their fourth game in a row.

In National League day games, Cincinnati edged Philadelphia 6-5 on two-out ninth-inning home runs by Dan Driessen, an inside-the-park job, and Johnny Bench. Morgan had his 20th home run for Cincinnati while Mike Schmidt hit his 32nd and Barry Foote his third for Philadelphia.

Bob Knepper pitched a three-hitter and Jack Clark drove in three runs as San Francisco defeated Chicago 7-1.

In night action, Seattle was at Cleveland, Kansas City visited Baltimore and Milwaukee opposed Chicago in the American League and New York was at Atlanta and Montreal played Houston in the National League.

Royals' ten-game winning streak comes to an end

BALTIMORE (AP) — Andres Mora and Rich Dauer drove in two runs apiece, rallying the Baltimore Orioles to a 4-2 victory over Kansas City Saturday night, ending the Royals' 10-game winning streak.

The Orioles, who had lost five of their last six games, took a 2-1 lead in the sixth inning when Lee May singled with two outs, Doug DeCinces doubled and both came home on a single by Mora.

Dauer's two-run double in the seventh finished Jim Colborn, 14-13. The hit scored Dave Skaggs, who opened the inning with a single and moved to third on a double by Al Bumbry.

Mike Flanagan, who needed relief help in the ninth, evened his record at 10-10 while scattering 10 hits.

Kansas City scored in the fifth on singles by Fred Patek and George Brett and a double by Hal McRae. Following an intentional walk to Amos Otis, Al Cowens grounded into an inning-ending double play to halt the threat.

Before Kansas City snapped a scoreless deadlock in the fifth, each team had stranded a runner in scoring position in each of the first three innings.

John Wathan hit into a fielder's choice with two Kansas City runners aboard in the first, Frank White grounded out following Patek's double in the second and Cowens was retired in the third after McRae walked and stole second.

Colborn, who has a 3-14 record against Baltimore, retired two batters following a double by Dauer in the first and set down two more Orioles with two runners aboard in the second.

Woods predicts more stable MU

COLUMBIA, MO. (AP) — Quarterback Pete Woods, who looks like Burt Reynolds with freckles, thinks he knows exactly what happened in Missouri's zany 1976 season.

"I blame it on emotionalism," the rangy senior told Big Eight skywriters Thursday. "And I don't think anything like that is going to happen to us again."

Woods is predicting Missouri followers will see a more polished, more stable bunch than the 1976 squad that alternately skied to greatness only to stumble to humiliation.

"Maybe then people will finally forget about all that," he said with a sigh. "All winter, all summer, everywhere we go, people want us to explain what happened."

Missouri captured the intrigue of much of the nation with its stunning upsets over USC and Ohio State. But they also enraged and dismayed many of their alumni with inexplicably bad performances while losing to Illinois, IowaState and Kansas, and eventually compiling a 6-5 record.

"Last year we were a very emotional kind of team," said Woods, who played enough in place of injured Steve Pisarkiewicz to total 996 passing yards.

"Steve was a rah-rah kind of guy and so were some other players who were seniors last year. Sometimes we'd get real high about Wednesday or Thursday and then be kinda flat on Saturday. And sometimes adverse things would happen during a game and it would be like suddenly letting the air out of a balloon we would go so flat.

"I'm a different kind of leader than Steve," he said of Missouri's career passing leader, and first-round draft choice of the St. Louis Cardinals. "I'm convinced you're going to see a different Missouri team."

The Tigers have another murderous schedule, opening at home against USC and counting Arizona State and California among other non-conference foes.

"We have two goals this year," Woods announced. "Consistency and the Orange Bowl." Although the offensive line is questionable, and the defense contains a couple of potentially tender spots, Missouri seems capable of reaching those goals. And Woods will be the key operative.

If ever a young athlete rose to an occassion, it was Woods last year at Ohio State. Making his first start, he guided the Tigers to a 22-21 victory, hurling two touchdown passes and driving to a touchdown and two-point conversion in the waning moments.

In a victory over Nebraska, he teamed up with wide receiver Joe Stewart, who is also back, on a Big Eight record 98-yard touchdown pass.

All his life, Woods has been a winner. A natural athlete, he won nine games as a pitcher on Missouri's Big Eight championship baseball team last year, but decided to pass up baseball this spring to concentrate on football.

And he comes from a distinguished family. His mother, Harriett, is a Missouri state senator, and his father is a copy editor on the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Pressed on the point, Woods admits he may be a better quarterback with Pisarkiewicz out of the picture.

"It will be different, that's for sure. When Steve was on, there's no doubt he was the best player we had. But it was a little unnerving for me to be in a game and look over my shoulder and see Steve warming up on the sidelines. I'm not under as much pressure and I can concentrate on developing my skills rather than constantly fighting to prove myself."

Woods certainly proved himself to professional scouts, who list him among the nation's top quarterback prospects.

"I guess everybody who ever experienced success in college football wants to play in the NFL," he said. "And I 'm no exception. But I'll promise you this much - I am not really thinking about it. I feel there is some force guiding my destiny. Maybe it's God, or fate, or whatever, but I'm sure it's guiding me ina positive way.

"i prefer to deal in the present because I'm really pretty confident of the future anyway. You won't see me ducking out of bounds or doing anything to avoid an injury. I know it sounds corny, but I'm a team player and I'm going to do all I can to see us play in the Orange Bowl."

DIMAGGIO REMEMBERS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Joe DiMaggio, usually reticent when talking about himself, was trapped. He was asked to recall a couple of his most memorable moments during his career as center fielder for the New York Yankees, a performance which landed him in the Baseball Hall of Fame.

"I remember the time in the late 1940s when I missed the first half of the season because of a foot injury and returned to the lineup in Boston," he said. "I hit four home runs in three days at Fenway Park."

Joe also recalled one catch he made. "It was at Yankee Stadium and Hank Greenberg of Detroit hit a ball to deep center field. I ran as fast as I could with my back to the plate. I was almost to the wall, 450 feet or more from home plate, and I stuck out my glove. There was the ball. Was I surprised."

American cagers beat Soviets 87-68

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — The U.S. basketball team defeated the Soviet Union 87-68 to win the gold medal in the World University Games Saturday night, and American swimmers won four of the last five swimming events on the last day of competition.

Th Soviet Union ended the games at the top of the medals list with 30 golds, 33 silvers and 28 bronzes, while the United States was second with 19-11-13. Hungary was third with 14-10-2.

The U.S. basketball squad scored its eighth victory in eight games as Sid Moncrief of Arkansas led the scoring with 16 points.

Freeman Williams of Portland State and Larry Byrd of Indiana State scored 14 each and Calvin Natt of Northeast Louisiana scored 10.

With Steve Schalles of South Dakota State University winning the 163-pound class in freestyle wrestling, the United States finished the 10-day students' sports festival in grand style.

The U.S. women's basketball team won a silver medal. The strong Soviet squad beat the Americans 107-90 in the final.

The top performers in the U.S. swimming triumph were John Ebuna and Sue Hinderaker, who each won two gold medals on the final night.

Ebuna of the University of Tennessee won the men's 100-meter freestyle in 52.05 seconds and swam third in the quartet that edged the Russians in the men's 800-meter freestyle relay.

PUFFED-UP WORMS

What will they think of next?

The newest wrinkle in fishing is air-injected worms!

The idea started with bass fishermen who wanted to give the nightcrawler more life.

Nightcrawlers are excellent bait when fished over brush and other underwater debris, but they become water-logged very quickly and lose their attractiveness to fish.

According to information reaching Mercury outboards' fishing department, an innovative angler borrowed a medical hypodermic needle and injected air into some worms in an effort to make them more buoyant in the water.

The idea worked, and air-injected nightcrawlers are now being used to catch fish all over the country.

Anglers are applying the new method to bass, catfish, walleye, and many other species which are attracted to the puffed-up worms.

The technique calls for slipping an 8/0 hook under the "collar" (a natural band around the worm) and attaching a split shot about 15 inches above the bait.

Experiment with split shot until you find the proper amount needed to sink the worm.

A word of caution from the experts: Be careful when inflating the worm. Too much pressure and it's "pop" instead of puff!

Little River tourney field dwindling

CANALOU – In action Friday, Joliff Flight Haywood City and the Bank of Sikeston were winners in the Little River Valley Slowpitch Classic. One of the closest games of the tournament was played with Joliff getting the nod over IXL 5-4.

George Daniels pitched a solid ballgame with Danny Peet and Major Daniels hitting homers to give Haywood a 14-7 bulge over Kewanee. Daniels got the win with Palmer of Kewanee taking the loss that eliminates them from further play in the tourney.

Montogomery got an RBI single in the sixth inning that proved to be the winner in Joliff's 5-4 triumph over IXL. The game was knotted in the second, fourth, and fifth until the winning rap by Montgomery. The winner was Parker with Ron Henson absorbing the loss for IXL.

The loss put IXL into the loser's bracket where they were downed by the Bank of Sikeston.

Irwin breezing in Pinehurst event

PINEHURST, N. C. (AP) — Hale Irwin, apparently headed for a rout, slashed and chopped his way to a double bogey six on the final hole but, with a two-under-par 69, still retained an imposing five-shot lead Saturday in the third round of the $250,000 Hall of Fame Golf Classic.

Despite his troubles on the 18th — which took place moments after the national television cameras had ended their coverage for the day — Irwin still posted a 54-hole total of 196, a distant 17 strokes below par on the pine-studded, 7,007-yard No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club.

His three-round total, built on scores of 65, 62 and 69, matches the lowest of the season on the tour and put him in a commanding lead in the tournament he must win to gain a spot in next week's important World Series of Golf.

Irwin had his drive in the fairway on the 18th, but missed the green, stubbed his chip and was still short of the putting surface, in deep rough, in three. He got it on in four and two-putted for the double bogey.

Fine must rebuild at Hayti

By MIKE MARSH
Daily Standard Sports Writer

HAYTI - When a new coach enters a school system, he would to like to find the football program in good working order. Coach Larry Fine soon realized that things don't always work out that way. He is faced with the chore of rebuilding an entire program with only 17 young men.

Coach Fine comes from a coaching job in Graham, Missouri where he was a coach for both football and track for four years. His assistant in a new one also. He is Steve Marshall, who comes to Hayti via East Prairie.

Fine will "go back to basics" as he attempts to teach his young players the fundamentals of the game. Of the seventeen boys out for football, Isaiah West is the only returning starter, and he is but a junior. Only two seniors will be on hand to play this year, and none of them has much playing time under their belts.

It would seem that the deck is stacked against, but Fine has found bright spots in the club. Team hustle and desire is probably the greatest of these. "If it depends on hustle, we're winners. The kids are breaking their hearts out for me," proclaimed an appreciative Fine.

Coach Fine's fear is that someone might get hurt, and with his limited squad, one injury could make the difference between respectability and disaster. Hayti has a combined record of 2-16 over the past two years and with a little luck Fine feels that a .500 season is not out of his team's reach.

The team's strenght as a whole would have to be their quickness. The lines will average approximately 165-170 pounds with the backfield at 160. The speed that might lead them to victory is offset in part by the lack of experience and virtually no depth.

Fines feels that his offense should score due to extremely fast backs. Quarterbacks Jeff Bush and Curtis Thomas will lead the attack with halfbacks Theodore Abbott, Ricky Cannon, and fullback Napoleon Lockridge doing most of the running and pass catching.

Taiwan Little League Champs

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Pitcher Chaing Chen-jung, whose .833 batting average set a new tournament record, drove in two runs with three singles and fired a four-hitter Saturday to lead Li-Teh Little League of Taiwan to a 7-2 victory over Western Little League of El Cajon, Calif., in the championship game of the 31st annual Little League World Series.

The title was the ninth in the last 11 years for a Far East representative to the tournament.

The 5-foot-5, 143-pound Chen-jung, who batted 10-for-12 with 10 RBI in three games in the tourney, hit a two-run single in the first inning after a pair of walks and a wild pitch.

The Taiwan teams added another run on an error to take a 3-0 first-inning lead they never relinquished.

Chen-jung's hitting broke the mark of .733 set in 1973 by Chen Pai-sheng, also of Taiwan.

Backup QB worries over for Onofrio

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Coach Al Onofrio's worries about finding a backup quarterback for Pete Woods at Missouri were set to rest Saturday, thanks to strong performanmces by a trio of freshmen—Phil Bradley in particular.

Bradey threw 30 yards for one touchdown, ran 29 for another and handled the option plays impressively as the Tigers scrimmaged on Faurot Field.

"Quite a few of our young peole did well today," Onofrio said.

"Both Bradlkey and Jay Jeffrey are unusually poised for freshman quarterbacks. They both have good speed and run the option very well. Cecil Holloway was another freshman who played well at quarterback, even though he is working for the first time because of an ankle injury."

The first and third units battled each other, and the second team offense and defense squared off. Woods took the No. 1 offense 60 yards on the opening drive and set the tone for an offensive-minded workout.

"Our defense played well, but there is just no way to test it out here," Onofrio said.

"When our top defense looks like it did today it shows you that young people in our second and third-string offensive lines need a lot more work."

The Missouri ball carriers, led by Dean Leibson and Anise Davis all ran well, according to Onofrio. Leibson suffered a slightly separated shoulder.

U.S. Open tennis begins Wednesday

NEW YORK (AP) — The men have scheduled a battle royal for dominance in their game and Chris Evert, the always serene and steady empress of tennis, might totter a bit on her throne. Virginia Wade, the Wimbledon queen, will meet controversial Renee Richards.

The U.S. Open tennis championships, set at the venerable West Side Tennis Club in Forest Hills, begin Wednesday.

Bjorn Borg, the Wimbledon king of the past two years, is top-seeded even though he lost here to Jimmy Connors last year. Borg snatched the No.1 spot in men's tennis ranks last week—wresting it from Connors, who'd held it for 3½ years.

They could meet in the finals at the Open two weeks hence, if the play follows the seedings.

Miss Evert, the 22-year-old from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., bids for her third consecutive U.S. Open title. She seemed indomitable after her triumph last year over Evonne Goolagong, but has not had such a remarkable year after all.

At Wimbledon's semifinals she lost 2-6, 6-4, 1-6 to Ms. Wade, the Briton over whom Britain had nearly despaired after 16 Wimbledon tries. Miss Evert, as well as most of the other top women, have been engaged in World Team Tennis since then, and major tournaments have gone to little-known players.

The razzle-dazzle during the first round at the Open undoubtedly will fall on Ms. Wade, seeded third, when she meets Dr. Richards, the 43-year-old transsexual admitted to the tournament by court order.

Dr. Richards had been banned from all major tournaments this year and hasn't amassed much of a record. She took the U.S. Tennis Association and Women's Tennis Association to court after being required to take chromosome tests. A judge said the test was unfair and that she should be permitted to play at the Open. The USTA complied without requiring her to enter qualifying rounds.

Miss Evert will meet Sharon Walsh of Mill Valley, Calif., and second-seeded Martina Navratilova, the expatriate Czech, will play Mary Hamm of San Antonio, Tex., in the opening round.

Billlie Jean King, still on the rebound from knee surgery last year, is seeded seventh and has a bye in the first round. If all goes accrding to the seeding, Miss Evert and Ms. King would meet in the quarter-finals.

Miss Goolagong, the runnerup the last four years at the Open, returned to tennis two weeks ago after a year-long absence, during which she gave birth to her first child. The Australian, living at Hilton Head, S.C., said she would not play here, however, because motherly duty called.

Borg falls into the same quarter of the draw with eighth-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis of Kings Point, N.Y., who gave him a mighty battle in the Wimbledon semifinals. If both progress according to seeding, Borg would have to meet fourth-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina before gaining the final.

Connors, with a still-healing sprained thumb, is in the same quarter with fifth seed Manuel Orantes of Spain, who upset him here in a dramatic final in 1975. His quarter also includes ninth-seeded Eddie Dibbs and hard-hitting Roscoe Tanner, No.11.

Connors must get past No.3 seed Brian Gottfried and seventh-seeded Ilie Nastase to make it to the finals.

Connors occupies the same quarter with his Wimbledon semifinal foe, upstart John McEnroe, the 18-year-old from Douglaston, N.Y., who made a startling ascension at the British championships. If McEnroe beats Eliot Teltscher in the first round, he would still have to go through Orantes and Dibbs in his part of the quarter before getting another crack at Connors.

Meanwhile, Arthur Ashe, former U.S. Open and Wimbledon champion, said Saturday he has withdrawn from the Open.

America's leading black player, the 34-year-old star said, "I think I tried to do too much too soon. "My left heel acted up again and now I will have to postpone my tennis comeback until 1978."

He had an operation on his heel which had bothered him for years.

Armed Forces

Mark Sweatt

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark.— Airman Mark A. Sweatt, son of Mrs. Mary Sweatt of 200 E. Ninth St., Portageville, Mo., is a member of the security police squadron named best in the Air Force for 1976.

Airman Sweatt is a law enforcement specialist at Blytheville AFB, Ark., with the 97th Security Police Squadron. Th unit was nominated for the Air Force award after capturing the General Curtis E. LeMay Outstanding Security Police Unit Award, as the best squadron of its kind in the Strategic Air Command.

The 97th was recognized for its outstanding mission performance, standards of discipline, motor vehicle utilization, safe driving record, and unit training throughout the past year.

Sweatt is a 1976 graduate of Portageville High School.

George Durbin

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. -- Tech. Sgt. George M. Durbin, son of Mrs. Pearl Durbin of 605 Scott St., New Madrid, Mo., has graduated from the U.S. Air Force recruiter school at Lackland AFB, Tex.

SGT. Durbin, who will be an official Air Force recruiter at Springfield, Mo., was selected for the special school and recruiting duty as a volunteer with an outstanding military record.

The sergeant was trained in the Air Force job classification system, testing procedures and other related areas required to present Air Force career opportunities to young men and women.

Sgt. Durbin, a 1951 graduate of Lilbourn, Mo., high School, was awarded an A.S. degree in 1977 by the Community College of the Air Force. Headquartered at Lackland, the world-wide college awards associate degrees to enlisted personal for the programs combing technical education received in the Air Force with general education provided by civilian institutions.

His wife, Cheryl, is the daughter of Mrs. Erma D. Beal of 9146 Ramona Ave., St. John, Mo.

Richard Dunlap

FT. CAMPBELL, Ky. — Army Specialist Five Richard M. Dunlap, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Dunlap, Advance Route Two, recently was assigned as a field medical specialist with the 101st Airborne Division at Ft. Campbell, Ky.

The specialist entered the Army in June 1974.

He is a 1974 graduate of Bell City High School.

Chaffee gym dedicated

Fielding R. Poe, grand master of Missouri Masons, center, of Berkeley, conducts a Masonic dedication ceremony, assisted by Donald Vance, right, Chaffee Route One, president of the Chaffee R-II School Board, and Lee Dalton district deputy grand master, at the school's gymnasium, Saturday. Poe, a former superintendent at the Airport Schools in Sikeston, said the facility was dedicated to education and enlightenment and cited school systems such as Chaffee's as a major contributors toward accomplishments in the United States. Head Start to enroll at New Madrid

NEW MADRID – The New Madrid Head Start Center will begin enrolling handicapped and non-handicapped children for the 1977-78 school year on Monday and will continue the enrollment period through Friday at the Center located at the Scott Street School

Hours are from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Parents who wish to enroll their children, ages three to five should bring with them a copy of the child's birth certificate, Medicaid number, immunization record and verification of income.

The Center is encouraging the enrollment of handicapped children, who will provided with necessary services as required.

Canalou to enroll Head Start

CANALOU - Enrollment for handicapped and nonhandicapped children for the Canalou Head Start Center will be Aug. 29-Sept. 1 at the Canalou center.

Parents who wish to enroll their children between the ages of three and five for the 1977-1978 school term, should come between 8:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. and bring a copy of the child's birth certificate, his medicaid number, shot record, and verification of income and Social Security Numbers of both parents.

Senior volunteer works past 65

TRENTON, Mo. (AP) — She never finished high school, yet Mrs. Helen Barker remembers facts and details with the clarity of an accomplished scholar, even at the age of 67.

"People call me and ask for 'information, please.' They'll ask for how hot it got yesterday or how much rain we had at this time last year. They act like the radio station never run," Mrs. Barker says.

She, like thousands of persons, is retired — or so she says. Retirement to Mrs. Barker means living 514 hours a year to help others through volunteer work.

Her philosophy is simply that "For me, it is better to get up and go than to sit," in spite of the fact that she is crippled with arthritis and uses two canes to walk.

Mrs. Barker's determined attitude has led her to become of the top Retired Senior Volunteers in the state of Missouri.

Behind her lined face and three-layer glasses lurks the spirit of a woman half her age. Her words and phrases are carefully chosen to direct the listener to their meaning. But the tone of her voice is not harsh. Hearing her, one has the impression that her thoughts are free-flowing, but her concentration ratelv falters.

Born near the tiny town of Half Rock, Mo., Helen Barker has led a varied life. She and her husband, J.C. Barker, have owned a half dozen farms in rural Missouri and have also lived and worked in Des Moines, Iowa and Nashville, Tenn.

Although her work isn't paid for, her time is valuable to many. Her work with the Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) in Grundy County began with what she called "harmless" office work.

That was simple enough to master for Mrs. Barker. After all, she was already the tax collector for Tindall, Mo., had served during elections in Lincoln Township, was on the board of a rural water district, and had been secretary of various clubs and organizations.

She now works at five dirrerent volunteer sites and is on the Grundy County Council on Aging and the RSVP advisory board. Since joining RSVP in 1974, she has accumulated more than 1,000 hours of volunteer work.

Grundy County and the north-central area of Missouri has more than its share of older persons living on fixed incomes. Most are in the 65-69 age group and have problems keeping up with the runaway economy.

Helen Barker's sharp mind for business sees both sides of the elderly consumer's problem, having owned farms and a grocery store. She now serves hot meals in Grundy County's Senior Center which are priced and funded through a federal program.

Most of Mrs. Barker's volunteer work began after her husband died in 1959. J.C. Barker and Helen Schierbaum met through her sister in Des Moines.

"When my husband and I started keeping company, he was a salesman," Mrs. Barker recalls.

taken to Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff with minor injuries.

The driver of the Norden car was cited for failing to yield right-of-way.

One person received minor injuries in a one-car accident at 4:30 a.m. Saturday on Route E, one mile east of Oak Ridge in Cape Girardeau County.

The accident occurred when an eastbound car driven by Robert Elvis Dees, 23, of Cape Girardeau came around a curve, went out of control, knocked down four mailboxes, went off the left side of the road and hit a tree.

He was taken to Southeast Hospital in Cape Girardeau with minor injuries

The research group was one of those which, along with the attorney general of Maryland, successfully sought a court order blocking the use of mechanically deboned meat.

Wolfe, a physician and biochemist, told a reporter that he was reserving judgment on the report and USDA's plans to renew approval of the process until he saw what limitations the department actually had in mind to guarantee consumer safety.

"Unless the new regulations are much tighter, we're going to object to it as much as last time," he said.

Up to 1 per cent calcium was permitted in last year's deboned meat product, or one pound for each 100 pounds of meat squeezed through sieves having holes eighteen one-thousandths of an inch (0.018 inches) in diameter. But since bones are not all calcium, the actual amount of bone material permitted was more than that.

According to the panel, bone particle size in the sieved meat "presents no hazard to health" but urged that the USDA set limits on the size of the particles.

The calcium in the bone material could mean "a slight nutritional benefit" for most people, the panel said. Also, it "is not so great in amount as to pose a hazard to the health of most people except for those persons who are hyperabsorbers of calcium and likely already to be under medical supervision to limit their calcium intakes."

Adult Education Center takes on new look for fall

Photos and story

by

Jill S. Corti

By Jill Corti

Are you a veteran just home from the service and cannot find work because of lack of skill?

Are you a high school student who is not college bound and looking for a trade?

Are you a high school dropout?

Or, are you an adult, a highschool graduate looking for a way to improve yourself or to pursue something different in your day-to-day routine?

The, Vocational Technical School and Adult Education Center of the Sikeston Public School System, 200 Pine St. has the answer for you.

This year the Adult Education center is offering more than shorthand, typing, investments, electronics, basic education and trade courses. Besides these courses an adult may take a course in Christmas crafts, guitar, chess, macrame, plant care, interior decorating, defensive driving, basic drawing, cake decorating, creative writing, gourmet cooking and quilting.

The reason for the added courses, according to Doyle Brown Jr., the supervisor for the adult education program, is for the Sikeston Public Schools to better serve their community.

The Sikeston Area Vocational School, according to the school's director, Gerald Jackson, was the first area school designated in the state of Missouri.

Jackson said there were two other schools sites similarly selected at that time, but the Sikeston Area Vocational School site was the first to open.

Since opening in 1962, the school is one of 54 new serving secondary students (high school) and adults. Jackson said it is believed that the total enrollment of the Sikeston vocational school also makes it the largest one between St. Louis and Memphis on a North to South axis. The enrollment of the school is between 3,500 to 4,000 adults annualy.

Of the approximate 400 students, 500 are Comprehensive Employement Training Act, (CETA), 750 are high school students and 2,800 are adults.

The adults may be veterans or those people sent by the Missouri State Unemployement Service under the CETA Program.

The secondary or high school students are not only from Sikeston but also come from the area school districts of Charleston, Richland, Dexter, Bloomfield, Bell City, Oran, Scott Central and Kelly at Benton.

There is no boundary on the number of students served in the area, despite the other vocational schools in Poplar Bluff, Kennett and New Madrid.

Courses a secondary student, CETA person or veteran may take include, automotive diagnostic, auto mechanics, building trades, design drafting, electronics, graphic arts, machine shop, office training, power mechanics, secretarial training, welding, air conditioning and refrigeration and auto body and fender repair.

Besides serving in vocational training and basic adult education, the school also provides space for off campus classes for University of Missouri Southeast Missouri State University or other worthy causes.

The school also provides training for industry, especially expanding or new industry that is looking into the area. Some of the industries in the area that Sikeston Vocational School has helped include Triangle PWC and National Lock, both when they first came to the area and on an on going basis.

A lot of persuading, according to Jackson, on the part of Brown has taken place this year to bring the usual five to seven general interest courses up to 20. Brown, who has been in his position since July 1, has been busy contacting area people to take prime time from their evenings and families to bring the courses, such as crafts and gourmet cooking, into the center.

Several full time instructors have also been persuaded to return in the evenings to teach courses. Also among the instructors are retired service people.

According to Brown, the new courses will help to improve a person's general knowledge. If a teen-ager wishes to take one of the night courses, he must first check with his high school principal for approval.

Enrollment for the adult classes is now in progress and will remain open through Sept. 23. All courses have a minimum of 12 persons per class, unless otherwise indicated in the catalog.

For more information or for a catalog write The Adult Education Sikeston Public Schools Center, 200 Pine St., call 471-5440, or visit the "G" Building at Sikeston High School.

Most courses are Veterans Administration approved.

Gourmet cooking is tasty addition

Each week a different country from soup to dessert...

Kristin Lewis

"Gourmet is a scary word but it doesn't mean anything..... .....gourmet is one who appreciates fine foods and good cooking."

Checking it out

Kristin Lewis, of Sikeston will be teaching Gourmet Cooking one of the new courses at the Adult Education Center this fall.

In an interview with Mrs. Lewis this week she discussed plans for the course and how she became involved with the program.

"Gourmet is a scarey word, but it doesn't mean anything," Mrs. Lewis said. "The dictionary defines gourmet as one who appreciates fine food and good cooking."

Mrs. Lewis the spanish teacher for Junior and Senior high school says that this creative cooking is a hobby with her and that she was rather surprised when approached on teaching the course with "so many other good cooks in the community."

She added that the title "gourmet cooking" isn't whatshe would have liked to call the course, to her the course will be that of creative cooking or an "adventure in cooking."

The class which begins Sept. 22 will feature a different country and their food each week. Everything from soup to dessert will be tested by the class.

The first week, the class will visit Mexico. Mexico is where Mrs. Lewis spent some time while attending college. The second week will be Italian week. Greek foods will be featured during the third lesson. Mrs. Lewis was very small when she lived in Greece but recalls the foods there with fond memories of the tastes.

Fourth week will be Chinese, then French, German, and Spanish. Mrs. Lewis noted that many think that Spanish and Mexican foods are two of a kind, however, she noted that the Spanish people do not use as many of the hot spices as the people in Mexico do with their foods.

The final week will feature American foods.

The demonstrating-tasting class will meet for two hours and depending on the size of the group will depend on how much preparations the group will actually get to do.

Mrs. Lewis looks to the new courses offered by the center as being "great."

weddings

Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Ralph Cantrell

MEMPHIS— Patricia Denise Ross of Hernando, Miss. became the bride recently of Timothy Ralph Cantrell of Sikeston, Mo., at the Covenant Presbyterian Church at Memphis. The Rev. Edward Knox performed the ceremony.

The deadline for weddings is three weeks after date of wedding. Pictures will be returned if a self-addressed, stamped envelope large enough to hold a picture is supplied. Color pictures are discouraged. There is no charge for running a wedding. We are happy to publish it.

The pastor speaks

Justice

By The Rev. Dr. Arthur C. Fulbright, Th.D.

Justice was one of the four cardinal virtues of the classical tradition, along with prudence, fortitude, and temperance. In his Republic, Plato considered justice the "harmonious functioning of the constituent parts." Not only is justice a necessity in the state, it is fundamental in life.

God's justice is a rock-ribbed theme for Nathan and Elijah and their later prophetic colleagues. Justice-moral rightness-must prevail in all relationships, including one's acceptance of oneself, otherwise there is breakdown. Remove integrity-the result is ethical decay. Take away life's moral-ethical dimension, and persons become empty-headed, irresponsible, incapable of strength of character. Socrates' death, it is said, halted- the moral rot of Greece.

God's eternal rightness reminds humanity that sin cannot endure, and evil, by its very nature, will ultimately destroy itself. All aspects of life come under the scrutiny of God's everlasting justice. Ambrose of Milan insisted that justice and beneficence together become the one social virtue which binds human society together. Said Micah, "He has showed you, O man, what is good; and what does the Lord require of you but to do justice, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with your God?" (6:8)

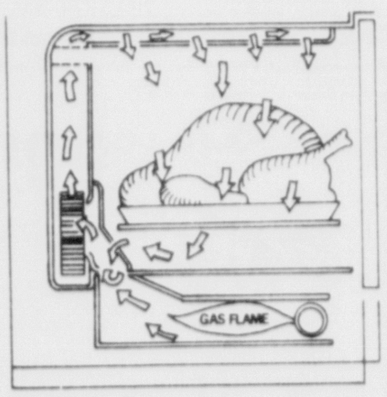
Model 30-3866

SAVES UP TO 50% ON GAS

New Convection oven cooks with forced air. Blower forces heat into foods so they start cooking immediately. Eliminates the need for fuel-wasting oven pre-heating. Because you bake and broil at lower temperatures, you save precious gas fuel.



COOKS UP TO 60% FASTER, TOO

Forced heat means foods start cooking immediately so you don't waste time or fuel pre-heating the oven. Foods cook faster and brown more evenly because a steady stream of hot air is forced into foods. Cuts some cooking times as much as 60%. Clean up is easier, too, as foods are sealed quickly to minimize spattering.

Sgt. and Mrs. David Lee Bailey

CHARLESTON – Miss Emma Jane Lankheit became the bride of Sgt. Daniel Lee Bailey in a double ring ceremony at St. Henry's Catholic Church. The Rev .Robert Landewe solemnized the vows.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Joe Lankheit, Sr. of Sikeston and the late Joe Lankheit, Sr. The groom is the son of Mrs. Lorene Jones of Charleston and Warren Bailey of Charleston.

The bride chose a gown of white qiana and re-embroidered Alencon lace. Beaded lace overlaid the front bodice and formed the high neckline, creating the old-fashioned look. The long fitted sleeves were trimmed with beaded lace, and bridal buttons closed the deep cuffs, and the back of the gown. The A-line skirt swept into an attached chapel train. An Alencon bandeau cap secured the chapel length veil, bordered in scalloped lace with face veil attached.

She carried a bouquet of red and white roses accented with baby's breath.

Mrs. David Renaud of Charleston, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Miss Jan Brockmole of Evansville, Indiana, served as maid of honor.

Don Eldridge of Bolivar served as best man and Mark Cissell of Charleston served as the groomsman.

Theresa Kieffner, niece of the bride of Southaven, Miss. and Daryl Dotson, nephew of the bride of Paducah, Ky., were flower girland ring bearer.

Darrell Taylor of Memphis and Joe Burton of Charleston seated the guests. A reception for the couple and their guests was held at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Charleston.

The couple will reside in New Bern, North Carolina, where the groom is stationed with the U.S. Marine Corps.

Out of town guests attended from Scott City, Cape Girardeau, Dexter and New Madrid. Others attending came from Mississippi, Kentucky, Tennessee and Indiana

Mr. and Mrs. David Brian Couch

A candlelight ceremony at the Murray Lane Baptist Church was the setting of the marriage of Sandra Gail McGee and David Brian Couch. The Rev. Dr. Wade Paris performed the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse McGee, 314 Kramer and the groom is the son of Mrs. Wanda L. Couch, 408 Virginia and the late Robert Couch Jr.

The bride appeared in a full length ivory gown of dacron polyester organza with a slightly raised waistline. The fitted bodice had a sheer rounded yoke edged with a ruffle of cluny and Venise lace. Motifs of Venice lace and pearls accented the front bodice of the gown and the yoke. Full bishop sleeves closed with a cuff ruffled of cluny lace and motifs of venise lace and pearls were scattered on the sleeves. The full skirt fell into a chapel length train edged in a ruffle of cluny lace and scattered motifs of venise lace. The bride wore a camelot cap covered with brussels lace and scattered with pearls. The cap secured a two tiered fingertip veil of illusion edged with the brussels lace.

A mille fleur cascade of phalaenapsis orchids, yellow and apricot sweetheart roses, baby's breath accented with a long loop of pearls was carried by the bride.

Mrs. Marsha Bishop cousin of the bride of Waynesville served as Matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Dianne Farmer of Florissant and Lisa Couch, sister of the groom of Sikeston.

Dennis Spurlock, cousin of the groom served as Best man. Groomsmen were David Horne and Donnie Sourlock both of Sikeston.

Merideth Couch, niece of the groom of Sikeston served as flower girl John Mark Gardner of Matthews served as ringbearer.

Candlelighters were Lisa Colbert and Susan Estes of Sikeston.

Guests were seated by Randy Northcutt of Sikeston and Keith Nance of Bend of the River Ky.

A reception for the couple and their guests followed at the church fellowship hall.

The bride is a 1976 graduate of Sikeston High School and attended Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau. She is presently employed at Ferguson Medical Group.

The groom is a 1974 graduate of Sikeston High School and attended Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau. He is presently employed by Malone and Hyde, Inc. of Sikeston.

Mr. and Mrs. Couch are making their home at 819 Davis Apt. 17.

Open mind

Hurtful things possess

Dear Open Mind:

..I relive, in my mind, over and over, the hurtful things of the past I have suffered at the hands of others. These old experiences possess me. I have a tendency to talk them over and go through them again as if they were still happening. Sometimes obscene things or a song rhyme will dwell in my mind and seem as a plague to me.

I live in a small town. The therapist to whom I went here couldn't seem to understand my problem. What can you suggest?

Not Old Enough To Live In The Past

Not crazy needs help

Dear Not Old:

..I regret that you have not found anyone who understands you and your problem. Understanding alone rarely remedies this condition, but it can be comforting to know that one's problem is understandable, i.e. it is not "crazy" in the sense that it separates you from the rest of us.

I believe you will find it helpful to try and understand that your obsessive thoughts have a defnite function. That is, they are not just "bad" thoughts to be gotten rid of. They are a part of you which you actively use, cling to.

What is their function? First, notice that these thoughts keep you preoccupied with past. Often people who are constantly concerned with the past are very frightened of the present and the future. Being "possessed" with the past is annoying and depressing but it may well be less frightening than one's concern with the present.

Second, notice that there is a great deal of suffering involved in your thoughts. You seem to be constantly reminding yourself that "bad" thoughts can indeed be hurtful in the hope that you will be better able to control and supress yourself.

Finally, I suspect that you are a sensitive person who is greatly impressed by guilt and pain. Hence, any such thought can effectively distract you and save you from facing what is really happening in your life right now. Unfortunately the terrible pain with which you punish yourself will not solve your problems. It will only distract you.

Dear Not Old Enough To Live In The Past:

..In a town as small as yours, very little help is available. However, you can help yourself to some extent.

1. Alter your frame of reference to a particular event. Pick one of the hurtful things of the past. Try to feel as all the persons involved did. Pretend the person or persons are sitting chairs and say something like, "Why did you....? Answer out loud, as the other person might. Go back and forth until the episode is exhausted.

2. Your mind can concentrate on only one thing at a time, so try to flood it with positive, pleasant thoughts. Do things you've always wanted to do, things you especially enjoy.

3. Do something for someone else. This could be just a call or a visit to a shut-in or active volunteerism.

4. If unwanted thoughts begin to enter your mind, do something physical. Run in place, do sit ups, get out of the house and walk.

5. Reward yourself for success. Rewards can be simple, like favorite food, a movie, etc.

Good luck. Remember, you did survive all the unpleasantness of the past. You won then, and you can win now.

Ask the pastor

Concentrate on sinners

Dear Pator Pembleton: Why don't ministers concentrate on sinners? We Christians are already saved. - Janet.

Dear Janet: It is difficult to reach sinners because of the way some Christians live. The word "Christian" means a follower of Christ. As you know, a true Christian would eat right, drink right, and live right. Do you think Jesus would smoke or drink or commit adultery? He would never be found guilty of these things! Most Christians worship with their lips, but not with their hearts.

As one good saint testified: "I've been in the way now for forty years." Too many Christians are in the way of sinners.

Dear Pastor Pembleton: I have always read your column, and have great confidence in you. I have a question. When a person is converted, how does he feel? - Pete.

Dear Pete: When a person is converted, he feels good! He doesn't hate anyone - he loves everybody. Most important, he loves God and keep His commandments. No one is converted who fails to keep God's commandments.

There comes into one's heart a peace that passeth understanding. The chief result of conversion is not feeling, but a definite transformation in the life. 1 Peter 4:2.

Dear Pastor Pembleton: How do you view the many modern discoveries by which we benefit such as improved methods of prevention and cure of disease, advances in education, and progress in aviation and mechanics? Aren't we moving toward the SUtopia so long predicted? - Larry.

Dear Larry: Agreement is not difficult on the question of man's outstanding achievement in the fields you mentioned. It is a fact, however, that man has not kept spiritual pace with his material advances. This has led to a rather awkward situation. Without spiritual safeguards, man's basest passions are without control and some of his own inventions, therefore, are not safe in his hands. In view of this, I do not share your view that man faces an era of peaceful Utopia. Read Isaiah 57:21; 24:5, 6.

Area children go to Six Flags

SCOTT CITY – On August 11,1977, the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation and the Scott City D.A.E.O.C. Office, sponsored a one-day trip to Six Flags over Mid-America.

A total of 40 children of low income families participated. Adult Supervision was provided. The children saw shows and tried all the rides.

A light breakfast of milk and donuts, donated by area merchants, was served on the way to Six Flags. The children were served lunch and supper before returning home.

The participants were from Illmo-Scott City, Commerce, Benton, Oran, Chaffee and Painton.

This summer I had the privilege of being involved in two different groups of Bootheel youth. As part of my presentation, I asked each of the participants to say what they liked about themselves. As you can guess, they stammered around and had difficulty thinking of an answer.

Why is it that so many of us have trouble recognizing and admitting our good points? We need to work on this and learn to accent our skills in order to gain self-confidence.

Do you realize how unique you are? In all the world, there is no one else exactly like yyou. You are special ... someone to respect and believe in, , someone to care about and love.

Be your own best friend. Give yourself a break. Practice liking yourself. Pay attention to your self expectations. Expect to be effective and to succeed, and you will find it actually happening. You can take total charge of your own expectations. Reward yourself when you do well or when you succeed in some way. Think of something you really like about yourself. And be kind to the friend in your mirror.

'Tomorrow in their hands'-Young Life coming to Sikeston

Take, as an example, a recent Young Life meeting at the home of a sixteen-year-old boy in Connecticut. If his parents were dumbfounded by what they saw, they could hardly be blamed. A week or so earlier the boy had asked permission to have the next Young Life club meeting at his home. His mother, knowing that these local teenagers met at different homes every week, readily agreed. Her son was new to the organization, and she had never witnessed a meeting. So she baked a cake, bought some hot dogs, and prepared soft drinks for what she assumed would be a dozen or so young people.

The shock came that evening. At seven o'clock she and her husband stood on the porch of their suburban home, open-mouthed, watching scores of teenagers arrive in cars, on bicycles, on motorbikes, on foot. There seemed to be no end to the parade.

Before long the living room was so crowded that an adult representative of Young Life—a cheerful group leader in his late twenties—suggested that everybody go out to the front lawn. By seven-thirty on this moonlit spring evening, the lawn was thronged by more than sixty youngsters, all laughing, talking, having a noisy good time.

Normally this residential street, Elm Avenue, was so silent that if a dog barked you could hear it half a mile away. With dozens of teenagers now making no effort to be quiet, many a startled neighbor came out to see what was happening. Their children walked close to investigate. A police car stopped, but the homeowner waved reassurance, and the car rolled on.

Presently a young fellow in jeans sat on a porch step, began strumming a guitar, and sixty young voices joined in a hand-clapping chorus of "He's Got the Whole World in His Hands."

That was the start. Other songs followed, contemporary spirituals mingling with popular rock. The neighbors must have enjoyed the concert they heard, for nobody complained. Perhaps they were subliminally aware of a universal truth the Young Life organization has long known: Two things usually attract young people—sports events and music. At sports events they may be divided, cheering for opposing teams. But music draws them together in a common bond of pleasure.

At about eight o'clock the singing ended. Most of the youngsters sat down on the grass, cross-legged, looking up at the leader who had taken the top porch step as a rostrum. Like the boys, he wore jeans and an open-collared sports shirt. Until now he had been merely another member of the crowd, drifting here and there, chatting with anyone who cared to talk. He had shared discussions about the local high school's baseball team, about the imminent senior prom, about the relative merits of certain male, female, and coed colleges.

Now, from the top step, he launched into a brief talk. It took scarcely ten minutes and it was based on a Biblical theme in contemporary terms. What he said could not be characterized as a sermon. It was too colloquial, an easy conversation with friends. The manner in which he stressed the wisdom of the Bible's message sounded so practical, so rational, that any other attitude toward life seemed absurd. He spoke of trust: people trusting their friends, people trusting their parents, people trusting Jesus Christ.

When the leader sat down, there was no applause. The thoughtful silence indicated a meaningful message had been communicated.

By eight-thirty the meeting ended. The young people left as they had come, in cars, on bicycles, on motorbikes, on foot, and Elm Avenue was quiet again.

Perhaps the most notable thing about this Connecticut gathering was that it was being repeated in almost a thousand places throughout the United States and in nine other countries. Similar Young Life sessions were going on, usually in homes but sometimes in school gymnasiums, in the social halls of churches, in store fronts. The Young Life organization, which has been sponsoring such meetings since 1938, now has attendance of over 75,000. Year after year, as its teenage members grow to adulthood, their places are filled by new generations. In the estimate of the association's President, William S. (Bill) Starr, during the past thirty-seven years hundreds of thousands of people have felt its influence on their lives.

A former member of Young Life, himself now the father of two teenagers, told me that one of the things he learned when he attended meetings was not to be ashamed of praying. "I've made a point of having my kids hear me pray for the things our family wanted. What it's done is make God very real to them—Someone in our home, Someone we can talk to. And I tell you that kids who learn to talk to God simply can't be bad."

Nevertheless, we live in an age when misguided youngsters seem to command most attention. As Bill Starr put it, "Newspapers crowd our minds with reports of teenage crime and prostitution and drug addiction, and of course a good deal of it is true. But does this really reflect the character of America's average young people? Not at all. Most kids want to be decent and wholesome and honest. Their problem is how. It is our job to help these youngsters discover for themselves the way to integrity and personal fulfillment. The first step in leading kids is to establish our own credibility with them."

But how? It is not always easy for an adult group leader to win the confidence of teenagers—that is, to a degree that will enable him to interest the youngsters in something that changed the leader's own life. To cope with the challenge, Young Life has a trained staff of 500 professionals, men and women. These devote full time to the organization's work. In addition there are 200 who serve part time. And most leaders hold master's degrees in theology or religious education—many of these degrees earned at the Young Life

Institute just south of Colorado Springs.

Whether they work with suburban teenagers, urban, or with problem cases, what these adults have to learn—or relearn—is how to be young. They have to develop the skill of mingling with young people as equals—at football games, in pizza parlors, at soda fountains, in jukebox haunts, everywhere. They have to learn how to listen to youthful ideas and problems and complaints; to offer counsel only when it is sought; never to pontificate; sometimes to talk in the colloquial language of teenagers; to win friendship and trust by giving friendship and trust.

Oscar Hammerstein II once wrote that a bell is never a bell till you ring it, and love is never love till you give it. An adult cannot easily say such things without the risk of being considered "square." The words sound too much like preachment. "But any time I can help my young friends to understand and utter such thoughts themselves, to one another, to make their own discoveries," one group leader said, "I get the deep-down, satisfied feeling of knowing I'm doing part of my job well."

Considering the vast number of youngsters Young Life serves, its professional staff can hardly hope to accomplish its ends without assistance. Fortunately help is plentiful. It comes from some 4,900 adult and college-age volunteers, many of them former members—"alumni"—of the organization. These volunteers help during the school year and about 3,000 of them also serve as counselors at seven widely scattered vacation camps operated by Young Life.

In the summer these camps, located in the United States and Canada, annually attract more than 15,000 youngsters for one-week stays. Weekend winter camps involve another 55,000. Rates run upward of $85 a week, but Bill Starr insists that no boy or girl is barred for financial reasons. Young Life grants hundreds of camp scholarships.

Since Young Life was founded to disseminate the teachings of Jesus, it is interesting to hear it described as nondenominational. Yet the truth is that it includes Protestants and Catholics, whites and blacks, people of all racial backgrounds. "When we talk about being for kids," Starr ended, "we mean kids everywhere. Our goal is the emergence of decent human beings by changing and enriching their hearts and minds with a knowledge and acceptance of Christ."

Much of this is achieved at the Young Life camps which, by the way, would make travel agents drool. They occupy spectacular sites for both summer and winter sports, offering everything from canoe trips to ski slopes, from mountain climbing to tobogganing, water skiing and para-sailing. The Silver Cliff and Frontier Ranches are perched high in the Rockies. Castaway Club lies among fish-filled Minnesota lakes. Malibu Club (which one travel writer has described as situated in the most beautiful spot in the world) nestles in a fjordlike inlet north of Vancouver in British Columbia. Saranac Village in the Adirondacks, Windy Gap in the Great Smokies, Woodleaf in the gold rush country of California—all these provide memorable adventures. They prompt campers to write letters of thanks for "the best week of my life"; the most gratifying add, "I have come closer, I think, to understanding and appreciating the teachings of Jesus."

Thus the camps fulfill their purpose. But also Young Life's hope, obviously, is that the experience of intimately sharing camp life will engender better understanding of one another among teenagers; and that out of such understanding will grow the compassion and love for which all religions strive.

It is odd to record that an organization of such size, of such widespread activities, originated in Texas through the efforts of one man. The minister of a suburban Dallas church was unhappy over the fact that few young people were being reached by his church. He asked his assistant, a seminary student named James Rayburn, to see what he could do about correcting the situation. Rayburn started by "building relationships," as he termed it. He resorted intuitively to the methods Young Life uses today. He frequented places where teenagers gathered. He made friends. In time he formed a club. Soon thereafter his club kids began to join him in going to church. And Rayburn's one-man campaign, with its success reported in other communities, was copied in those towns. From Texas it spread to other states. Today many of the executive heads of Young Life were among the earliest of those pioneers who formed local youth groups. They have lived with the organization from its start.

Idealistic as Young Life's objectives may be, they cost money. The organization's budget now exceeds $10 million a year. So one may ask where the money comes from. Who pays the salaries of the professional workers—salaries comparable to those of teachers at the high school and college levels?

Bill Starr answers: "We establish adult committees in communities where we have teenage groups. These volunteer committees—about 250 of them now—raise the philanthropic funds we need. About 73 percent of our money comes from individual gifts. Foundations give us another 12 percent. Churches cooperate by contributing 8 percent, and 7 percent comes from corporations."

Then Starr added, "Of course, when you grow as constantly as we are growing, you never really raise enough. Right now, for instance, we have to expand our staff so that we can reach more urban communities. In the past we've concentrated pretty much on suburban areas. The cities had their own youth organizations like the YMCA, various athletic leagues, church clubs and many more. These are good. But when we see the things that are happening in some cities we feel that the kids in many urban areas desperately need our type of alternative to gangsterism, to crime, to drug addiction. By our type I mean an intimate knowledge of the person and teachings of Christ. This confronts us with the most serious challenge we have ever known. In a campaign called 'Bridge to the Future' we're trying to raise an extra $4,850,000, a large part of it for work in urban centers."

One of the most sobering aspects of today's moral decline is that every week some 10,000 teenagers run away from home. One cannot blind oneself to anything so grim. It has caused Young Life to establish homes where runaway juveniles can find refuge. Here Young Life leaders try to discover why the youngsters left their families, to help them experience a kind of compassionate substitute family for a while and to persuade the runaways to return to their homes.

"Runaways of today," said Dr. James Oraker, Young Life's staff psychologist, "aren't that special breed of the past who left home to seek their fortune, to fulfill adolescent dreams of glory. Except for those youngsters forced out of their homes by parents who can't support them, most runaways are escaping from what they perceive to be intolerable conditions at home and at school. The break is often the culmination of accumulated grievances. Suddenly, unchartered freedom seems preferable to the security of a home. For each runaway as many as three or four youngsters with the same problems and temptations remain at home, angry but silent.

Why? What compels young people, the most prosperous of any generation, to reject their parents? Perhaps that is the wrong question. Maybe we should ask, have parents rejected their children?

Robert Mitchell, Young Life's vice-president of Operations and a veteran in its work, asserted, "We must not underestimate the basic intelligence of those so-called problem kids. Many of them have good minds. If those minds have been diverted into ugly channels, it's our job to bring them back to a wholesome attitude toward life. Our basic approach is unconditional friendship and sharing of the teachings of Jesus Christ."

Emphasis on religion can bring some strange responses. At one meeting a Chinese girl, a Christian whose forebears may have been steeped in the philosophy of Confucius, brought this thought to a group leader: "When you see a candle flame, it looks the same from second to second. Yet we know that the flame is always burning up new wax, always changing. It's never the same at one instant as it was the moment before. Isn't that so?"

Though the leader looked puzzled, he concurred.

"Well, isn't a human being like a candle flame?" the girl asked. "He may look the same from moment to moment, but we know his body is always burning up its cells, always changing, so that he's never quite the same at any instant as he was a second before. If that's the case, how can we hold a person responsible for what he did in the past? He's no longer the same person."

This—in its way a remarkable facet of a young mind— made the group leader draw a long, deep breath. "Granting everything you say," he replied, "let me remind you that God gave you things He didn't give the candle—the ability to think, a conscience, a sense of responsibility to your fellow beings, a feeling for the difference between right and wrong. He wouldn't have blessed you with such powers if He didn't expect you to use them. What's more, He gave you guideposts for living in the teachings of Jesus—another thing He didn't give the candle. Does that answer your question?"

Churches also are creating innovative programs to reach young people. One actually follows its members to their colleges. The Reverend Bill Flanagan of the First Presbyterian Church in Colorado Springs travels as far away as Spokane, Washington, to meet with young members of his congregation who are at Whitworth College, a Presbyterian-related liberal arts school. When one of these students was asked what whe liked about "Reverend Bill's" meetings, she said, "He makes me ask myself questions about what I want of college, of life in general, what's important to me and what isn't. I guess what I'm trying to say is that just thinking about religion, trying in your own way to understand the teachings of Christ, gives you a sense of values you can't find anywhere else."

"When we hear kids say things like that," Bill Starr told me, "we feel ours is the most satisfying job in the world. After all, Young Life exists for this: to help communicate the essence of Jesus and His teachings to young people. What keeps us going—and will, I am confident, for many years to come—is the evidence we see of our teenagers rallying to follow the guidance of the Bible. In their hands, I like to think, the world has a chance to be safe."

It's a mixed bag of styles in 1977-78

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) — It's bad enough when you're up against Mother Goose, but when they start throwing the rivers and mountain ranges of Afghanistan at you, well, you better be dressed for it.

Show up for school in a pair of survival pants with suspenders, just in case, and a plaid lumberjack jacket with a big down vest over it.

Or something quilted, pocketed, patched, and waterproofed with lots of industrial zippers and hardware, so you've got a fighting chance against the basic rules of grammar and how many "n's" Cincinnati has, on a good day.

Of course, it's not all that rugged. They'll give you a chance to stand up and show pictures from summer vacation, or maybe talk about your uncle who was going to run for councilman until they found this box with $100 bills and he said . . . well, maybe you should choose another topic.

Just make sure you get their attention. Look neat and clean and command their respect with a button-down shirt under a shetland sweater, and a traditional kilt, knickers, or maybe a jumper with a blazer.

Let them know you know where it's at: wear something wine colored which is de rigueur this fall, and add something neutral, like white, which is about as neutral as you can get. But keep that new sweater with the gold and silver knitted through it for a more frivolous occasion. You don't want them to start daydreaming about the price of Mallomars.

Now, if you're going to take a romance language and you think you might want to run for president of, say, Le Circle Francais, or some such linguistic afterschool group, we've got just the thing.

When you get up to explain pourquois you'd make un president excellent, see that you're wearing one of those billowing peasant skirts and a soft floral or gingham blouse. Yes, yes, you should be judged by your merits and not the fact that you're a soft, feminine young thing — but sometimes that doesn't hurt, you know.

If you're going out for cheerleading instead, that's when you'll need a pair of jeans with maybe a bomber jacket or a blouson, hooded top, because then you can leap and split and scream your lungs out, which you can't do that easily in a peasant outfit.

And don't forget to get lots of different kinds of boots and a pair of ballerina slippers for that peasant costume, and for heaven's sake, don't forget a backpack.

AUTUMN'S PRETTIEST peasants may well be members of the under-12 set, as seen in this mini-printed navy cotton dress ($20). Its border is banded with a profusion of flowers and it is laced Heidi-style over a pretend blouse in white polyester. By Wendy Bird.

Dear Ann Landers

Six-year-old sexually precocious

Dear Ann: What do I do when I see a sexually precocious boy of six embrace and rub himself up against a five-year-old girl, trying to satisfy his sexual curiosity? He was doing it in the yard where he thought no one could see him. Should I mind my own business or tell the girl's parents?

I have a 3½-year-old daughter and I would want to be told of this kind of behavior before it went any further. Please answer. -- Mother In A Dilemma

Dear Mother: Such behavior is not abnormal -- however, you should alert the little girl's mother, also the boy's. Young children of the opposite sex ought not to be left to play unsupervised for long periods of time. They should also be told not to touch each other's private parts, NOT because it's bad, but because bodies are personal property and not playthings.

Most children manage to "play doctor" and experiment (this is not normal curiosity), but they should be checked on periodically to make sure they don't become unduly preoccupied with such goings-on.

Dear Ann: Over the years I've put up with some rather inconsiderate people, but someone just left my home who made me furious. It was a cigar smoker, one of those terrible stinky ones. Now my house smells like cigars. I have an allergy headache that will last for hours. I would have kicked him out the door but he is my husband's business associate so I couldn't say a word.

How can we get it through the thick skulls of cigar smokers that they are infringing on other people's rights? Are they too gross to care, or don't they know what they are doing?

We read and hear a lot about the evils of cigaret smoking, but how can we get through to the cigar freaks? Cigars are not labeled "hazardous to your health," but they really can foul up a place and are a definite infringement on the rights of others. Please print this and comment. -- Where's A Clothespin?

Dear Pin: More and more we are seeing signs that say "No Smoking." This means cigars and pipes as well as cigarets.

I share your disgust in regard to cigars, but I'm not allergic to them. Since you ARE, your husband should ask his business associate not to smoke them in your home. Doctor's orders!

Dear Ann: Thank God "It Hurts To Hate" wrote to you. I was beginning to think I was abnormal until I read her letter and realized that there must be hundreds of us.

I am younger (50) and mother lives next door -- but she won't be able to live much longer. My brother, who lives 20 miles away, doesn't want to be bothered. He makes semi-monthly trips – and stays for one hour. (Mother hasn't been inside his home for two years.) She makes every day a living hell for me. My husband finds me in tears every time he comes home from work. I wonder how long he will put up with a depressed wife. He's a good guy who deserves better. What should I do? – Hurting

Dear H.: By the time you read this you'll know what to do. The answer for "Hurts" was provided by TWO wonderful readers.

If you didn't see it, get a copy of Wednesday, June 8th's paper.

'Do I have to use my own money'

By Erma Bombeck

My neighbor, Wanda Weird, was complaining to me the other day about her son. "That kid is going to drive me crazy," she said. "Everytime I turn around he wants to be paid for what he does. Do you know what he had the nerve to give me last Mother's Day? He gave me a chintzy little plaque made out of library paste and toothpicks that he made himself."

"I think that's rather sweet," I said.

"From a 19-year-old boy?"

I know how Wanda feels. Our son's middle name is, "Do I have to use my own money?" Some years ago, in a burst of parental insanity, we initiated the "allowance" system at our house. We thought it would be an incentive to do a good job, instill a firsthand working knowledge of how our free enterprise system works, and give him a feeling of financial independence. We didn't know then he was saving up for a down payment to buy Nevada.

What do we get for our $2 a week?

We get the table cleared whether we are still eating or not. I have had my coffee cup snatched from my mouth while my lips were still blistering.

We get a decision-maker who decides that the remains of a $6 sirloin should be tossed down the disposer while a peach seed floating in a bowl of syrup should be saved in the refrigerator.

We get a garbage hustler whose open lid policy has attracted dogs who have taken busses to get to our garbage can smorgasbord each night.

Every week, his money goes into the bank, giving life to a new adage, "It is better to receive than to give." Whether it's gum, a movie, a poster, a record, there is always the perennial, "Do I have to use my own money?"

Yesterday, we stopped in front of an ice cream parlor and I could just anticipate his next question. So I said to him, "I do not think you realize that it costs parents $147,154 to raise just one child. That includes education, health expenses, clothes, housing, food, and the potential salary of a mother who might have worked but stayed at home to raise the child. There is some sacrifice involved. Of course, we wouldn't have it any other way. But think about it. Imagine that in a liftime your father and I will have coughed up $147,154 on your behalf."

He was silent for a moment, then got out of the car and went in for the ice cream. When he returned, he handed me a cone and said, "I only got one dip each for us. I didn't think you could afford two dips each."

Chinese peanuts make big hit

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

Associated Press Food Editor

One of the most harmonious peanut recipes we've ever happened on comes from a new, privately printed Chinese cookbook called "Harmony of Flavors" by Yung-chi Chao Chen. Tasters at our house were so enthusiastic about the fascinating flavor of these peanuts that we've had to make four batches of them. Be forewarned!

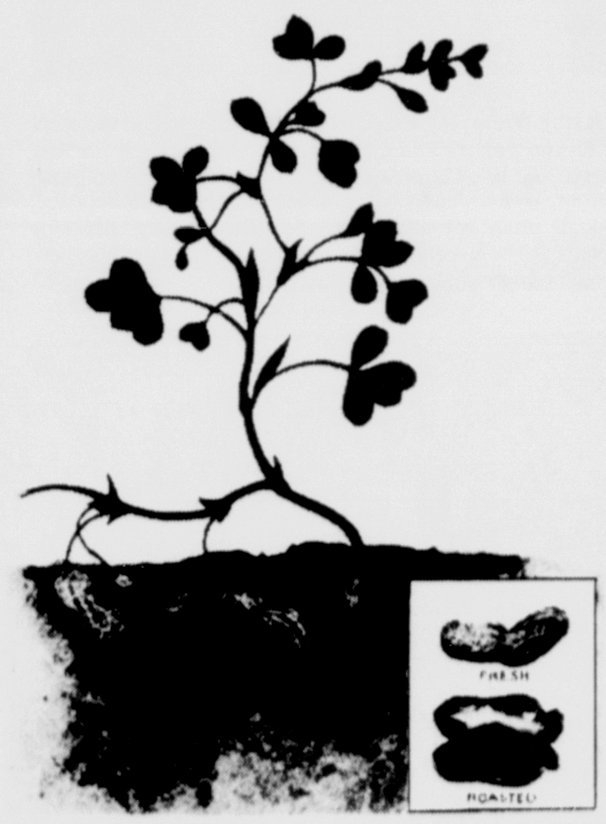
Mrs. Chen is well known for her Chinese cooking classes at the Princeton Adult School in Princeton, N.J., where she has been teaching for a dozen years. When she started the classes most of the students were women, but gradually men — university professors, university and high school food services personnel, doctors, lawyers and writers — began joining.

And there's been another change. Mrs. Chen says: "My students also display increasing sophistication. In the past they accepted without question whatever I taught them, but now they are specifically asking for regional dishes such as Szechwan Spiced Bean Curd (mapwo doufu) or Boiled Dumplings (Shwei jyau)." Consequently, "Harmony of Flavors" is not restricted to any particular region of China. Instead, it contains recipes from the major regional cuisines — dishes that are popular in all parts of China.

Most appealing is the clear way the recipes are given: after the ingredient listings, preparation and cooking directions are neatly set off.

But back to Mrs. Chen's Roasted Peanuts (Kau hwashengmi). The recipe for them appears in a welcome chapter on cold dishes — welcome because these dishes are of course prepared in advance.

A note of our own. The shelled raw peanuts called for in the following recipe are available by mail order. Judging by the mail-order bags a friend sent us — from a large supplier in Georgia and one in North Carolina — this is an excellent way to come by them.



PEANUTS—As pictured in 1911, this illustration is from the culinary print collection of AP Food Editor Cecily Brownstone.

However, shelled raw peanuts are also available in health-food stores. In our own neighborhood in New York City, we found some good ones in a small shop run by a yoga group.

MRS. CHEN'S PEANUTS

1½ to 2 pounds shelled raw peanuts with inner skins
1½ to 2 tablespoons salt
1½ to 2 tablespoons sugar
4 or 5 star anises
¾ to 1 cup water

Preparation:

1. Line a large baking tray with aluminum foil. Spread the peanuts evenly on the tray.

2. In a small saucepan, bring the water to a boil. Add salt, sugar, and star anises, cover, and simmer for 10 minutes. Pour the liquid and star anises over the peanuts and let soak for 30 minutes, or until the liquid is almost entirely soaked up.

Roasting:

1. Preheat the oven to 300 degrees. Place the tray on the center rack and roast the peanuts for 30 minutes. Reduce the oven heat to 200 degrees. Stir the peanuts and roast for 1½ to 2 hours or until the peanuts are completely dry. Check and stir the peanuts now and then with a spatula to make sure all the peanuts are evenly roasted.

2. Remove from the oven and let cool. Store in jar.

Highway use tax due Aug. 31

ST. LOUIS -- Most owners of large trucks, truck-tractors, or buses in Missouri must file a Federal highway use tax return, Form 2290, by August 31.

The tax generally applies to single unit trucks weighing 13,000 pounds or more, to truck-tractors weighing 5,500 pounds or more, to trucks of 9,000 or more pounds equipped for use in combinations, and to buses with a taxable gross weight of more that 26,000 pounds, the Internal Revenue Service said.

Revenue from the highway use tax program assists states in financing the Interstate Highway System, but the tax is imposed on those vehicles using any public highways, city streets, state roads and interstate roadways.

The tax year for the highway use tax begins July 1 and runs through the following June 30. For vehicles placed in service after July, Forms 2290 must be filed with the Kansas City Service Center by the last day of the month following the month a vehicle is used on a public highway for the first time, the IRS added.

Form 2290 and further information on the proper filing of the Federal highway use tax returns can be obtained at the St. Louis IRS District Office.

State consumers victimized by the "silent price inflator"

Missouri consumers are being victimized by a "silent price inflator," according to James L. Sullivan, State Director of Consumer Affairs.

Sullivan's statement was in reference to marked increases in consumer prices as a result of skyrocketing product liability insurance costs. Product liability insurance coverage is insurance protection that businesses and manufacturers carry to pay any lawsuits that may arise out of the use of their products.

"The problem may reach crisis proportions in Missouri and throughout the country," Sullivan said. "And most consumers are not even aware that a significant portion of the purchase price of many products is now going to cover insurance costs."

"I am particularly concerned for consumers in two areas. Large businesses and manufacturers are forced to absorb rapidly escalating insurance costs and pass them on to the buyer," Sullivan said. "Small businessmen and manufacturers often find difficulty getting product liability insurance or paying for it and, as a consequence, are forced out of business," he added.

"Either way consumers are bearing the brunt of this problem through increased product costs or in a reduction of business competition when small firms go out of business," Sullivan said.

Testimony before a Missouri Senate Committee on Product Liability, chaired by Senator Welliver, has shown as high as 5 per cent to 25 per cent of a product's cost may be related to insurance protection. Translated, as much as $2.50 of a certain $15 recreational equipment item's cost goes for product liability coverage. Another directly related to product liability insurance cost.

"I'm also concerned that some insurance companies are responding to only a few large lawsuits and consequently, are raising rates drastically in fear of additional suits." Other companies simply follow suit in a "domino effect" of raising rates, Sullivan said.

Another difficulty in reviewing insurance rates and claims is the lack of adequate statistical data to determine rate propriety, Sullivan said. The Department of Consumer Affairs, the Division of Insurance and the Senate Committee are all working together to try and establish credible statistics, he added.

"I'm sensitive to the rights of Missouri citizens to seek legal recovery when products are shown to be defective. However, court judgements have been allowed when a product was altered or misused, and this simply fuels the fires of inflationary product cost increases," Sullivan stated.

Drawing winners

Seventeen persons won prizes in a drawing held Aug. 19 in connection with the Bank of Sikeston's 90th anniversary. From left are Ed Bierschwal of Sikeston, winner of protable TV; Wanda Rafferty, of Sikeston who won an electric grill; Dedra Doyle who won a cassette tape player; Helen Stover of Sikeston who won a camera; William Stover of Sikeston, who won a cookware set; and Christy McDowell, who won an ice cream freezer. Other winners were George Watkins Jr. of Bloomfield, a calculator; R.B. Bennett of Sikeston, $20 in passbook savings; Maxine Husher of Sikeston, a calculator; Tammy Johnson of Sikeston, $20 in passbook savings; Val Sharp of Sikeston two parakeets in cage; George Johnson of Sikeston a calculator; Legretta Sipult of Sikeston, a calculator; Darlene Donner of Morehouse, $20 in pass book savings; Linda Humphrey of Sikeston, a calculator; Clarene Chaney of Sikeston, a calculator; and A.J. NEW YORK (AP) — Paramount Pictures has been preparing a long list of celebrities to star or make guest appearances in a filmed version of the hit Broadway musical comedy, "Grease."

Starring in the production are three-time Grammy Award-winner Olivia Newton-John, Broadway star Stockard Channing and John Travolta, who made his name in the television situation comedy "Welcome Back Kotter."

The film company said guest stars would include Eve Arden, Frankie Avalon, Joan Blondell, Sid Caesar, Alice Ghostley and the '50s-style rock 'n' roll group Sha Na Na.

$91 million suit against Chrysler dropped

NEW YORK (AP) — A $91 million government suit against Chrysler Corp. was dismsssed this week by a federal judge who said in effect that the government just didn't have a case.

The dismissal didn't make many headlines, but perhaps it should have, just as there were headlines when the case was filed. At that time it was said that Chrysler failed to meet clean air standards.

In the year that followed, Chrysler said it spent about $100,000 for out of pocket legal expenses, but probably lost untold millions because of diminished sales and reputation. "We were made to look like villains," said a spokesman.

The problem began last year in the production of 9,185 Plymouths and Dodges. They were accidentally equipped with an emission item that failed to meet the precise description of a similar item installed by Chrysler on a government test car.

The test car already had been certified by the Environmental Protection Agency as meeting its standards. It expected all production models to have precisely the same equipment. Chrysler, the EPA said, failed to comply.

The error was as much clerical as mechanical in the sense that the item, which cost less than $10 installed, made almost no difference in the emissions exhausted. Chrysler found and corrected the error. It told the EPA. It recalled cars.

The EPA agreed that improper device met its emission control requirements in most instances. It even certified the device to be installed on cars built in the future.

But, it said, Chrysler had violated the EPA certification program on those 9,185 cars already produced, and it was going to make a stand. Chrysler officials met with the EPA and Justice Department seeking to resolve the dispute.

"They told us to pay $1 million and sign a consent decree," said Sidney Terry, vice president for public responsibility and consumer affairs. "We said it sounded like blackmail."

The Justice Department then filed suit for $10,000 a car, not because the atmosphere was threatened, but because it felt the regulation was.

J.C. Penney reports 9 per cent increase

NEW YORK – J.C. Penney Company, Inc. reported recently a 9.0 per cent in increase in net income for the second quarter. The department store and catalog chain had net earnings of $33.7 million for th. 13 weeks ended July30 compared with $30.9 million in the same period last year. Net income per share amounted to 52 cents compared with 49 cents in 1976, when there were approximately 1.5 million fewer shares outstanding.

For the first half, JCPenney's net income was $63.6 million, or 98 cents per share, an increase of 4.6 per cent from net income of $60.8 million, or 96 cents per share in 1976.

As previously announced, second quarters sales rose 8.3 per cent to $1.992 million from $1.839 million for the same 1976 quarter. Volume for the six months increased 7.9 per cent $3,854 million.

Chairman Donald V. Seibert and Pres. Walter J. Neppl noted that gross margin improved in the second quarter over the prior year's second quarter and six month periods. Increased promotional markdown activity, designed to meet competition as well as stimulate sales activity, caused gross margin to fall, however, from the first quarter's level. The progressive increase in sales activity during the quarter provided leverage to offset somewhat the upward pressures of personnel and occupancy related costs. Interest expense increased 14.3 per cent in the second quarter.

JCPenney stores and catalog were again the principal contributors to the Company's earnings in the second quarter. Drug stores and insurance subsidiaries also continued to show improved profits. Losses from The Treasury stores were reduced from previous levels.

The Company previously indicated its intention to discontinue its supermarket operations over the next several months. The Company also sold its Italian operations in June and received a Federal income tax credit closely approximating its pretax loss on the deposition. This income tax credit lowered the Company's effective tax rate in the second quarter and the first half.

Seibert and Neppl said the stronger sales increases are expected in the second half and that current inventory levels place the Company in a good position to capitalize on new merchandise opportunities.

JCPenney enlarged store physical plant by 2.8 million gross square feet during the first half through the opening of 47 retail units. During the same period last year, store plant increaquare feet, when 31 retail units were opened.

Agribusiness puts $5.6 million into Kansas City area

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Agribusiness is a major stimulant to the Kansas City metropolitan area economy, and injected $5.6 billion into the area's economy last year, according to a report by the Midwest Research Institute.

The MRI study released Monday says agribusiness provided jobs for 94,000 workers in the seven-county area—Johnson and Wyandotte counties in Kansas and Jackson, Clay, Platte, Cass and Ray counties in Missouri.

That means one of every six persons in the metropolitan Kansas City area is employed in an agribusiness-related jobs. The agribusiness payroll amounts to $869 million annually.

The findings of the research project were disclosed Monday at a Chamber of Commerce news conference.

City officials and businessmen attending the news conference pointed to the importance of the study in boosting Kansas City as a world food center.

Bill Theis, a grain company official and vice president of the chamber's economic development division, said the study would be used as a basis for recommendations to establish a lask force for a world food conference in Kansas City in 1979 or 1980.

Theis said it would also be helpful in attempts to bring a world's fair to Kansas City in 1985, "especially if it has as its theme food and agribusiness."

Theis noted efforts are being made to persuade the U.S. Department of Agriculture to move out of Washington. "There is a push in the federal government to become more regionalized and it is possible that the Agriculture Department would have three offices and one would be in Kansas City," he said, adding that the MRI study would contribute to the effort.

The study found that farmers and agribusiness firms borrowed $700 million from the city's financial institutions last year. Farm land valued at more than $323 million was sold last year by Kansas City real estate firms and, the manufacture of agriculture-related products last year accounted for 19 per cent of the sales of all products manufactured in the Kansas City area.

The study said the metropolitan area maintained its position as a major wheat flour milling center and is an important grain storage area with its elevator capacity of 117 million bushels.

USDA to extend loan maturity dates for 1976

WASHINGTON, – The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) recently announced that all 1976-crop wheat and feed-grain loans which mature prior to Oct. 31, 1977 may be extended to Oct. 31,1977 at the option of the producer. By extending loan maturity dates, USDA will give farmers the option of continuing to hold their grain in hopes of higher market prices. There will be no allowance for storage during the extension period. (Feed grains include barley, corn, oats, rye and sorghum).

Under Commodity Loan Programs, producers borrow money from the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) offering their crops as collateral. The loans are "nonrecourse" which means that when the loan matures, producers either repay the loan plus interest in cash or forfeit the commodity to CCC. CCC loans usually mature after one year and are therefore known as "anniversary" loans.

In practice, the loan rate becomes the minimum price that a producer will receive for the crop. Since a producer generally will not redeem grain under loan if the market price is below the loan rate.

Loans give producers the opportunity to obtain cash while holding their crops for later sale and to benefit from possible price increase that often come later in the season after harvest. By holding a crop market gluts and extreme price swings nad transportation bottlenecks are minimized to a great extent by spreading commodity marketings over the entire year.

CCC loans are administered by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS). Farmers who wish to extend the maturity date of their loan should contact their County ASCS Office of the Agricultural Service Center.

Take a tax deduction on your European trip

BY CROCKETT SCOTT
"A work of art should carry its justification in every line."
....Joseph Conrad

To take a full or partial tax deduction on your trip to Europe, visit some of the snuff box collectors, and producers of fine sterline during your wanderings.

And, of course, make a purchase or two.

You just might pay for the expedition on the profits from your later sale of the goods; and you will have a lot of fun too; --- along with the educational aspects of your exposure to the whims of life in centuries past.

With the stock market so determinedly downcast, thousands of Americans are making their long term commitments these days in the personal property of their forbears on the Continent and in the British Isles.

In Munich, for instance, hordes of tourist-collectors trek to the galleries of Julius Bohler, " collector of old master paintings, scupture and works of art."

To obtain a capsule orientation of some of the finest works in Europe and the wants of noted connoisseurs there, visists to such museums as The Kunstverein of Cologne and the Galerie des Beaux Arts at Berdeaux are recommended.

A few years ago rave reports emanated from the summer exhibit from China at the Kunstverein. There were rare objects of the Shang Yin dynasty ---1500 B.C.--1027 B.C.---the period of original working of bronze.

Here were seen the spherical shapes caulerons; and ritual objects; animals adorning tablest, and vases and bottles from the era.

At the Vila Hugel in Essen a collection was shown of Japanese prints depicting life in the seventeenth century by Moronbu.

In Lyon, collectors often look upon famed tapestries at the Musee des Beaux-Arts.

Lyon is famous too for its summer opera, ballets, concerts and theater: so the cultural benefits are many for the investor, who wants to eat his cake and retain a portion of it as well.

As one moves on Paris, visits are suggested to the Palais Galleira and the Orangerie.

As in the beardreem of American brokerage houses, one very well may get a tip or two about purchaseable works of art at the Louvre.

Best place of all, considering there is no language barrier, and rich resources too---is, of course, the United Kingdom.

For sterling, visit Mappin & Webb, no.2 Queen Victoria St., E.C. 4, Lendon; Simon Kaye, Ltd., 1½ Albemarle St., Piccadilly, London,W 1; or Asprey & Co., Ltd., 165-169 New Send St., London W1.

To see the finest in upholstered furniture from 18th century France (and works of art of this period too) call upon Alexander & Berendt, Ltd., at 1 Davis St., Berkeley Square, London,W1.

Precious carpets and tapestries can be seen at Perez, 112 Brempten Rd., London S.W. 3.

Your education very probably can be boosted perceptibly too by a call at Stewen Diamond & Fine Art Co., Ltd., at 35 Brook St., Mayfair London W.1.

For a glimpse of 17th century French Louis XIV needlework a panel of grespoint and fine petitpoint, is mentioned by the travelers who have been there and seen to look in at Mayercas, Ltd., 38 Jermyn St., St., James, London., S.W.1.

In Scotland, collectors usually make a call to Bridge St., in Aberdeen; there to view the offerings of John Bell.

Quite often you see in this establishment beautiful Chippendale mahogany wing chairs, Sheraton mahogany breakfront bookcases; and Hepplewhite mahogany arm chairs; or a George III silver coffee pot with original lamp and stand.

JEFFERSON CITY — A surprised Gov. Joseph Teasdale was the recipient of a pile of baked and sanitized cow dung in which two ball point pens were mounted as a desk set. State agriculture department officials presented Teasdale with the gift July 29.

After receiving the gift, Teasdale said, "Gee thanks, that's very creative."

A card attached to the gift said, "If you can't dazzle them with brillance, baffle them with bull–."

Research key to agriculture production gains

The House and Senate recently voted final approval of the 1978 Agriculture Appropriations Bill -- the legislation providing operating funds for the Department of Agriculture and related activities. Final approval of such a bill usually is so routine that it is not even reported in the newspapers. But this was a special moment for me nonetheless, as it marked the climax of my first year as chairman of the Senate Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee. This time, it was "my" bill going down Pennsylvania Avenue for the President's signature.

For a "city boy" like myself, handling agriculture appropriations was both a challenge and an education. And the most interesting part of that education was in the area of agricultural research.

American agriculture in the 1970's is producing more food than ever before, despite the fact that each year we lose about two million acres of farmland to urbanization and development. The primary reason for our remarkable strides in food production is agricultural research. Current work with soybeans provides a good example of how this research process works.

Soybeans are a relatively new American crop. Twenty years ago, we were importing soybeans from the Orient. Since that time, however, we have found that the soybean may be the "super food" of the future. The soybean is extremely high in protein, yielding more protein-per-acre than any other crop.

Teasdale seeking cooperation between ag and government

SEDALIA -- Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale Thursday said his administration is seeking to emphasize close cooperation between agriculture and state government.

In remarks prepared for delivery at the annual Ham Breakfast at the Missouri State Fair in Sedalia, the governor said his appointment of a 36-member Agriculture Advisory Council will enable him to keep in close touch with all segments of the Missouri's agriculture community.

"These distinguished Missourians on the council have a keen insight into agriculture and will be of immense assistance to my administration in this field," Gov. Teasdale said. "Agriculture is Missouri's leading industry and with the advice of the council, I plan to maintain agriculture as the backbone of our economy."

Gove. Teasdale also said foreign trade is an important facet of Missouri agriculture. Last year, Missouri agriculture exports amounted to nearly $700 million in value.

"We must continue to improve our foreign markets to benefit our agricultural economy," the governor said. "To that end, I have instructed our Department of Agriculture to intensify and expand its efforts to promote the sale of Missouri agricultural products abroad."

The governor also praised Missouri's new livestock marketing law, which was contained in his legislative program, saying it will improve disease control in marketing facilities and protect not only the livestock producer, but also the consumer.

Gov. Teasdale also said he has instructed the Department of Agriculture to investigate methods to eradicate the black cutworm that has infested corn crops. In that connection, the governor has ordered the state to intervene in Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) hearings in an effort to help find suitbale pesticides to control the cutworm.

USDA experts farm exports to rise 5.4 per cent

WASHINGTON— The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has issued a reminder to wheat producers concerning the use of purchase agreements as a marketing option.

Under provisions of the Loan and Purchase Program, producers who hold 1976-crop wheat not under government loan are eligible to sign a purchase agreement with the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC). A purchase agreement signed now, commits CCC to buy 1976-crop wheat next March at the loan rate established in the producer's county. Under the agreement, however, the farmer may still sell the wheat on the market before the March delivery date. Should this occur, the farmer need only inform the CCC of the sale and the purchase agreement would be voided.

Purchase agreements may play a role in the formation of the Food Grain Reserve Program announced April 4 by Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland. The deadline for signing a wheat purchase agreement is Feb. 28, 1978. If a producer signs an agreement on or before Feb. 28, that producer may convert the purchase agreement to an extended loan. If the agreement is converted, the wheat could move directly into the Food Grain Reserve Program and the farmer would be paid an additional $0.20 per bushel to cover the first year's storage costs.

Farmers who wish more information on wheat purchase agreements or the Food Grain Reserve Program should contact County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) offices or Agricultural Service Center.

USDA reminds farmers of agreement

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department now expects U.S. farm exports for the year ending Sept. 30 to rise by 5.4 per cent in value from a year earlier despite a forecast decline of 6.7 per cent in volume.

That would mean 111.1 million tons of commodities shipped out, compared to almost 117.8 million a year earlier, but the products would be worth $24 billion compared to last fiscal year's $22.76 billion.

USDA also foresees a jump of one-third, from $10.5 billion to $14 billion, in the value of agricultural imports, shrinking the favorable balance of trade by 18.4 per cent to $10 billion.

While meat imports have been smaller and the increased sugar imports have been cheaper, higher prices for coffee, cocoa, tea, vegetables, fruits and nuts are responsible for the import boosts, a recent analysis said.

Negating beneficial impacts for most farmers from the record $24-billion in exports are the movements in both value and volume of wheat and feed-grains. The value was down nearly 15 per cent to $7.8 billion for the first nine months of the fiscal year and is projected at only $10 billion for the full year, an 18 per cent drop.

Wheat export volume after bumper crops is off about 24 per cent; feedgrain, about 3 per cent.

Other commodities have done well, however. Cotton exports in the first three quarters were up 56 per cent in volume and 106 per cent in value; rice, 21 per cent in volume; vegetable oils, 28 per cent; and animal fats, 37 per cent.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 641.99 million pounds of red meat in cold storage July 31 was 12 per cent below the June 30 mark and 1 per cent less than last year, the Crop Reporting Board says.

Frozen beef holdings totaled 391.1 million pounds, up 2 per cent, and frozen pork, 177.4 million, up slightly.

But supplies of butter in cold storage were more than double, while those of potatoes, cheeses, fruits and eggs also were up sharply.

International 50/60 Shredders

These shredders truly fine-shred heavy, tough cotton, corn or sorghum stalks to speed decomposition, ease your tillage, planting and cultivating work. And they actually require less power to operate because knives are spiral-mounted around the rotor so they hit your crop at different times.

- 2 sizes to make short work of big acreages ... 150 and 170 inches wide.
- Shatter-shear type knives can be reversed to match the job; blunt edge shatters stalks completely.
- Wheels easily adjust up or down for cutting height, in and out to match row spacings; endwise transport for 170-in. model.
- Safety features: full shielded drives, gear case; extended end sheets; front-mounted curtain.

Let's arrange a demonstration. Finance plans available.

A TAX DILEMMA: HOMES

The American taxpayer's favorite "loophole" - deductions for home mortgage interest and real estate taxes - is under the scrutiny of tax reformers.

A person's home is not only his castle but in most cases the only tax shelter he has. And few people seriously suggest abolishing that advantage.

But there is strong sentiment in both the White House and on Capitol Hill for at least reducing the tax advantages for home ownership.

Critics say the advantages go mostly to the affluent, because they can afford more expensive homes with higher mortagages and property taxes. Every home owner benefits, of course, but because the deductions come right off the top of one's income, they are of more value to those in the higher brackets.

Thus one reform being talked about is to change the deductions from income to a credit against income taxes. The credit would be limited to some specified ceiling which would be the same for everybody.

The trouble with this, however, is the wide variation in housing costs around the country. A tax credit that might be liberal for a home owner in a small town where homes are relatively inexpensive and property taxes low could work a hardship in a high-priced area.

Another tax provision that would be chancy to tamper with is the one that allows a person to defer the capital gains tax on the profit from the sale of his residence if he buys a new one at the same or higher cost.

This particular shelter has enabled millions of people to upgrade their standard of living and keep a jump ahead of inflation.

Making the tax advantages of home ownership more equal for people of all incomes is a worthwhile goal. There is also the question of the present system's inherent unfairness to renters, who enjoy no such advantages.

But reform in any of these areas should be approached with the utmost caution, lest a very large monkey wrench be unwittingly thrown into one of this country's most basic and vital industries.

UNEXPECTED HONOR

There are so many public buildings that having one named after you is no very great honor. And so many politicians have been indicted lately that one of them standing trial isn't so unusual.

But the story of former Rep. Edward A. Garmatz, D-Md., is something else. He's been indicted on charges of conspiring to take $15,000 from shipping concerns in return for sponsoring legislation favorable to them.

If all goes according to schedule, he'll be tried in Baltimore — in the Edward A. Garmatz Federal Courthouse. Now there is a singular honor indeed.

HUMAN RIGHTS IN VIETNAM

Human rights is the hottest phrase in Washington, the watchword so far of the Carter Administration.

The formal acknowledgement that all is far from well in human terms in Indochina came just as a presidential mission arrived in Hanoi and Vientiane to inquire into the fate of the Americans still listed as missing in action in Vietnam. Both Hanoi and Vientiane were more receptive than in the past to the U.S. envoys, setting the scene for more missions, more talks, and, Hanoi at least hopes, a resumption of diplomatic relations and perhaps, at some future date, an infusion of Yankee dollars.

The Soviet Union, which was only too ready to supply North Vietnam with arms, trucks, fuel and war supplies during the war in order to knock American out of its toehold in Southeast Asia, is not, apparently, all that ready to help rehabilitate Hanoi and take on another client state. Castro has taught Russia how expensive that can be.

But somewhere down the line there may be major hitches in the exploration of new relationships between Vietnam and the United States. How will Carter's insistence on human rig hts as a condition for foreign aid fit into the equation?

THIS, TOO, SHALL PASS

It probably won't help much, but it might be worth a try.

If you are suffering from the current heat wave—actually melting down into your shoes—why not try recalling how things were here just a few months ago. For instance, last January. Remember?

Remember when just getting out of the driveway of a morning was a major accomplishment? Remember when the mercury never climbed above 10-above all day long? Remember when snowdirfts were knee-high to a tall Indian? Remember when furnances strained as the wind blew and the snow fell, and the mercury plunged, all at the same time? Remember when schools were closed, businesses slowed and meetings were cancelled because it was too cold, or too snowy, or too slick, or too something else equally as terrible? Remember?

That was just a few months ago...a mere wink of the eye in the passing of time.

So, if you're sweltering and sweating, and suffering while you scratch the mosquito bites and wish for another glass of something cold to drink—just remember? This too shall pass.

KEEP OUT BANKS LOCALLY CONTROLLED

..The sympathies of most people in this area go the president and board of directors of the First National Bank of Mexico, who are opposing purchase of a controlling interest in the bank by Central Bancompany of Jefferson City.

They believe that in most communities where outside control has occurred, the local community has been hurt, because decision power has gone to interests that do not live in the community and are therefore not as interested as local people would be. It has happened in towns not too far from Paris and Mexico. It can happen here. In some, such shift of control has resulted in new banks being started, in which there are local stockholders only.

Many people recall that several years ago. Central Bank of Jefferson City virtually controlled the state government, dictated who or who could not be a candidate for state office, held most of the state funds on deposit without paying any interest.

They don't want control of their money by a Jefferson City of any other outside bank or banking corporation.

It is just another step under which control of our nation is being shifted to the hands of a few people.

From The Kansas City Star

Inflation and rising property taxes can be a devastating combination for older persons on fixed incomes. In some cases the burden becomes too great; they are forced to give up their homes. Missouri's "circuit breaker," started five years ago to provide a tax reduction for individuals over 65, is considered extremely helpful.

This assistance has been improved for lower income people by the 1977 Legislature. For example persons over 65 with an income of less than $2400 will get an income tax credit or repayment for all of their property taxes or 20 per cnet of their rent, up to a maximum of $500.

Supporters cite an example of how the new tables will help. Under the present law persons with an income of $5200 and tax of $410 receive a reduction of $201. The refund after the change would be $267. The rebate would increase as income diminishes.

Yet not all of those eligible took advantage of this program. To get the full benefits, those who qualify must file for the credits. A concerted state effort needs to be made to bring this positive program to the attention of all those who need it.

HOW MANY MORE ARE THERE?

The death of 42 people in a Tennessee county jail from poison fumes from burning foam rubber pads makes many people wonder just how much of that dangerous stuff there may be elsewhere in public institutions or in the upholstering in furniture in our private homes.

When installed, it was supposed to be almost fireproof. It was said to be difficult to ignite, but when it did catch fire and start smouldering the fumes were deadly.

It appears that highly dangerous materials such as those may be in general use throughout the United States, while the OSHA and the EPA, supposed to make life safer and our environment more healthy, are nit-picking around the nation and often making general nuisances of themselves in more minor and less vital matters.

THE RIGHT TO LIFE

WASHINGTON— Every time you have a "Son of Sam"-type incident, there is an outcry for some kind of national gun legislation which will hopefully prevent guns from getting into the hands of the "sickies," of which this country seems to have more than its share. Then, as soon as the publicity dies down, the matter is forgotten until the next main media event gets people excited again.

The reason you can't get Congress to pass any decent antigun legislation is that one of the strongest lobbies in Washington is the National Rifle Assn., and the weakest groups are the antigun people.

Finstermeister, who has been trying to get Congress to address itself to the problem, may have come up with a solution.

He told me, "We can't get congressmen or senators to budge on gun control because no one pays any attention to us. They think we're kooks."

"You're a voice crying in the wilderness," I admitted.

"But there is a solution. I think the gun control people should hook up with the Right to Life proponents."

"They're against abortion," I said.

"That's true. But why are they against abortion? Because they maintain you're killing someone when you remove a fetus. Since they're interested in saving the life of a person, it follows that they should work for gun control as well."

"But the National Rifle Assn. maintains that guns don't kill people–people kill people."

"That's true, but the majority of people killed were killed with guns. Now there is some question of whether or not a fetus is a person. For the sake of getting the Right to Life people on our side, I'm willing to buy 'the fetus is a person' theory if they'll buy our thesis that a person being shot by a gun is also a live human being and should have the same protection as an unborn baby."

"That's a tough one for the Right to Life lobby. Being antiabortion is one thing. But when you want them to come out against killing real people with guns, you're opening a whole new can of beans."

"It's the same can," Finstermeister insisted. "You're either for life or against it. Whether it's a doctor who takes a life performing an abortion or someone with a handgun drilling his wife or best friend, you're snuffing out someone. The Right to Life people should be able to understand that. Even HEW Secretary Joe Califano should be able to understand it."

"But if you introduce gun control into the Right to Life movement, you might have a split in the organization," I protested. "Many Right to Life people own guns."

"That's not my problem. They have to be consistent. If they're going to march on city halls, state capitals and the halls of Congress to save life, they can't ignore the gun issue. Listen, I have the greatest respect for the Right to Life movement. It is one of the most well-organized lobbies in this country, and they have a lot of clout with legislators. That's why I want them on our side.

"Right now I can only produce four pickets for an antigun bill. But if the Right to Life organization joined forces with us, I could get 10,000 in 24 hours. Those people really care. They could truly give the National Rifle Assn. a run for their money."

"It sounds good on paper," I said. "How are you going to propose the marriage of your two organizations?"

"I'm not. You are, in your column," Finstermeister said.

"Not me," I protested. "My office isn't equipped to handle the telephone calls and mail if I so much as suggested it. You're going to have to do this one on your own."

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

On to 21st CEntury?
Octogenarian George Meany launching National and Worldwide Labor offensives

WASHINGTON— You can bet your security blanket that the nation's most powerful, most feisty curmudgeon, 83-year-old labor chief George Meany, will be president of the AFL-CIO at least until 1980, the Lord permitting. It's official. His national headquarters has just announced he will run again at their December convention.

Since Meany has led the "movement" virtually since 1939, you might ask, "So what else is new?" Lots. Though he's now going on 84, this last of the century's historic political-labor colossi is leading a series of national and international campaigns which would shake up American industrialism and the United Nations just for starters.

At this moment, for example, reports from his national office disclose he's planning a worldwide transportation boycott of the J. P. Stevens company. Meany could hit the nation's second largest textile corporation hard if he could tie up the firm's intercontinental shipments. This he could accomplish with the cooperation of the London-based International Transportworkers' Federation's maritime and dockside units.

They reach all the way from New York and Britain to Hong Kong, Japan, New Zealand and Australia. Meany already has the support of Teddy Gleason's International Longshoremen's Assn. (ILA, AFL-CIO), which virtually crippled the American copper industry during an inland coordinated strike almost a decade ago.

There's been some talk of swinging the Teamsters' Brotherhood into the boycott launched by the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers' Union directed by the union's leadership team of Murray Finley and Jack Sheinkman. Frank Fitzsimmons' independent brotherhood has already endorsed labor's organizing drive against Stevens.

If such a coordinated transocean boycott strategy is launched at the AFL-CIO Executive Council sessions her next week, it will take energy-sapping direction, involved in the tracing of cargo, selection of target freighters and intercontinental communications.

At the same time Meany, his octogenarianism notwithstanding, is preparing to move quickly from his two-day possibly three-day executive council meetings to a pre-Labor Day session of the low profile, but significant and influential Labor-Management group. Early in September, he and his apparent heir and second-in-command, the 55-year-old secretary-treasurer Lane Kirkland, will confer at the Hay-Adams Hotel with their industry counterparts led by Reginald Jones, General Electric's chief executive officer.

They'll be chaired by Harvard's shuttling economic diplomat, Prof. John Dunlop. Sometimes, the subcommittee is small. Sometimes they're joined by the government's economic big five – Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, Treasury's Mike Blumenthal, Commerce's lady Juanita Kreps, presidential economic advisory council chairman Charles Schultze and the still unknown Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage-Price Stability (COWPS). (Which is investigating the steel industry on President Carter' order.)

Actually, the full Labor-Management group has eight labor and eight business leaders. But they meet quarterly in plenum. It's the small committees which re developing the economic papers for eventual aciton on inflation. When the time comes they'll sit with Jimmy Carter.

For every Carter grin there's a Meany scowl. Meany's private complaint is that the President smiles, listens pleasantly, bids his visitors adieu on schedule and then "does nothing."

There are razor-edged differences between these two presidents. For example, Meany wants to shake up the United Nations by pulling the U.S. out of the International Labor-Industry-Government (tripartite) Geneva, Switzerland-based Labor Organization (the ILO). This is the oldest United Nations affiliate. On his 83rd birthday, Aug. 16, Meany and Kirkland went over to the Labor Department for a showdown with Mr. Carter's top foreign policy expert – national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski and Secretary of State Cyrus VAnce, among others. Starting at 11 a.m., they argued for a long while. The President's foreign service people don't want to leave the ILO; they aren't taking the booing and denigration of the American delegation at the Ilo's Geneva conferences as a diplomatic affront.

But Meany hung right in there. He warned that American delegates would lose face if they stayed in after all the derision and hooting coming from the vast majority of small nations led by the distastefully anti-Semitic, anti-American, Cuban representatives.

Further, it would cost the U.S. over $40 million for the ILO's two-year budget period to support the ILO and its officials in the style to which they never were accustomed until they worked their way into the practically autonomous, self-perpetuating bureaucracy.

There's no doubt that President Carter wants to stay in. This in effect is what Vance and Brzezinski said that morning.

But it would take considerable pressure to get the official AFL-CIO and the Chamber of Commerce delegations back into the mocking ILO annual assembly. The U.S. has given its two years' notice of resignation. Unless there's some withdrawal of the resignation letter by Nov. 5, the U.S. is out of the ILO and that would shake the entire United Nations by setting a dramatic precedent.

Agree with Meany or not, whatever he's eating, drinking and smoking while goin on 84, he ought to bottle and distribute.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Gulf Pipeline May Stay Empty While Producers Sit on Gas

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON - In the Gulf of Mexico, a hundred miles off the Texas coast, a half-billion-dollar natural gas pipeline is under construction. But thanks to some dubious backstage dealings, it could be a long time before the huge conduit transports anything more combustible than air.

The Federal Power Commission (FPC), faced with the prospect of dwindling gas supplies, officially approved the pipeline project last year. Normally, pipeline builders must have contracts with natural gas producers in hand before construction can begin.

In this case, however, permission to build was granted even though the pipeline companies had no guarantees from gas producers. This, of course, has left the producers in the catbird's seat. They have simply decided to sit on their gas until prices are high enough to assure hefty profits.

The pipeline project, known as the High Island Offshore System (HIOS), is actually a conglomerate of three competing enterprises. The competition banded together and hired a potent Washington law firm – Gallagher, Conner and Boland – to argue their case before the FPC.

Christopher Boland, the principal HIOS attorney, just happens to be a close personal friend of Robert Perdue, the FPC deputy general counsel at the time. Even before the matter actually came before the commission, according to our sources, Boland was huddling in private with the then-chairman, Richard Dunham.

Dunham then ordered his general counsel to make sure the project was approved even though HIOS had no written promises from producers that gas would be provided for the pipeline.

The case was taken away from veteran FPC attorneys who were unanimously opposed to the HIOS plan. They were replaced with a staff lawyer, just one year out of law school, who recommended a go-ahead. The commission subsequently approved the project.

Meanwhile, the natural gas producers are still waiting for prices to rise before they sign contracts with HIOS. FPC sources told us there is little they can do to rectify the situation because the conduit has already been certified.

The commission, incidentally, now specifically requires prior contracts for all pipeline projects.

The pipeline companies, of course, won't lose a penny, no matter how long their titanic tube lies empty. Natural gas consumers will absorb the construction costs and the maintenance expenses, which may reach $120 million a year.

Footnote: Perdue, now the FPC's acting general counsel, told our associate Marc Smolonsky that he never discussed the project with any HIOS lawyers, including Boland. We were unable to reach Dunham; HIOS attorney Boland did not return our calls.

Bourne Again: President Carter is fervently trying to trim some of the the bureaucratic underbrush that keeps growing in Washington. But every swing of his reorganizational ax seems to be blocked by some congressional sponsor or special interest group.

For example, a confrontation is now shaping up between Carter an d House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill over the White House Office of Drug Abuse Policy.

Congress created the drug abuse office last year, but President Ford ignored the lawmakers and refused to activate it. When Carter took over, however, he opened the office and was so enthusiasitc at first that he named one of his favorite advisers, Peter Bourne, to run it.

But the White House reorganization team has now recommended that the office be abolished, the 10-member staff and most of the $1.1-million budget eliminated and Bourne demoted to a special drug aide to Carter.

O'Neill, at present, has the upper hand in the drug dispute because Congress must approve the scuttling of the office. The burly speaker has received complaints from nearly 100 congressmen, including Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Select Committee on Narcotics. O'Neill has promised to discuss the issue with the president next month.

Kim's Overkill: In the early 1970s, North Korean strongman Kim Il-sung decided that if he wanted to remain competetive with economically strong South Korea, he had to import massive amounts of machinery and equipment from the West.

In some cases, he purchased entire factories. From 1972 to 1975, say informed U.S. sources, Kim imported as much Western machinery as China which has 50 times the population. But Kim was unable to put all the technology to use. At this time, say our sources, much of the machinery Kim imported is still sitting in cartons at the factory sites.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Aug. 28th, the 240th day of 1977. There are 125 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1609, the English navigator, Henry Hudson, discovered Delaware Bay.

On this date:

In 1828, the Russian writer, Leo Tolstoy, was born in the province of Tula.

In 1833, the British Parliament banned slavery throughout the British Empire.

In 1913, the Palace of Peace — a gift of the American industrialist Andrew Carnegie — was dedicated at the Hague in Holland.

In 1916, Germany declared war on Romania.

In 1917, 10 sufragettes were arrested as they picketed the White House in Washington.

In 1963, about 200,000 people — blacks and whites — joined in a peaceful civil rights rally in Washington.

Ten years ago: There was a shakeup in the British cabinet with Prime Minister Harold Wilson taking over the reins of the Department of Economic Affairs.

Five years ago: President Richard Nixon announced he would not seek an extension of the draft law when it expired in 1973.

One year ago: Terrorists in Iran killed three American employes of Rockwell International, a United States concern doing work for the Iranian armed forces.

Today's birthdays: Actress Ingrid Bergman is 60 years old. Actor Charles Boyer is 78.

Thought for today: "A wise man changes his mind, a fool never." — a Spanish proverb.

Law allows bond issues without voter approval

By SUE A. MERKNER
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Residents of Missouri cities and counties no longer will need to approve the issuance of revenue bonds by government bodies for the construction of buildings and other industrial facilities.

Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale signed into law recently a bill which allows cities and counties to form corporations to borrow money by issuing revenue bonds without requiring approval by a majority of voters.

The law will enable cities and counties to play a more direct role in the construction of revenue-producing factories, warehouses and other industrial facilities.

Corporations may be formed by three or more persons under the new law. However, under state statutes, the corporations themselves may not operate any manufacturing, industrial or commercial enterprise or engage in corporate farming operations.

The corporations will only have the power to authorize projects and issue industrial construction revenue bonds.

The tax-free revenue bonds are paid off by the revenues the local government receives from leasing or operating the facility built with them.

The bill has been called unconstitutional by several legislators, including Rep. Robert E. Young, R-Carthage, who said the governor should have vetoed the bill because it violates several provisions of the Missouri Constitution.

According to the constitution, all corporations must be organized under general laws, but Young said this bill is a special law.

Additionally, Young said, the constitution says shareholders of the corporation should elect the directors. This bill allows the governing body of the community or municipality which authorized the corporation formation to elect the directors, he said.

"Such a provision is clearly unconstitutional," Young said, because it would allow "some outsider" to elect the corporation directors.

Young also said the new law gives local governments more power than they should be allowed because it permits them to file articles of incorporation themselves.

"Counties and municipalities are creatures of the state and they . . . have only those powers given to them by the state," he said in a constitutional objection to the bill. "This is an attempt to give power, or duty, or responsibility, or all three in excess of those allowed."

Young said the bill violates other provisions of the state constitution by denying shareholders their share of "just compensation" if the corporation folds or dissolves. The bill gives the corporation property to the local governing body upon termination, subject to the rights of creditors.

ABC's top talent scout looks like Charlie's Angel

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pam Dixon bears a faint resemblance to Kate Jackson, one of Charlie's most attractive Angels. But she's not an actress. She looks instead for people who can act.

At 29, she's ABC's top talent scout, holds vice-presidential rank. She scouts talent for shows ranging from TV flicks to series pilots, the latter being a big part of her workload these days.

Miss Dixon, who has signed such knowns as Cloris "Phyllis" Leachman and such unknowns as Rebecca Reynolds for potential series, estimates she interviews eight thespians a day for ABC.

By night, she and her five-member staff are still a-scouting in little theaters or talent showcases like the Comedy Store, Catch a Rising Star and the Improvisation here and on the East Coast.

She laughed when asked if she's ever ambushed by mendicants who leap from the bushes crying, "Alas, poor Yorick, how'd I do?"

"Yes, you do get a few of those," she allowed. "But I've never found anyone that way. I think most people who are serious about acting really do take the time to do it legitimately."

The legit way, she says, is through an agent or by simply mailing a photo, a resume and writing for an interview.

While scuffling actors may feel the sun will rise in the West before ABC guards let them plead their case to the busy Miss Dixon or her associates, she says such isn't true at her emporium.

"We've a policy that we'll see not only anyone sent by an agent, but also anyone who takes the time to send a picture and resume," she says. "We've always had that open-door policy and will continue it...

"If I find them interesting or if their background shows they've really tried, really studied, we'll let them come in and do a three-minute (acting) scene."

Now the bad news: She's never signed what she calls an "off-the-street" actor for a series pilot on the basis of said scene.

But at least it's a foot in the door, says the lady who put her own foot in TV's door in 1968, as secretary to the head of casting at CBS here. She later became CBS' casting director here.

Murder sentence clears man

FARMINGTON, Mo. (AP) —Michael Lee Dunn, 22, already serving life imprisonment in another slaying, has been sentenced to life again for a murder for which another man served a year in jail.

Dunn was sentenced Monday by Judge Stanley Murphy of the St. Francois County Circuit Court in the beating death of Mrs. Lydia Marlow, 81, of Bonne Terre, Mo., on June 21, 1976.

Dunn had previously been sentenced to a life term in an August 1976 stabbing. Police say Dunn admitted both killings.

Billy England, 19, of Bonne Terre had been held in lieu of $50,000 bond while awaiting trial in the murder of Mrs. Marlow. He was released July 1, after Dunn confessed to police.

England's attorney, John Williams, said England might have been convicted on the basis of a statement wrung out of him in questioning by the Highway Patrol two days after the killing.

"They kept telling me that they found blood on the clothes they took from me and that my fingerprints were all over the house," England said. "I said there was no way I could have been there."

England said he broke down when "they started talking about God and religion," implying he would go to hell for what he had done.

However, Wolliams said the case "didn't add up" and his firm hired a private detective and began an extensive investigation of the case.

England passed a polygraph test in June of this year and was released after witnesses came forward to testify that Dunn had killed Mrs. Marlow.

HAPPINESS is a trophy bigger than you are. The six-foot first-place trophy for the "Cajun Classic" dwarfs Kurt Clay, son of one of the team managers in the annual slow-pitch softball tournament held in Opelousas, La. Teams from seven U.S. Sunbelt states, Canada and Mexico participated in the tourney sponsored by Lou Ana Foods.

NBC Reports

"Failing to Learn-Learning to Fail"

"Failing to Learn - Learning to Fail," a one-hour "NBC Reports" special examining a problem that is gaining wide recognition as one of the reasons for delinquent behavior, will be presented Tuesday, Aug. 30 (9-10 p.m. DST), on the NBC Television Network. Announcement of the program was made today by Lester M. Crystal, Executive Vice President, NBC Television News.

Mike Gavin, producer of the special, says: "An estimated eight million school children in the United States have learning disabilities. They come from all walks of life, all ethnic groups, all geographic areas. They are youth's walking wounded, and recent studies of delinquent populations have shown up to a 90 per cent correlation between learning disabilities and delinquent behavior."

Filming in Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Denver and New York, the special will explore these questions: What are learning disabilities? Where do they come from? How do they manifest themselves? What can be done about them? NBC News correspondent Betty Rollin is the reporter on the program.

"Failing to Learn-Learning to Fail" will be co-sponsored by Textron Inc. and the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., both through J. Walter Thompson Company.

On the special, Rollin will explore through the lives of four children the disability syndrome -- how words, symbols and pictures entering healthy eyes and ears become strangely distorted, reversed or upended in the world of the learning disabled.

What is the underlying disorder? "Nobody knows for sure," says Gavin, "but medical experts have given it a name: Minimal Brain Dysfunction. It means the brain does not function 'normally.'

"The program will detail through a minute examination of the lives of these four disabled children just how this puzzling problem in the brain becomes a social problem and how it leads to anti-social, delinquent behavior. The process is called 'The Failure Syndrome.'"

The special will show how persistent failure in school leads to emotional problems, then to behavior problems and then -- all too often -- to defiance and

Final presentation of series to be shown honoring Jack Benney

After inveigling his way into performing at a benefit run by the wives of four famous Hollywood personalities, Jack Benny finds that his role is referee at a wrestling match between American heavyweight champion Count Billy Varga and California junior heavyweight champion Gene Le Bell, on "The Jack Benny Show," Tuesday, Aug. 30 (7:00- 8:30 p.m. ST) on the CBS Television Network. The show is the final presentation in the series of four rebroadcasts of television performances which demonstrate the artistry of the late master comedian.

In the episode, which was originally presented on "The Jack Benny Program" August 25, 1965, the benefit committee, composed of Mesdames Milton Berle, Kirk Douglas, Groucho Marx and Phil Silvers, fearful that Benny will want to play his violin at the event, arrange for his role as referee. Undaunted, the comedian assures them that he is an expert -- which remains to be proved.

The show, like the previous three in the special series, was written by the Emmy Award-winning team of Sam Perrin, George Balzer, Al Gordon and Hal Goldman, with Fred DeCordova as producer-director and Irving A. Fein as executive producer.

Jack Klugman stars as "Quincy" in series

Jack Klugman stars in the title role of "Quincy," an expert medical examiner whose talent for intuitively spotting miniscule medical clues is augmented by a driving determination to know the truth.

The one-hour mystery series is a blend of drama and humor that focuses on topical cases that come to the attention of the little- known practitioners of medical jurisprudence in the Los Angeles City Coroner's office.

The series has several co-stars. Garry Walberg plays Police Lt. Frank Monahan, who is not always helpful in Quincy's determined effort to unravel the mysteries of a case. John S. Ragin is Dr. Robert Astin, who walks the thin line between his administrative responsibilities and keeping his maverick assistant, Quincy, in line. Robert Ito is Quincy's hard-working lab analyst, Sam Fujiyama. Val Bisoglio plays Danny Tovo, the owner of Quincy's favorite restaurant and a devoted chum. And Joseph Roman appears in the role of Police Sgt. Brill.

Janis Joplin tells own story in music

In 1960 Janis Joplin was an outsider, one of the unpopular girls at Jefferson High in Port Arthur, Tex. A few short years later she was on the pinnacle of the popular music world, one of the most famous rock and blues singers of the era, adored by millions of fans around the world. The grueling pace of a life at the top took its toll, but at the time of her death in 1970 her fame was undiminished.

Her odyssey is told -- in her own words and music -- in "Janis," a musical documentary that will be telecast onNBC (12-1:30 a.m. DST), following the Friday, Sept. 2, presentation of "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson." (NOTE: "The Midnight Special" will be preempted on this date.)

In 1966 Joplin became the vocalist with Big Brother and the Holding Company, an association that lasted three years and made her a star. Thereafter, she performed on her own with backup groups.

This film shows Janis in performance at Woodstock (1967); in Frankfurt, Germany (on a 1969 tour); during the Festival Express Train tour of Canada in 1970; and in interviews on Swedish and British television.

In September, 1970, she returned to Port Arthur for the 10th reunion of her high school class and a large part of the town's population turned out to see the school's most famous alumna. A reporter, knowing she had not been one of the popular girls in her class, asked her if she had attended her senior class prom. "No," she replied, "nobody ever asked me."

"Janis," a 1974 Universal Pictures release, was produced by Crawley Films, and directed and edited by Howard Alk and Seaton Findlay.

550 pound bear "Ben" stars with Dan Haggerty

"The Life and Times of Grizzly Adams" is the story of a mountain man who has forsaken civilization for a life in the wilderness of the Northwest where a grizzly bear is his constant companion. The series begins its second season on NBC-TV in September.

Dan Haggerty stars in the title role as James "Grizzly" Adams, a man who in the 1880s adopted a new life in the wilderness to avoid imprisonment for a crime he did not commit.

Denver Pyle co-stars as Mad Jack, a gruff, wizened fur-trapper friend, and Don Shanks plays Adam's blood brother, Nakuma, a Crow Indian who once saved his life. Also appearing in the series is the ever-present Ben, a 550 pound bear.

Thursday Night Football??

NEW YORK (AP) — The possibility of Thursday night and, perhaps, Sunday night football appears more and more likely as the National Football League's talks with the three networks continue.

The NFL's TV contracts with NBC, CBS and ABC all run out at the close of this season. The current talks are centering on four-year contracts to cover the 1978-81 seasons. It is probable that NBC will again end up with a basic American Conference package, CBS with a National Conference package and ABC with its Monday night games.

Sources say, however, that this time around the NFL is offering a fourth package to include about a half dozen Thursday and possibly Sunday night games. And to sweeten the pot, the NFL is reportedly offering rights to the first and fourth Super Bowls in the four-year deal to whomever accepts the Thursday night package.

In other words, whichever network accepts the risks involved in televising football against prime time programming on Thursday and-or Sunday nights, and also agrees to the added expense, also gets two of the four Super Bowls currently being negotiated.

Sources say that CBS, currently running third in the ratings game, is definitely interested in the fourth package. NBC is interested in Thursday nights but wary of Sunday nights. ABC, which has the strongest prime time schedule, may be reluctant to give up some of its entertainment programming for another night of football. At the same time, however, ABC has been coveting the Super Bowl for some time, and may find the lure of getting two of them too much to resist.

NBC'S Olympic heads replaced

It may not be charitable to offer such speculation but it seems a remarkable coincidence that, at a time when NBC's contract with the Soviet Union for TV rights to the 1980 Summer Olympics is due to come under Congressional scrutiny, the network executives most reponsible for the deal have both been replaced.

Carl Lindemann Jr. left as vice president of sports a few months ago and now Bob Howard has been replaced as president of NBC+TV. Lindemann and Howard were the prime movers for NBC in the Olympic deal. If Congress should find some cause for concern in the contract and call NBC on the carpet, the network can now point out that "those responsible are no longer with us." Very convenient.

Fall TV defense shapes-up

The new fall season is fast approaching with network programmers, like quarterbacks looking over the defense, switching signals, juggling personnel and desperately looking for an opening in enemy defenses.

NBC, using the growing popularity of boxing as a weapon, scheduled a blockbuster fourfight show for Sept. 14 to run smack against ABC's special two-hour premier of "Charlie's Angels", its hit female detective show. The "Night with the Heavyweights" features top contenders Ken Norton and Jimmy Young in separate bouts.

Now comes CBS with a programming move of its own. CBS will present "Night of the Champions", another four-bout boxing show that is scheduled one night before NBC's fight card. Carlos Palomino defends his WBC world welterweight title and Danny Lopes defends his WBC world featherweight championship in the key bouts.

Sugerland Express" stars Goldie Hawn

Oscar winner Goldie Hawn (Best Supporting Actress, "Cactus Flower," 1969) stars as a desperate, problem-plagued young woman who takes on the establishment in a last-ditch attempt to keep her family together, in "The Sugarland Express," an off-beat comedy adventure on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" Sept. 3 (8-10 p.m. DST; repeat of)11-8-75).

Lou Jean Poplin (Hawn begins her crime spree by breaking her reluctant husband, Clovis, out of a minimum security pri on, although he only has four months left on a sentence for petty larceny.

Traveling in an old, slow-moving vehicle, they attract the attention of Slide, a Texas highway patrolman who attempts to have the car pull over. A chase ensues when Lou Jean wrests control of the auto and then drives it into a tree.

Unhurt, the two turn on the officer as he seeks to lend assistance, and they take command of him and his car.

After quite a bit of official confusion, the Highway Patrol discovers that one of its cars has been hijacked and an officer has been taken hostage.

Still determined to get to the town of Sugarland and rescue their imperiled son, the lawbreakers and their sympathetic but complaining hostage lead a parade of more than 200 police, newsmen and private cars across the state.

Internationally renowned fashion models double as undercover agents

Cornelia Sharpe and Jayne Kennedy portray internationally famous fashion models who lead double lives as American espionage agents in "Cover Girls," a 90-minute adventure drama which will be the "NBC Movie of the Week" Sunday, Sept. 4 (8:30-10 p.m. DST; repeat of 5-18-77) Don Galloway is featured and Vince Edwards guest-stars.

Monique Lawrence and Linda Allen, a pair of high-fashion models, combine their globe-girdling photo assignments with undercover work as United States agents. When not in front of a camera they are on the trail of Bradner, an expatriate embezzler, who is also targeted for a crime syndicate kidnapping. They are assigned by their boss, James Andrews, to foil the abduction and deliver the clever Bradner into the hands of the American authorities. But an unexpected complication arises when the refugee financier falls in love with Linda.

Failing to Learn:

delinquency. Gavin says: "First, you take a youngster of average or above-average intelligence who cannot learn in the same way as the children around him. Then, put him in a classroom where he is doomed to fall behind. He starts picking up labels from the other children -- dummy, troublemaker, weirdo.

"He starts acting out, hitting back. He makes friends of other troublemakers who can't make it in the classroom. He thinks of himself as dumb. His parents think he's lazy. His teachers call him uncooperative.

"For most such kids, it doesn't take 12 years of schooling to get the message. So they drop out -- or get kicked out of school. All too often, the children end up behaving in a way that fulfills everyone's worst expectations. Police blotters are filled with the names of many of these people. Properly diagnosed and treated at an early age, most children with learning disabilities can overcome their handicap."

The program will examine some of the ways each parent, each teacher, each interested observer might spot some of these youngsters, before too much damage is done, and will explore some of the methods, theories and techniques by which people and institutions can organize to reduce such a tragic loss in human values.

Jaime Sommers is "Bionic Woman"

Jaime Sommers was a top-seeded tennis pro -- until she was critically hurt in a parachute accident. Devastatingly injured, she was rebuilt into the world's first bionic woman by Oscar Goldman, director of the Office of Scientific Investigation, and Dr. Rudy Wells, chief of research at the OSI.

Both of her legs, her right arm and the parts of her right ear were replaced with bionic materials, giving her the ability to run 60 miles an hour, lift a ton and hear a whispered conversation from half a mile away.

Following her bionic surgery, Jaime returned to her hometown of Ojai, Calif., where she lives with the mother and stepfather of her childhood sweetheart, Col. Steve Austin, the world's first bionic man. Jaime teaches school to eighth and ninth graders at the Ventura Air Force base, but also accepts assignments from Oscar Goldman when her special bionic abilities are needed.

Lindsay Wagner, as Jaime Sommers, and Richard Anderson, as Oscar Goldman, star. Featured are Martin E. Brooks as Dr. Rudy Wells and Martha Scott and Ford Rainey as Steve Austin's mother and steptather, Helen and Jim Elgin.

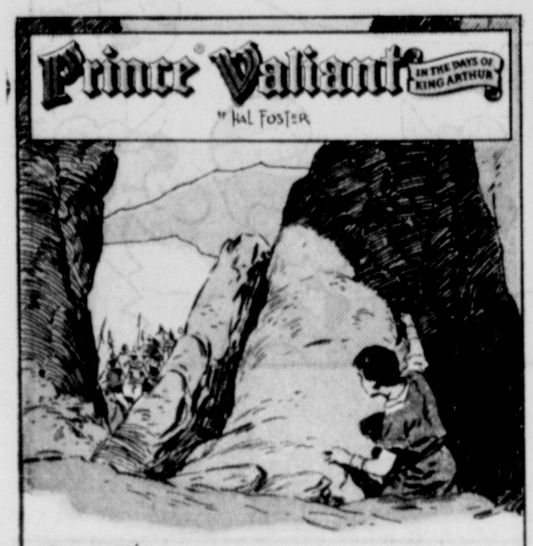
Prince Valiant® IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

by Hal Foster



Our Story: GALAN THREADS HIS WAY THROUGH THE DIM CREVASSE AND ARRIVES AT THE ENTRANCE JUST IN TIME TO SEE A MOUNTED TROOP APPROACHING. HE DRAWS BACK HOPING HE HAS NOT BEEN SEEN.

FLATTENED AGAINST THE WALL, HE TREMBLES AS THE HOOFBEATS NEAR. BUT FIRST TO PASS THE ENTRANCE IS HIS FATHER!

GALAN CANNOT UNDERSTAND HIS FATHER... HE WOULD GO OFF ON A QUEST FOR MONTHS AT A TIME AND NOT WORRY, BUT IF HIS MOTHER IS MISSING A FEW DAYS HIS FATHER IS ALMOST FRANTIC!

SO YOUNG PRINCE GALAN HAS FOUND VAL'S ARMY AND GUIDES IT SAFELY THROUGH THE SPLIT MOUNTAIN....

...AND, AT THE END OF THE PASSAGE, POINTS OUT THE CITY AND THE CANALS...

© King Features Syndicate, Inc., 1977. World rights reserved.

THEN LEADS THEM TO THE ROAD THROUGH THE IRRIGATED FIELDS TO THE CITY GATES. AFTER THAT HE TURNS THE RESPONSIBILITY OVER TO HIS SIRE.

FOR A BRIEF MOMENT VAL HAS FORGOTTEN THE EXUBERANT MANNER OF QUEEN ALETA'S GREETINGS, AND REMEMBERS TOO LATE WHEN A SCENTED BUNDLE HURLS HIM LAUGHING TO THE FLOOR.

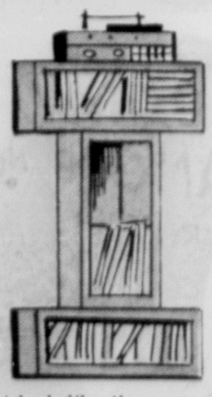
HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR FOLKS:

Know what I just saw? My friend, Bill Leahy, did something that he doesn't even know he did. Got that? Anyway, I was visiting his house and you should see how he has his turntable and FM receiver set up. It's fantastic.

Bill has three of those cubes



that look like they are made of pressed wood and sorta tan looking. Well, they really aren't cubes, they are more like rectangles, 18 inches high, maybe 12 inches wide.

He has one lying down on the floor, one centered on that, upright, and the other one lying long ways on top of that. Sitting on the top cube is the receiver and then the turntable on top of this.

You could arrange these any way you wanted. Stand two upright and one longways. Have them all lengthwise. Any height or width, space them along the wall.

Got the picture? Now for the zinger. Guess where he has all of his records? In the cubes. They fit perfectly.

It really looks nice.

I thought it was such a good idea. Maybe it's not new to you but I certainly would never have thought of it myself.

This would be a great idea for a kid's room. The cubes can be painted to match any decor and are relatively inexpensive.

It seemed like such a brilliant idea, I had to pass it on to you. Hope you can use it.

If the sun isn't shining where you are, know that I want to share our sunshine with you.

Heloise II

ALL KEYED UP!

DEAR HELOISE:

If you have problems with your keys, try my idea.

You will need a four-inch-wide by 10-inch-long board, five cup hooks, yarn, rickrack or other decorations (if you want) and hooks to hang the board.

Place the cup hooks on the board two inches apart. Then decorate the board with the yarn and other decorations.

Hang the board on the wall and you will have a handy place to keep your keys.

K. L. Buckley

A S-L-O-W BURN!

DEAR HELOISE:

I can't ever seem to get my gas stove on a real low flame without the flame blowing out or burning my food.

Trying to s-l-o-w cook those all-day black-eyed peas was impossible.

Then I borrowed a grill top from another unused burner. It lifted the pan from the flame and slowed the cooking!

The pan rests steady on this double grill, but for safety I use a back burner.

I'm a slow-cooker but not a slow-learner.

V. Shell

MY BOOKMARK

DEAR HELOISE:

For about one and one-half years now my brother, Mom and I have been wanting to send something into your column, but everything we tried Mom said she had gotten from your column!

Finally I decided to send in one of my own ideas.

I'm always losing my bookmarks. So, when reading a library book, I stick my bookmark in the card pouch at the back of the book.

This way the bookmark stays in its place when not in use but is right at hand when needed again.

Mishelle Mackle
Age 10

Mishelle, I like your idea of booking the bookmark. Thanks for writing.

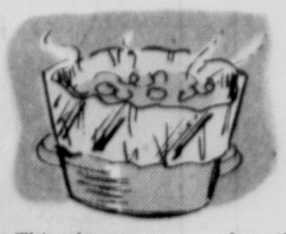
Heloise

DEEP-DISH TIP

DEAR HELOISE:

This is for women who start to make a casserole or cobbler and find that their dish isn't deep enough.

Take a piece of aluminum foil that is large enough to go completely around the top of your dish. Fold it in half lengthwise and place around the top of the dish. Fold the ends together to fasten.



This leaves room for the cobbler to rise without running over the sides.

Mrs. L. George

This feature is written for you... the housewife and homemaker. If you have a hint, problem or suggestion you'd like to share... write to Heloise today in care of this newspaper.

ON THE WING!

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's one for bird lovers!

My parents have a pet shop and, as will happen, the birds sometimes manage to escape their cage.

My mom solved the problem of catching them. It's usually easy to get within a foot or two of the birds, but using a net can damage their wings and legs.

Mother simply lays a lightweight cloth over the bird and can gently reach under the cloth and pick the bird up and replace it in the cage.

No harm done and saves a lot of time chasing the bird from place to place.

Margaret

SHARP IDEA

DEAR HELOISE:

Try squeezing a piece of lemon in a glass of diet cola. It will really give it a flavor boost.

Marcy Miccio

THE SHELL GAME

DEAR HELOISE:

When I bake a pie shell, I use two glass pie plates. One nine-inch and one eight-inch.

I place the eight-inch glass plate over the crust in the nine-inch plate and bake.

To remove the eight-inch pie plate when the shell is brown, I lift it slightly with a fork, then a hot pad.

This shell may be filled several days later if the top pie plate is left on, as the crust will stay fresh and not get soggy even in humid weather.

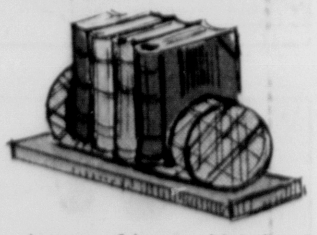
I have never had a failure in the years I have done this.

B. K.

DON'T SHELVE IT!

DEAR HELOISE:

I am only 10 years old but I read your column every Sunday — or I try to — because you see, my sister and I always fight over your column.



Anyway, I have a hint that I think is very unique. Get one of those round oatmeal containers. Glue on the lid and cover the box with adhesive-backed paper.

Then cut out a section of the container and glue the opposite side on a long board to hold it steady.

Now you can put your books in the open section and you have a homemade bookrack.

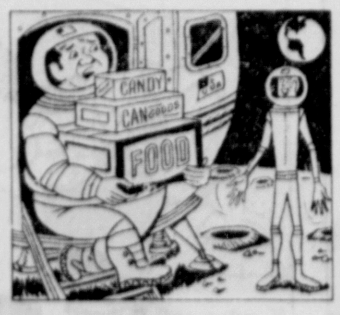
CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1 Towel rack is missing. 2 Neckline is different. 3 Handle is missing. 4 Ashtray is missing. 5 Shutttont is different. 6 Foot is repositioned.

Hal Kaufman's JUMOR WHIRL®



BULLETIN BOARD

● YOU NAME IT! My first is nothing but a name, my second still more small. My whole shows such a lack of fame, it has no name at all. What am I? P.S.: I'm a certain word.

.. ssalawel.. w.t

● Wee Three! The sum and product of these three consecutive numbers are the same. What numbers? Hint: Think small.

One, two and three

● Wits Tester! How can a person sit in a place where it's impossible for a friend to sit?

Sit in your friend's lap

● Think Tank! Question posed at the herring plant: Am I my brother's kipper? Which pickle is found in a swamp? The croca-dill.

MATH TESTER! It's possible to work this out mentally, but it's easier with pencil and paper: A surveying party of 500 on the moon carried with them provisions for 60 days. Twelve days, later, they were joined by astronauts who were landed without provisions, so both were supplied from the original stores. The provisions lasted 40 days longer, before a new supply arrived.

Question: How many men were in the second group of travelers to land on the moon? No fair peeking at answer below.

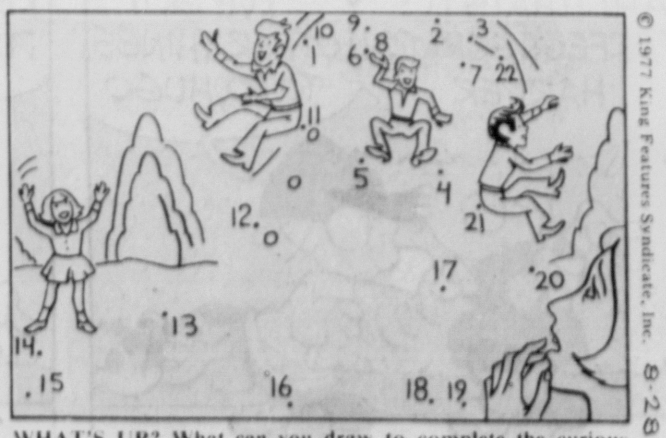
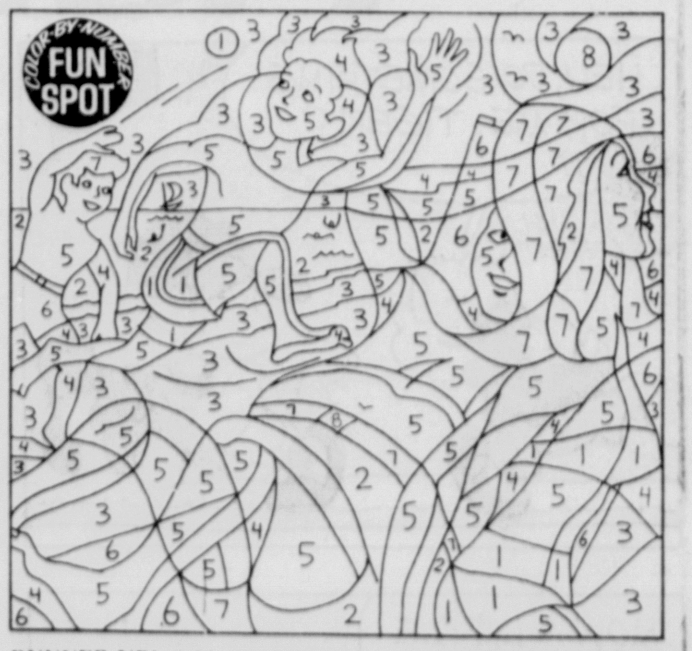
The second group numbered one hundred.



WHAT'S UP? What can you draw to complete the curious scene above? To find out, draw connecting lines dot to dot.



RUNNER UP! Add the following colors neatly for a surprise seaside scene above: 1—Red. 2—Lt. blue. 3—Yellow. 4—Lt. brown. 5—Flesh. 6—Lt. green. 7—Black. 8—Orange.

SPELLBINDER!

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

EMPHASIS

* * * * * * * * *

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

Try to score at least 50 points.

Possible anagram: Mate, chip.
